OBSERVERS RECALLED.

Not Wanted at the German Front.

United States Army Officers are Ordered to Report at Washington.

Misuse of Langhorne's Name Causes Feeling Against the Americans.

Sentiment of Unfriendly Kind Said to be Sweeping Over the Fatherland.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, April 3.—As a result of intimations from Germany that their presence was no longer desired with the army at the front all American military observers were today ordered home by Secretary of War Garrison.

The secretary declined to comment on the order further than to say that the work of the observers was completed and they were needed at their posts in this country. Notwithstanding the secretary's reticence, other officials about the State and War Departments talked unofficially about it. They said that Germany was aggrieved at the attitude taken

WRONG MAN PAID TAXES.

Wants Money Back After He Found He Didn't Own the Land.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

COLUMBUS (Ind.) April 2.—Calwin J. Remy of this city has found that he has been paying since 1876 on ground he did not own. Mr. Remy appeared before the county commissioners and said he had found that 3.23 acres in Hawcreek township, which had been deeded by him to another man, had remained in his name on the tax duplicate and without investigating he had been paying the taxes. He asked for a rebate of $68 which was the amount of taxes he said he had paid.

BLACKBERRY CROP ALL SOLD.

HIGHER PRICES WILL REIGN THIS YEAR SAY FRUIT GROWERS.

TACOMA (Wash.) April 3.—"The entire 1915 output of blackberries of the Puyallup and Summer Fruit Growers' Association has been sold at prices higher than those of 1914," said President W. H. Paulhamus, who returned today from California, where he testified before a Federal referee at San Francisco in the case of the American Can Company.

"While in Los Angeles, I closed arrangements to furnish the leading wholesale grocers of that city with entire berry requirements for the coming season. The association has now sold practically all the blackberries we expect to grow in 1915 and at a price higher than received in 1914.

"In other words, from a blackberry standpoint, we are now in the clear for the 1915 crop, and it will be a question with us to take care of the trade rather than to seek it."

COMMENT ON THE SITUATION.

Though England is apparently trying to belittle the importance of the event, dispatches from other countries, notably Italy, lead one to believe that the clash between the Servians and the Bulgarians may be fraught with significance. In other words, a new war, or a new phase of the war now on, may be developing. The battle in the Carpathians yields neither good news nor fortune for Austria and Vienna dispatches are pessimistic, if not melancholy. But the Germans are sending reinforcements.

Bryan needn't believe the newspapers if he doesn't want to. But he will soon have it from a personal delegate of the foreign colony in Mexico City that total destruction is the goal to which Mexico is drifting under the rule of bandits and fake revolutionists. The delegates arrived at El Paso yesterday. He corroborates every word The Times has printed from its special representative in Mexico, Mr. George Addison Hughes.

Editorial Note: War-news headlines are constructed, as nearly as may be in the space available, to reflect the text of the several news reports, not the editorial opinion of The Times.

SNOWBANKS AT EASTER

Atlantic Seaboard is Storm-lashed.

Departures of Many Ships Postponed; Big Steamer in Distress.

Wire Service Crippled While Interurban Traffic is Demoralized.

Fifteen Thousand Men at Work to Clean Streets in New York.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, April 3.—New York and virtually the entire Atlantic seaboard were in the grip of a miniature blizzard on this, the day before Easter. Snow, thick, wet and sticky, driven by a northeast gale which at times attained a velocity of sixty mile an hour, held up trans-Atlantic sailings, caused craft off the coast to scurry for shelter, damaged telephone and telegraph wires, delayed interurban and suburban trains and crippled transportation on the surface and elevated lines.

Tonight the flakes were falling as fast as ever, but local Weather Bureau officials believed the storm would have blown itself out before morning. The condition of the streets tonight made remote the possibility of holding the usual Easter parade on Fifth avenue tomorrow.

CENTER AT HATTERAS.

The center of the storm was reported to be off Cape Hatteras, where the steamship Prins Maurits of the Royal Dutch West Indian line was in distress and sending wireless calls for help. High tides banked up by the gale inflicted considerable damage along the New Jersey and Long Island coasts. Down New York bay and in the East and North Rivers traffic was at a standstill. In Greater New York scores of persons were injured by slipping upon the snow-covered sidewalks and streets.

Hardly a street car moved on lower Broadway for several hours this afternoon. All over town automobiles, trucks and wagons were lined up and unable to move. Fifteen thousand men were called out to aid in clearing away the snow.

Eighteen coastwise and trans-Atlantic steamships, including the big Cunard liner Lusitania, were tonight awaiting for some let-up in the storm so they might slip out to sea.

Early this morning the weather bureau said the worst was over and that sunshine might be expected at some places in the storm-swept region today.

As the blinding storm swept over the Virginia capes, forming a curtain of haze, reports were current that the German commerce raider Prinz Eitel Friedrich, tied up at Newport News for repairs, had taken advantage of the opportunity to slip out to sea and elude the enemy's ships. All wires leading out of Newport News were down. Latest advices to Washington were that the Eitel was still tied up at her pier.

The Cunard liner Lusitania, bound for Liverpool, was among the big trans-Atlantic liners held in the port of New York by the storm.

In Greater New York nine inches of snow fell, a record for April and the heaviest of the year.

Despite the storm which blanketed Philadelphia with nineteen inches of snow, the college rowing races were run yesterday afternoon, Yale winning the varsity and junior eight-oared shell events from Pennsylvania in a blizzard.

STREETS FLOODED AT NORFOLK, VA.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NORFOLK (Va.) April 3.—A northeast gale which swept up the Virginia coast early today caused serious damage here, although no loss of life has been reported. High tides inundated many of the principal streets, in which water stood three feet deep. Telephone, telegraph, railroad, ferry and street car services were put out of commission.

U. S. DOLLAR IS SUPREME.

Wall Street Replaces London as World's Financial Center.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE-EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BERLIN (via London,) April 3.—"Dollar versus sterling" is the title of an article by Prof. Dr. J. Jastrow of Berlin University, printed in the Berliner Tageblatt. In it Prof. Jastrow points to the depreciation of sterling in Wall street and to the supremacy of the American dollar in the world's money market. "Not Lombard street, London, but Wall street, New York, is today the center of the world's finance." This in substance is the keynote of the professor's article. He writes in part: "England used to be the shipper of the world and the banker of the world. She has ceased to be either. London city is awakening to the significance of the great American banking reform."

WOMAN'S AWARD IS SET ASIDE.

VERDICT AGAINST EX-HUSBAND UPSET BY COURT.

Damages Arising from Alleged Conspiracy in Incarcerating Her in an Insane Asylum at Brattleboro, Vt., not Allowed to Stand by United States Judge.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

HARTFORD (Ct.) April 3.—A decision was filed today by Judge Thomas of the United States Court, granting the motion of the defendants to set aside a verdict of $4000 awarded by a jury in the case of Mrs. Elisabeth Curtis (Branton) Holmes, against Dr. Paul Waterman and Prof. Cranston Branton, her former husband. The verdict in regard to the late Dr. O. S. Smith, another defendant, who was held not liable by the jury, was sustained.

Mrs. Holmes sued Dr. Waterman, Dr. Smith and her former husband Prof. Branton, then a professor at Trinity College, for $50,000 damages charging conspiracy in incarcerating her in an insane asylum at Brattleboro, Vt. She also charged that she was obliged under duress to write a so-called confession on which Prof. Brenton obtained a divorce, naming Frederick Ernest Holman of Rockland, Me., as co-respondent. Mrs. Branton was married to Mr. Holman the day after the decree was granted Prof. Branton.

FIFTY-SEVEN CITIZENS HELD IN CONNECTION WITH DYNAMITING OF CHURCH.

FAIRFIELD (Ill.) April 3.—Indictment against 57 residents of Sims, Ill., were returned by the Wayne county grand jury here today after a week's investigation of the dynamiting of a church and other acts of vandalism commonly attributed here to a controversy between wet and dry factions.

The grand jury experienced much difficulty in obtaining witnesses and later in inducing them to testify freely. Many witnesses expressed fear of retaliatory measures by the vandal gangs. The names of the persons indicted will not be made public until after their arrest.

Sims and several surrounding townships were voted dry several years ago. Since then secret gambling and liquor selling places have sprung into existence.

ST. LOUIS, April 3. — Fred W. Deuser, in a signed statement to the police today, confessed that he, a private detective and a third man, had been in a blackmail scheme to extort money from Peter Ibsen, Danish Consul in St. Louis. The police are investigating the operations of an alleged gang of blackmailers that is said to have extorted money from wealthy persons here. The Danish Consul told the police that $1500 was extorted from him.

Men Who Swindled Easterners by Bargain Sales, Will Now Sojourn in San Quentin.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 3.—H. Silverman and B. Pollak were sentenced to three years' imprisonment in San Quentin penitentiary by Federal Judge Maurice Dooling for using the mails in a scheme to defraud.

Using the name of a well-known San Francisco merchant, Pollak and Silverman established credit with eastern firms.

They secured in this way about $60,000 worth of clothing which it is said they disposed of at "bargain sales." The goods were not paid for.

TOTAL DESTRUCTION OF MEXICO GOAL OF THE FAKE REVOLUTIONS

Delegate of the Foreign Colony En Route to Washington to Indorse Reports of The Times Correspondent.

United States Citizens South of the Border Hope Personal Solicitation May Accomplish what the Mails and the Telegraph have Failed to Do, Namely, to Stir the Administration to a Sense of Its Duty.

THE PRAYER THAT BRYAN SUPPRESSED.

"Mexico is drifting toward total destruction, from which a mistaken altruism is powerless to save it. The present struggle does not represent the efforts of the people to secure liberty and equal rights so much as a clash of personal ambitions and revenge. Americans in Mexico look to the administration for the protection which they believe it is their due to receive and the administration's desire and unquestionable duty to afford; and they further respectfully express the hope that their views may be given such publication as may effectively assist the American people in forming a sound opinion of the Mexican situation." —From the text of a resolution adopted by the Americans in Mexico City.

EL PASO (Tex.) April 3.—A statement from the American colony at Mexico City in which it was declared that the situation was "more chaotic and helpless than ever," was brought to the border today by Arthur Bullard Johnson, another delegate representing jointly the 2000 Americans and the International Committee of the capital district, the latter composed of seventeen nationalities, aggregating more than 10,000 persons.

Mr. Johnson is on his way East to take up the matter with public men. The resolutions were drawn March 10 at a meeting attended by about 200 members of the American colony, in answer to a communication from the Washington government, suggesting that the Americans leave the republic.

NO RAILWAY EXIT.

"The last request that Americans leave the capital was sent by Mr. Bryan at a time when he must have known that there was no railroad exit," said Mr. Johnson, who is an American attorney of the Mexican capital. "My arrival here was after a trip of the utmost uncertainty. There remain about fifty American women at the capital."

The message of March 10 requested Mr. Bryan to make its text public, to which the Secretary replied that he did not consider this wise.

THE FINAL REPLY.

On March 12 the American colony sent the following final reply:

"The Americans resident in Mexico City do in mass meeting express their appreciation of the Secretary of State's message of March 12, as communicated to them by the Brazilian Minister. However, they must respectfully submit that it is their fixed opinion, deduced from the past four years' experience, that the time has come to accept the Mexican situation for what it is and not for what it might be hoped that it may become, or what interested leaders of warring factions may try to represent it to be.

"The record is clearly written in facts which show the true value of the pretensions of contending groups. They note the opinion of the President that he does not think it would contribute to their welfare to grant their request to make public their communication of March 9. They ask that it be made known to the President that it is their firm conviction that their duty requires them to take the people of the United States and of the civilized world into their fullest confidence and in the interests of humanity to lay before them the whole truth of the Mexican situation, and in the performance of this duty they earnestly invite and ardently hope for the aid and co-operation of the administration. They desire, in so far as they can, to controvert the systematic misrepresentation of the Mexican situation, to put an end to evasion and repression of the truth in regard thereto, especially as to their own situation and attitude. They are not surprised that Gen. Carranza should renew his promise 'to exert himself to the utmost to protect lives and property of foreigners,' but they submit that the true value of a promise should be estimated by what Gen. Carranza has done and decreed since his triumphal entry into the City of Mexico on August 15 last.

"The arbitrary taking from Mexicans and foreigners of property, including houses, automobiles, garages, furniture, money and crops; the issuing of decrees so in contravention of right, fairness and justice as to be almost incredible; the deliberate, persistent and ill-concealed attempt to starve a city of 500,000 inhabitants, depriving them of water, fuel and transportation; the shipping of defenseless women in locked cattle cars to Vera Cruz; the carrying away of the controllers of electric street cars, thus paralyzing transit; the closing of the courts and schools; the holding of priests for ransom; the arrest and detention of 200 business men, who had assembled at the request of the general in charge of the city; the persecution of Spaniards, suppression of mails and violation of sealed correspondence, both foreign and domes-

The Great War.

BATTLE IN THE CARPATHIANS CONTINUES DAY AND NIGHT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, April 3. 10:45 p.m.—The Germans are pouring reinforcements into Hungary to support the Austrian armies, which are being hard-pressed by the Russians in the passes of the Carpathian Mountains, and are also, according to dispatches from Holland, again sending men from Belgium to strengthen their eastern front, where the Russians have taken the offensive.

The battle in the Carpathians continues by night and day. The Russians, continually reinforced, are making desperate efforts to force Uzsok and Lupkow passes, and upon the success of these operations their army, which is on the Hungarian side of Dukla, is waiting before continuing its advance.

Seemingly the Russians have had considerable success, for the official reports announce the repulse of Austrian attacks near Mezolaborcz, due south of Lupkow pass and west of Uzsok pass, and continued progress in the region of the latter pass and west of Uzsok pass, despite the stubborn resistance of the Austrians.

On April 1, the Russians claim to have taken prisoner 100 officers and 7000 men and to have captured ten machine guns.

Austrian correspondents view this onslaught with misgiving and in their dispatches give it precedence over the battle in Bukowina, where the Austrians a few days ago took the offensive and penetrated into Bessarabia, but have since, according to Russian reports, been defeated.

There is no change in Poland, but the movement of German troops from Belgium, eastward, indicates that their general staff is uneasy over the activity of the Russians, along the East Prussian frontier and in the central portion of the old kingdom. Having fortified the whole of Belgium, and having recently opened the sluices extending the floods in Flanders, it is possible that they feel secure or do not anticipate that the allies will

SERVIANS REPULSE THE BULGARS; AUSTRIA ISOLATING MONTENEGRO

PARIS, April 3, 1:15 p.m.—Hostilities between Servian troops and Bulgarian irregulars have broken out along the border. An official statement issued at Nish, Servia, as forwarded to the Havas Agency, says that the Bulgarians overwhelmed the Servian frontier guards and occupied Servian territory. The statement follows:

"Last night at about 2 a.m. Bulgarian irregulars wearing military uniforms attacked in large numbers our outposts at Valandovo. Our frontier guards, overwhelmed by superior numbers, were forced to give ground and retreated in the direction of the railway station at Strumitza.

"At 5 a.m. the Bulgarians occupied all the heights on the left bank of the Vardar. The losses on both sides were serious.

"Wounded soldiers state that the Bulgarian bands maneuvered and fought under the direction of Bulgarian officers. The number of troops engaged was slightly more than a regiment.

"Neighboring frontier posts immediately sent reinforcements. The result of the battle is still unknown and details are lacking."

An official dispatch from Ghevgheli, Servia, to Saloniki, forwarded to the Havas Agency, confirms the statement that Bulgarian bands crossed the Servian border. They are said to have captured from the Servian frontier guards two cannon, with which they bombarded the railway station at Strumitza. Railway and telegraph communications were cut.

After heavy fighting, this message says, the Bulgarians were repulsed and fled, closely pursued by Servian troops.

LONDON HEARS OF IT.

LONDON, April 3, 2:35 p.m.—The Central News says that in the fighting along the Servo-Bulgarian frontier the casualties were insignificant. The raiders fled to Bulgarian territory after being put to rout.

An official telegram from Nish to the Servian legation here says the Bulgarian invaders captured ten Servian guns. They are said to be fighting under regular officers, and it is believed that in reality they are regular Bulgarian troops.

Servian reinforcements are arriving on the scene of battle. The fighting continues, the Servian legation is informed, and there have been considerable losses on both sides.

A later dispatch from Nish, dated April 3, says the Bulgarian irregulars scattered on the arrival of Servian reinforcements and were driven back on Bulgarian territory. They were able to take all their wounded with them.

The dispatch adds that eighty Bulgarian dead were found on the field, while the Servians had sixty dead and a great many wounded. Communication with Saloniki had been re-established. The guns taken by the Bulgarians were two old-style ones.

TO CUT OFF MONTENEGRO.

ROME, April 3 (via Paris.)—Dispatches received here from Cettinje, the capital of Montenegro, indicate that Austria-Hungary is endeavoring to cut off Montenegro from all communication with the outside world and thus starve her. The dual monarchy is described as surrounding this small state with overwhelming forces of Croats on the mountains, in addition to a garrison of 140,000 men at Cattaro, which prevents any communication with Herzegovina and the Adriatic.

Against about 100,000 Austrians, Montenegro can oppose only 15,000 men with limited artillery. Something like 70,000 people from villages in Bosnia burned by Austrian troops have taken refuge in Montenegro.

WORSE THAN BELGIUM IS MEXICO'S PLIGHT.

Four Years of Internecine War Has Wiped Out Nation's Agricultural Life.

Effects of the Vicious and Wanton Destruction of the Crops and Other Property Just Beginning to be Felt. Pen Picture of a Pathetic Situation Made Public by the Committee of Foreign Residents.

MEXICO CITY, March 25 (by courier to El Paso.)—A report predicting that Mexico faces a serious situation respecting her food supplies has been made by a committee of Americans and other foreigners who have been investigating the situation. The report in part is as follows:

"Four years of almost continuous fighting throughout the various parts of the republic has produced a condition of affairs in the food supply situation so serious as to threaten a famine of such proportions as to necessitate world-wide aid. The fact that farm hands everywhere have been thrown into so-called armies; that farm animals have been utilized for like purposes; that leaders of roving bands marching under banners containing fantastic legends about liberty and the rights of man which they use as a blind to facilitate robbery, pillage and murder, have so reduced the crop acreage that by November, 1915, there will be a shortage of 39,370,000 bushels of corn alone, not to mention the other absolutely necessary cereals, are now well known to those investigating, who have made a careful study of this phase of Mexico's ills.

"That the effects of this wanton destruction are only just beginning to be felt is due to the great productive riches of Mexico's agricultural regions where 'tis said the farmer has but to scratch the soil and drop his seed, while God and sunshine do the rest. But self-seeking and self-appointed military leaders have for so long a time prevented the farmer from even scratching the soil over so great an acreage that Mexico is about to reap a whirlwind she has sown. Corn is the staff of life in Mexico, as is wheat or its products in other countries. The harvest of this cereal for the present should begin about the first of November, that is eight months from the writing of this report. Upon investigation we find that but five states of Mexico's twenty-seven have a sufficient supply to carry them over this period.

"Oaxaca, Morelos, Campeche, Tabasco and Chiapas probably have enough corn to last them eight months if the strictest economy is employed in using that staple. This will take care of a populace of 1,700,000. Yucatan, with a population of 350,000, produces no corn, but has the money to buy it in the United States. This leaves the rest of Mexico, with a population of approximately 13,500,000, with a visible supply of approximately 675,000 tons, enough to last but three months. About next July, then, the real pinch of hunger will be felt throughout the length and breadth of Mexico.

"What, then, will be necessary to relieve the consequent distress and prevent, perhaps, the death of thousands from starvation? In normal times it requires 1,800,000 tons of corn to feed the 13,500,000 over a period of eight months. With the visible supply but 675,000 tons, this leaves a shortage of 1,125,000 tons, or 39,375,000 bushels. This corn must be purchased from the United States. The present market price laid down at points along the northern frontier is 90 cents gold a bushel. If we allow 10 cents gold for distribution cost throughout the various parts of the republic, we have a charge of $1.05 gold a bushel, which will necessitate the expenditure of $41,343,750 gold to prevent a devastating famine. By that time purchasing power of the Mexican peso will have dropped to 10 cents gold, so, due to the unconscionable, ignorant and selfish attitude of the military elements of all factions, Mexico will find herself called upon to expend 413,437,500 pesos to prevent the larger part of her population from starving to death.

"Where is this money to come from? With a bottom price, scraped treasury and a white-bled country, Mexico must throw herself upon the charity of the world.

"Not only have they taken away the man and the farm animal from the land and thus produced these dire results but many instances have been reported where the different military commanders have actually permitted the horses and mules to feed on the young and growing corn in such sections where it may have been planted, while droughts in the north and east have completed the work of ruin inaugurated by these men. Stored grain has also been burned in considerable quantities by the vandals and the records show that in the face of all this some selfish military leaders have actually exported grain to enrich themselves. Due to the paralysis of the means of communication throughout a larger part of the republic, such stores of corn and grain as were raised and saved could not be transported from the regions of production to those of consumption, causing a waste of the too small stock on hand.

"That these conditions are the direct result of the wanton and selfish attitude of the military leaders of different factions who claim to be fighting for the liberties of the people has been made most plain of late by the conduct of Gen. Alvaro Obregon, acting under the directions of Gen. Venustiano Carranza. Gen. Obregon entered the city of Mexico January 29, last. On the following day the water supply of the city was cut. The price of foodstuffs, already very high, due to the depreciation in the purchasing power of Mexican currency, rose to exorbitant figures, but Gen. Obregon, acting under the direct orders of Gen. Carranza, endeavored in every way to prevent the introduction of foodstuffs into Mexico City. Not only did he refuse the City Council railway cars for transporting such stocks as were available in regions contiguous to the capital and controlled by his troops, but he ordered his outposts to confiscate such as were brought in from neighboring regions on the backs of mules, horses or donkeys. There is an abundance of evidence pointing to the fact that this inhuman conduct was part of a deliberate campaign to starve the populace to enlisting in the ranks of his army.

"When the inevitable consequences of this plan began to evince themselves, and the people cried for food, Gen. Obregon addressed them through the press and by means of printed posters informing them that the food shortage was due to speculators and to the selfishness of the well-to-do classes. He immediately decreed a special tax levy of 20,000,000 pesos to relieve what he had the effrontery to characterize as the desperate situation of the city's poor. When the merchants refused to pay this tax he invited the rabble to take what they could by looting and sacking, informing them under his signature that if this general looting began he would march out of the city with his troops, not firing a single shot to prevent the mob from taking what they wished. But the people were not deceived. They refused to be used as his tools. The merchants of the foreign colonies raised a relief fund of more than $500,000 in a few days by voluntary subscriptions and the acute stage of the crisis passed. Prices of foodstuffs in Mexico City are two and three hundred per cent. higher than in normal times and still rising, due to the machinations of military leaders of the type of Obregon, which unfortunately includes practically all.

"What is true of the food situation in Mexico City applies also to the fuel situation. The spirit which will starve a people for personal gain or selfish military ambition does not make for liberty or democracy. Mexico must reap as she has sown, and unless the anarchy, chaos and desolation which prevail in all parts of the republic under the guise of liberating armies is remedied the world will witness a spectacle here which will be as a page torn from the history of the Middle Ages."

AN IDEAL COMBINATION OF QUALITY AND QUANTITY.

THE value of a newspaper's circulation should be determined by the number of copies of the paper that are read, and by the character of its readers, instead of the number of copies distributed. Mere circulation without definite value means nothing. To an advertiser one reader who has purchasing power is worth a multiplicity of those who are without means with which to buy advertised articles.

It is seldom that a newspaper can be found that possesses the enviable circulation features enjoyed by The Times. This paper not only exceeds all its local contemporaries in quantity of circulation, but in quality and permanence as well. The Times goes into the great majority of homes, offices and business houses of Los Angeles and Southern California, and it is read by, and has the confidence and moral support of the substantial, industrious, thinking, earning men and women in this field. Unlike other newspapers, this journal does not issue a Sunday paper Saturday night, send incomplete issues to out-of-town points, misbrand its editions or resort to any other subterfuge to make its circulation appear to be larger than it actually is. The Times' circulation figures are based on the number of copies that go to bona fide subscribers. The Times' circulation is not of the "fly by night" kind, but it is made up of home-loving, home-making, law-abiding, buying men and women, and represents the buying power of the consumers of this rich field. Consequently each copy of The Times is a selling force, and materially aids advertisers in solving the ever-present problem of distribution.

The fact that The Times regularly prints twice as many legitimate "Want Ads" as any other local newspaper, indicates its widespread popularity, and its thorough distribution in the homes of Los Angeles.

The genuineness and superior quality and quantity of The Times' circulation, and its pre-eminence as an advertising medium, due to the responsiveness of its readers to the appeals of its advertising patrons, lift this journal entirely out of local comparisons and place it in a class by itself.

The Times is subject to no interest save the interest of good citizenship, and its incomparable circulation enables it to give its advertisers greater value for less money than any other paper in California, and, in fact, greater publicity at less cost than any other paper printed in the United States.

The Wrecked Organ in the Josephine College.

Havoc wrought by Zapatistas and peons.

The Josephine College in Mexico City was founded by the genial wife of Porfirio Diaz. It is a home for girls. The place was sacked and looted by the Zapata bandits and peons encouraged in their ghastly work by the soldiery under Gen. Obregon, the Carranza general in charge of the troops in Mexico City for awhile. The picture shows how the invaders wrecked the fine organ in the college.

Notification.

"MUST RESPECT FOREIGN FLAGS," BRYAN'S WARNING TO CARRANZA

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The United States government has renewed its representation to Gen. Carranza to obtain respect for foreign flags recently violated at Manzanillo, asking that he instruct his officers there to afford protection to foreigners and their interests.

In the first note sent to Gen. Carranza a consular report was transmitted stating that the British and American flags had been violated by lawless Carranza troops. The facts were denied by Carranza and additional data have now been laid before him at Vera Cruz with a reference to the request made in the first communication. To this no reply has been received.

A separate communication was sent to Gen. Carranza today, calling his attention to the indiscriminate firing by his troops on the oil tanks in the vicinity of Tampico, 150,000 barrels of oil already having been lost as a result of perforations made by bullets penetrating the tanks.

Conditions in the Tampico district gave officials much concern today. State Department dispatches said "the food situation at Tampioc is growing worse, about 300 Americans are desirous of returning to the United States and fighting still continues at Ebano." The dispatches add that "the oil operators are organizing for the purpose of buying corn in the United States for local distribution which will be disposed of at cost in order to relieve the situation."

From Manzanillo and the city of Colima came reports of further lawlessness. Conditions at other points on the West Coast of Mexico were described as under date of yesterday:

"A column of Carranzistas has been routed while on its way to Guadalajara. Seven hundred troops from Hermosillo have arrived at Guaymas. Many stores at Guaymas are closed on account of existing political conditions. Acapulco and Mazatalan are quiet."

The State Department received today a long dispatch from Zacatecas, confirming the report that Gen. Isabel Robles, Secretary of War to Gen. Eulalio Gutierrez, had "surrendered on April 1, all of his command, machine guns, ammunition and equipment to Gen. Villa's forces near Camacho."

AMERICAN SHIP GREENBRIER FOUNDERS IN NORTH SEA.

BREMEN, April 3 (via Amsterdam and London, April 3, 7:03 p.m.)—A telegram to the Weser Zeitung says that the American steamer Greenbrier from Charleston, S. C., for Bremen has foundered in the North Sea. Her crew was landed at Wyk in Schleswig.

The Greenbrier was detained at Kirkwall, Orkney Island, March 13 for investigation by the British authorities and sailed for Bremen after a delay of three days. According to maritime records she arrived in Bremen March 22. In that event she probably was on the return instead of being on the way to Bremen.

The Allies' Plan.

WILL TRY NEW TACTICS TO FORCE DARDANELLES.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, April 3, 5:37 p.m.—A radical change in the operations of the allied fleet in the Dardanelles is forecast by the correspondent of the Star who has been for some time at the straits. In a dispatch from Athens he says the check received by the allies at the narrows has been sufficiently grave to make necessary a decided alteration in tactics.

The present pause has been considered a prelude in an attack that is confidently expected will prove of overwhelming force. The loss of three warships was by no means unexpected, the correspondent continues, and though it entails a delay, it should not cause disquietude. He asserts there are other means at hand for accomplishing what a direct frontal attack failed to achieve. He believes it not improbable that time will show the attack was justified by the injury done to Turkish defenses.

It is his opinion that the Turks will find it extremely difficult if not impossible to replace the big guns put out of commission.

EIGHT TRAINS OF MEAT FOR RELIEF OF BELGIANS.

NEW YORK, April 3.—The commission for relief in Belgium announced today that it had placed contracts within the last few days for 6,000,000 pounds of bacon, fat backs, lard and pickled beef for shipment to the non-combatants in Belgium.

That quantity, it is stated, represents the capacity of eight trainloads of thirty carloads each, all for shipment to the noncombatants in Belgium during April. It is the second and in the aggregate, the largest consignment of meats sent to Belgium since the beginning of the war. An equal amount is to be shipped in May.

Death.

FEW DISEASES AMONG BRITISH.

CHOLERA OR TYPHUS HAS NOT BEEN REPORTED.

Expeditionary Forces Said to be Remarkably Free from Dangerous Maladies, Although There Have been Some Cases of Pneumonia as the Result of Exposure.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, March 15.—The first six months of the war passed without a single case of typhus or of cholera in the British army, including both the expeditionary forces and the troops in the British training camps. Smallpox claimed only one victim in the United Kingdom, but returns in this respect have not been given out by the armies in France and Egypt. Of 783 cases of diphtheria, only six ended fatally. So far the greatest cause of mortality among the troops has been pneumonia, which resulted in 357 deaths out of 1508 cases.

As regards other diseases, 625 cases of typhoid fever and 49 deaths are reported in the expeditionary force, and 262 cases and 47 deaths in the camps in the United Kingdom. Scarlet fever had only 196 cases and four deaths in expedition as against 1379 cases and 22 deaths in Great Britain. Measles, a disease associated with childhood, sent 1045 recruits to the English training camp hospitals, with 65 deaths, while the seasoned men on the continent had only 175 sick from this cause with 2 deaths.

Considering that the British army, regular and territorial, began the war with a half-million men and has since expanded to about 2,500,000, the low death rate is said to have probably established a record. The report of the Canadians being mowed down by camp sickness proved to be unfounded, and the Admiralty now says in regard to a similar rumor affecting the naval division in training at the Crystal Palace, that only 2 per cent. of the 8000 men are now on the sick report.

AMERICAN NOTE IN PARIS.

HORSE, AFOOT, HAND CAR; MEXICO CITY TO BORDER.

How "Times" Correspondent Braved Firing Squads to Bring Affidavits.

By Bribery and Bluff Newspaper Man Goes Through Lines of Hostile Troops, Bearing Documents Detailing Outrages Below the Border Which Have Startled the United States.

BY GEORGE ADDISON HUGHES.

(Correspondent of the Los Angeles Times commissioned by the International Committee to make public the facts.)

EL PASO (Tex.) April 3.—The International Committee, composed of duly-elected representatives of the seventeen foreign colonies of Mexico City, having commissioned the Los Angeles Times to give the story of outrages to foreigners to the world, left the rest to me. I was to get out of Mexico the best way I could. And there were no railway communications.

Obregon, at Pachuca, blocking the way to Vera Cruz, had ordered that no foreigners be permitted to enter his lines from Mexico City. Anyway I was not particularly popular with him as I had refused to reply to a number of questions he had asked of foreign correspondents in an effort to clear himself with Washington.

It was 1500 miles to the American border in the North, but I decided that was my route, and March 17, after a four-hour wait at Buena Vista station, I clambered to the roof of a narrow gauge train scheduled to arrive at Toluca three hours later. It took us twelve hours to get through harassing parties of Carranzistas, and to the top of the Nevada range. I was about frozen to death and would have given a month's salary for even an imitation of a tortilla, but luck was against me. Toluca was not only sound asleep but tightly locked up. I not only missed the tortilla but couldn't get a room in town. Half of Mexico City, it seemed, had gone to Toluca to get a square meal. There was an embargo on there against the exportation of food out of the State, so none was sent to Mexico City. I slept that night in the doorway of a hotel—that is I got an hour's sleep.

A polite but persistent Zapatista soldier culminated the hour's sleep with the announcement that I could consider myself under arrest. I didn't dispute, but before he got me to a cuartel, I had him believing that I was Emiliano Zapata himself, or somebody else equally important, and filled him with the importance of a mission I was (not) carrying out for his esteemed chief to his esteemed Governor. That got me to the Governor. The Governor was a nice young politician in his early twenties and susceptible to the flattery of a camera and a seal ring. The seal ring bore the initials "F. V." and I'm afraid I conveyed to the Governor the opinion that it had or did or would belong to Francisco Villa. I told him how bad the Carranzistas had treated me, and how good the 'Zaps had been to me and to everybody else, and that I had come all the way to Toluca to take his photo and that I was going right back to Mexico City, and so on and so on. We parted embracing each other. I've got that down fine now. After getting out of the palace I didn't waste many minutes getting out of Toluca. But I still had a terrible feeling in the pit of my stomach.

GETS RIDE ON A TRAIN.

I started walking to Ixtlahuaca, but a military train came along and the blandishments of the camera—which didn't contain a single film—won me a ride to Ixtlahuaca. I told the officers I was a mining man en route to El Oro. At Ixtlahuaca I bought a horse. Five miles out the former owner took a pot shot at me from the hills, but missed. I guess he wanted his horse back. Anyway, I had no time to linger and question. That afternoon I reached Flor Maria—after having hurdled a few burned bridges—and there was lucky enough to find a freight engine of the El Oro Mines Company. The engineer gave me half his dinner and carried me to Tultenango. We got there under a white flag at sunset. The engineer valued his machine because of the job it involved and his life because of his family. So he wouldn't carry me on to Naravatio. But I got hold of a railroad push car—I'm afraid I "confiscated" it—and started down the mountain. I had a 100-kilometer ride ahead of me, but that didn't phase me as much as the signal lights that kept flashing my approach through the night from hill to hill.

Finally, just after I had carted the push car—it was not a hand car—over a burned bridge, I found myself surrounded by a gang of soldiers or brigands, it's all the same down there. They were not particularly inquisitive, but they struck me as being somewhat avaricious and a little exacting. I thought at first there was 1,000,000 of them, but from the flash of their guns I learned I was mistaken. But I got away. So I had to leave the hand car to its fate. I took to the brush with my precious bundle of affidavits and had a very chilly night, arriving at a station called Solace at daybreak.

GETS BOOTS AND HORSES.

There I persuaded an ungentlemanly vaquero to part with a little of his breakfast and his boots. Mine had gotten torn to pieces while I was doing the midnight Marathon over the range. After eating part of the vaquero's breakfast and paying him for the boots he didn't want to sell, I also persuaded him that it was best that he sell his horse. So, after a day's ride, I got near Naravatio, one of those Mexican adobe towns that sprawl through the desert hills there. A few miles from the town several sombreroed gentlemen on horses requested alms and I had to part with the loose change in my pockets and my highly prized dying steed. (I pity the man that attempted a "get away" on that horse.) I walked into Naravatio and found myself in a Carranzista stronghold. Gen. Colin was there with an army of several thousand troops and when I was brought before him—a courtesy I by no means intended or volunteered to pay—he notified me that when I left town it would be with him and that our destination was of little importance. However, I had other plans, and not having been honored with a guard, I left a note of regret and started to Acambaro.

A few miles out of Naravatio I managed to get a passing military train. The conductor was more alcoholic than military and I had made provision for such emergencies. I got to Acambaro. I can't remember much of how I got into and out of Acambaro—maybe I didn't go into the town at all—but somehow I found myself the next day, or the next, in Celaya. The demand for sleep and food overcame that funny feeling about my knees, so I went to a hotel and got both—four hours of the former and about $10 worth of the latter. Then at daybreak—I don't know what day it was—I caught a military freight train for Irapuato. One of the cars on that train belongs to me. At least I know I had to pay enough in bribes for the passage to own it. At Irapuato, that afternoon, I got a passenger train for Aguascalientes, reaching there at midnight. I thought my troubles were over, but they had just begun.

The direct train I expected to be there for the border was not going that night and nobody knew when it would be going. Gen. Jose Robles, the Gutierrezista, had cut the track and three or four bridges between there and Torreon and I was marooned. I went into hiding at a little adobe shack on the outskirts of the city until a messenger told me the next night that a train was about ready to go north. I fixed the conductor with a hundred-peso tip, the price of a berth and my passage, and was allowed to sleep in the smoker of the Pullman. That was heaven.

It took us thirty-six hours to go the 120 kilometers to Zacatecas. And there we had a long lay-over, which time I passed in a towel closet of the Pullman. I was too near the last leg of my trip to risk discovery of the documents. The ride from Zacatecas, with three engines pulling thirty-five military cars, took us twenty-four hours. Torreon looked civilized and I got out and stretched my legs. I was wrapped up in a Mexican blanket and wore a Mexican sombrero, so there wasn't a lot of real danger. We left Torreon at midnight and at daybreak we got into Jiminez—which brings recollections of a firing squad and a brick wall from back in the Orozco days. We reached Chihuahua at noon. There I was in at least semi-civilization. I got a good square meal—if a Chinese cook did put it up. Nothing happened then until the train got within three miles of Juarez. There it was stopped and everybody was searched. I had hidden the papers in a Pullman car seat, but, with the searching over and Juarez at hand, I took them out and put them in my blanket. I had in the meantime gotten into the habiliments of a human being.

With the blanket slung over my arm, I was standing in the doorway of the train wondering if I were really going to get across the border after all, when the train stopped a second time. This time there was no searching of the other passengers, but a thorough search of me. I did the great Keller stunt with the blanket, but I'll confess that I couldn't answer questions because my tongue was frozen to the roof of my mouth and my lips had gone dry of fear. I went down several times during the searching operation because my knees wouldn't support me. They wouldn't listen to my will.

After a long confab, the three gentlemen in plain clothes and a young fellow in uniform had apparently decided that I should accompany them somewhere out into the dark, when a Villa commissioner who spoke English said something to them in an undertone. Then the train pulled on and I kicked my leg shin with my right foot to see if it were true that I was really still with it.

LEAPS INTO AUTO.

Then the train stopped at Juarez. I made a flying leap into an automobile

M'MANUS AWARD SCORED BY DEAD MAN'S SISTER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, April 3.—Miss Elizabeth McManus, sister of John B. McManus, the American business man slain by Zapata soldiers in Mexico a few weeks ago, addressed a letter today to Secretary Bryan, protesting that the indemnity accepted from the Villa-Zapata authorities was too small. In the course of the letter Miss McManus says:

"I write to protest the paltry indemnity secured to the widow of my brother, John B. McManus. You, as representative of our United States, should have set an indemnity of at least $100,000 to secure his little family and teach the Mexicans respect for Americans and their interests."

Mrs. McManus was allowed $20,000 by the Conventionist government.

POLICE BLAMED IN PANAMA RIOT

Unarmed Soldiers Fired on Gen. Edwards Reports.

Gen. Leonard Wood Orders Full Investigation.

Train Stoned by Civilians and Mob of Hoodlums.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Brig.-Gen. Edwards, commanding the troops in the Panama Canal Zone, reported today that during the fight in Colon yesterday between American soldiers and Panama policemen, in which Corp. Langdon of the Coast Artillery was killed and three soldiers were wounded, the Panama police fired into a train of unarmed soldiers and civilians and pelted the train with stones.

In his report Gen. Edwards said::

"Cause of the riot was similar to that of recent trouble in Panama; excited police clubbing soldiers, protests from other soldiers, pistols drawn by police, shooting commenced. Coast artillery provost patrol was attempting to stop shooting by policemen when Langdon was killed by police lieutenant. Three men of a patrol started to return fire on the police when officers stopped the firing, preventing casualties. This was the only firing done by Americans. Excursion to baseball games from infantry post brought about 1600 soldiers to Cristobal. Toward close of games trouble was reported to me in adjoining town, Colon. Immediately turned out one company First Artillery under arms as provost guard, sent one officer and thirty non-commissioned officers to clear town and put soldiers aboard returned train as precautionary measure. I shortly followed to scene of riot.

"Provincial Governor, Chief of Police and my aide already were at work quelling the disturbance. While soldiers were entraining, police fired into train containing unarmed soldiers. Private De Laughery wounded at this point. Showers of rocks and other missiles also were thrown into train by Panama boys and negroes.

"On my demand the Governor of Colon province has imprisoned the police lieutenant alleged to have killed Corp. Langdon; have ten witnesses who claim can positively identify him as man firing unprovoked shot. One Panaman only hurt, receiving a black eye.

"Langdon was shot through the heart. The wounded are: James De Laughery, H. C. Klimp, Charles R. Richeson."

One of the purposes of Maj.-Gen. Wood's visit to the zone, where he is due today, was to look into the recommendation that the United States police Colon and Panama.

WOOD ORDERS INVESTIGATION.

[BY PACIFIC CABLE.]

COLON (Panama) April 3.—Maj.-Gen. Leonard Wood, commander of the Department of the East, arrived here today and immediately ordered a full investigation of the shooting of Corp. Langdon last night by a Colon police lieutenant. The investigation will be made by Col. John L. Chamberlain, Gen. Wood's inspector, with the assistance of Brig.-Gen. Clarence Edwards, commander of the Canal Zone forces.

Preliminary examinations of a number of witnesses indicate that the killing of Corp. Langdon was without provocation. The corporal was attempting to arrest a turbulent private when the police lieutenant began shooting without warning.

Gov. Arcia of the Colon province is assisting in the investigation and is holding the police lieutenant in seclusion, at the request of Gen. Edwards.

Gen. Wood began today his inspection of the canal defenses.

WILSON'S TRIP TO THE PACIFIC.

DANIELS IS STILL CONFIDENT THE PRESIDENT WILL GO BY WAY OF PANAMA.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels still is hopeful, he said tonight, that President Wilson will be able to accompany him on his proposed trip in July through the Panama Canal to San Francisco. The President has said he was unable to make any definite plans for the summer, pending the settlement of various international questions.

The President's closest advisers expect he will go to San Francisco either by water or by rail some time during the summer or fall, if he finds the trip at all possible. They want him to make a number of speeches in the Middle West and West.

NUT IMPORTS DOUBLED.

Trade in Fruits With United States Also Twice What It Was Ten Years Ago, Statistics Say.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, April 3.—With a grand total of $92,840,172, the foreign trade of the United States in fruits and nuts during the calendar year 1914 was double that of ten years ago, according to the Department of Commerce. Imports aggregated $59,231,394 in value, and exports of $33,608,778, which included the trade with Hawaii, Porto Rico, Alaska and the Philippines.

Bananas valued at $16,000,000 were brought into the United States in 1914, while lemons totalled $5,250,000, olives $2,500,000, grapes $1,500,000, pineapples $1,350,000, currants $1,250,000, preserved fruits $1,000,000 and figs nearly $1,000,000.

Nut imports included cocoanuts, copra, etc., valued at $5,250,000; walnuts, $3,500,000; almonds, $3,500,000; peanuts, about $2,000,000, and filberts, $1,000,000.

With the department of the California and Florida citrus fruit industry, foreign-grown oranges gradually are being excluded from the domestic market, and American-grown fruits being exported in larger quantities. In ten years from 1904 to 1914, exports of American oranges have quintupled, last year totalling $4,225,901.

Prunes have shown a big gain, while apricots and preserved fruits have doubled during the decade.

BIG DIVING TUBE FOUND TO LEAK.

HONOLULU SALVAGE PLANS TO RAISE SUBMARINE DELAYED SLIGHTLY.

[BY PACIFIC CABLE.]

HONOLULU (T. H.) April 3.—Tested today at a depth of 320 feet, the improvised diving tube which is to be used in the work of raising the submarine F-4, was found to have leaked slightly. Salvaging operations are being held up until the tube is perfected.

It has been planned to lower Diver Agraz in the tube today at the spot where the F-4 is believed to have been located but the officials would not permit him to descend to the supposed level of the submarine until the apparatus had been further tested empty. After being submerged for an hour, several inches of water was found to have been forced into the tube as a result of the terrific pressure.

CRUISER READY FOR TRIP.

VALLEJO (Cal.) April 3.—The cruiser Maryland, which is scheduled to sail from San Francisco for Honolulu Tuesday with divers and apparatus to assist in raising the submerged submarine F-4, left Mare Island navy yard tonight for California City to take on coal for the trip.

It was learned here today that part of the wrecking apparatus will not reach San Francisco from New York until next Wednesday. It was decided that the tardy material would be forwarded to Honolulu on a liner and that the Maryland would not be delayed in sailing on that account.

THREE PEOPLE DIE AT RICHMOND, VA.

RICHMOND (Va.) April 3.—Three persons perished today in the storm that covered Richmond and the surrounding country with a blanket of snow and practically cut the city off from communication with the outside world. C. P. Moxley, a merchant; J. R. Chenault and Charles H. Beedles encountered a live wire borne down by snow and were killed.

The storm reached Richmond early today, accompanied by a high wind which continued until this afternoon. Wires in all directions were broken down and for several hours there was no communication out of the city, except by train.

EDITOR IS REPRIMANDED.

Denver Journalist Scored for Indulging in Fist Fight With Member of House of Representatives.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DENVER (Colo.) April 3.—C. H. Newell, editor of the Denver Express, was reprimanded by the House of Representatives of the Colorado General Assembly today. In administering the reprimand, Speaker P. B. Stewart said Newell had violated the House rules by occupying a member's seat and engaging in a fist fight with a member.

Newell was given permission to read a statement, in which he charged that Representative A. P. Ardourel was the aggressor in the personal altercation during which blows were exchanged.

Observers Recalled.

by the United States on a number of incidents during the war but more particularly about the Langhorne affair than anything else.

Maj. George T. Langhorne, the first of the military observers to be recalled, reached Washington several days ago. He was ordered home from his assignment as attache in Berlin because someone in Germany was using his name to forward messages to this country about great German successes in the field. These messages came to the attention of the London government, which called them to the attention of the United States. When Maj. Langhorne was asked to explain them he promptly branded them false. His statements were substantiated by the fact that one of them was addressed to "Garrison, War College, Annapolis." In the first place Secretary Garrison's address is not at the Army War College. In the second place the War College is located at Washington, and in the third place, the Naval War College is not even located at Annapolis, although the Naval Academy is there.

The observers are Lieut.-Col. J. E. Kuhn of the Engineer Corps; Maj. Dwight E. Aultman, field artillery; Capt. W. B. Burtt, of the infantry; Capt. Samuel D. Rockenbach, of the cavalry; Capt. S. C. Schartle, of the coast artillery; and Maj. C. C. Williams of the ordnance department. Lieut.-Col. Kuhn will remain in Berlin as military attache of the embassy.

Although other American officers have been assigned as observers with the armies of the allies, so far none of them have reached the front. Germany and Austria are the only two belligerants who have permitted observers to accompany their fighting forces.

There is a strong possibility that the American officers themselves may have suggested the advisability of their recall in view of the strong anti-American wave which is alleged to have swept over Germany recently. According to unofficial reports there have been incidents which almost amounted to demonstrations against the United States. It is also quite possible that Germany showed her feeling in the matter by withdrawing some of the courtesies previously extended the officers.

The State Department would not discuss the case, declaring it had received no information on it and that it was a matter wholly for the disposition of the War Department.

TANZER WITNESS HELD.

Frank D. Safford is Arrested in Brooklyn on Charge of Perjury in Connection With Case.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, April 1.—Frank D. Safford, hotel clerk, who was a witness for Miss Rae Tanzer during her hearing before a United States commissioner in a charge of using the mails to defraud, was arrested in Brooklyn tonight on a charge of perjury. Safford testified that James W. Osborne, the New York attorney against whom Miss Tanzer had brought a $50,000 breach of promise suit, was the companion of the young woman at a hotel in Plainfield, N. J., last October. Since that testimony was given, Miss Tanzer has admitted that she was mistaken in naming James W. Osborne as the man who, she claimed, had promised to marry her and had taken her to the Plainfield hotel.

No report from Honolulu had been received late today.

VILLA SOLDIERS IN NEW BATTLE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN ANTONIO (Tex.) April 3.—A force of 4000 Villa soldiers en route to Nuevo Laredo, Mex., encountered a Carranza force of 2300 at Candela, eighty-five miles south of Nuevo Laredo this afternoon and a battle is being fought, says a message tonight from the latter place. At a late hour the battle was still in progress but no details had reached Nuevo Laredo except the information that the Villa army was equipped with cannon. The Villa force is believed to have begun a march from Colondrinas to attack Nuevo Laredo and was surprised by the Carranza column marching south. The outcome of the battle today is awaited with interest for victory by the Villa soldiers would mean the evacuation of Nuevo Laredo by the Carranza troops, few of which remain since the main body was sent south.

"ONLY PRECAUTION" ITALY TO AUSTRIA.

BOLOGNA (via London) April 4, 1:08 a.m.—The newspaper Resto del Carlino say it learns from a diplomatic source in Rome that Austria-Hungary, perturbed by the popular demonstrations in Italy, inquired through its Ambassador at Rome what the object of there demonstrations was and also what was the significance of the reports of a military measure being published in the newspapers of Italy.

The newspaper says the request for information was couched in courteous terms and that Premier Salandra replied immediately that the steps taken were of a precautionary character and nowise an implied threat to any one.

PLANT BOMB AS A SCARE.

Harmless Affair Discovered Near Offices of West Coast Life Insurance Company at San Francisco.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, April 3.—A harmless bomb, which the police said was well constructed, was found today near the offices of the West Coast Life Insurance Company with a note reading:

"Last warning, robbers of widows."

Officers of the company who had difficulty recently with the State Insurance Commissioner said they considered the incident a joke.

The police explosive expert opened the bomb. It was found to have been set for detonation at 5:50 o'clock this morning, several hours before it was discovered. The alarm clock mechanism had acted but the use of cotton in place of an explosive made it harmless. There was a quantity of screws and nails in it.

Charges that the books of the company had been falsified made by the insurance commissioner, were dropped upon the company's agreement to make good an alleged impairment of the company's assets.

STOCKTON, April 3.—Albert Lindemeyer, who was recently arrested at Lodi on the charge of stealing an automobile from his mother in Sacramento, may have to serve a term in the penitentiary unless the mother relents.

Mrs. Lindemeyer arrived at Lodi at midnight last night and took her car home, but refused to go bail for the son or even see him. She stated that he had caused her much trouble and that it was high time to call a halt.

It is alleged that the young man stole the car last Monday night and came here with a number of boon companions, spending the greater part of the week riding about in this locality. He was arrested near Galt, where the car broke down.

Mrs. Lindemeyer stated that she had missed a watch also. Officers say that the youth pawned the watch here for $5.

FORMER OFFICER HELD AS RIOTE

CHARGED WITH DESTRUCTION OF PROPERTY IN STRIKE.

Once Recommended for Promotion for Efficient Service Against Unionists He Takes up Cause of Agitators After His Discharge and is Held as One of Leaders.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) April 3.—G. E. Finnell, 29 years old, former policeman and more recently motorman in employ of the Seattle, Renton and Southern Railway, is held at the City Jail in lieu of $1500 bonds on charge of having destroyed property of the Puget Sound Traction Light and Power Company during Tuesday night's riots.

The arrest was made on a warrant sworn to by E. H. Worthen, traction investigator, who declares Finnell one of the riot leaders.

The arrest brings to light contradictory attitude on the part of Finnell toward strikers and particularly toward the traction company. Official records show that during March of last year, Sergeant A. T. Wilkes specially recommended Finnell, then an officer in the police department, for efficient service during strike duty. On July 29 of the same year, Finnell was discharged from the department for beating an employee of the street railway company in a small restaurant on Fifth avenue, North, near the North Seattle carbarns.

Arrested on a similar charge, Edward Denton, motorman in the employ of the Renton line this afternoon, was placed in the City Jail where he will be held until he can produce $1500 bonds. It is charged Denton plugged switches of the Puget Sound Traction Light and Power Company tracks at Fifth avenue and We on the night of the car riots.

LONDON SOCIETY TABOOS LIQUOR.

Example of King and Kitchener Being Emulated.

Prohibition is Imminent, in Opinion of Londoners.

Wine Consumption Decreased at Leading Hotels.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, April 3.—There is widespread speculation in Great Britain regarding the next step to be taken in the regulation of liquor consumption, but drastic steps are considered not far distant. The example of King George and Lord Kitchener in banning liquor from their households has already been emulated in many quarters. Many hotels and eating-houses report a marked decrease in the consumption of wines and liquors, and say there will be less drunk during the Easter holidays this year than at any other Easter within memory.

Wines, likewise, have been tabooed at informal gatherings at many private homes also, although it is known that still other householders are laying in quantities of alcoholic beverages in the belief that complete prohibition is imminent.

It was learned today that many titled American women are willing to follow the example of royalty, and some have already done so. When Lady Arthur Paget, one of the best known of American women, was asked today if she and others were prepared to become prohibitionists, she [illegible] "Indeed, we are, and it will be very little inconvenience to do so."

While she thinks that much good will be accomplished by voluntary abstention from alcohol, she added: "But I think there would have to be complete governmental regulation." Another well-known American woman also declared her acquaintances to be willing to have no alcoholic beverages in their houses.

PROHIBITION IN AMERICA.

There have been daily references in the press as to the progress of prohibition in America, some of which have pointed out that total prohibition there has been a failure. Dr. Robert Farquharson in a letter published today explains that "not only was little or no effect produced on drunkenness, but ingenuity of an exceptionally clever people was only too successfully directed to evading regulations devised by State."

It is felt generally that the announcements of King George and Lord Kitchener are meant to prepare the public for impending legislation and to [illegible] out public opinion, which it has done.

In response to a full-page appeal appearing in the papers yesterday urging citizens to pledge absolute prohibition, Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, today received approximately 25,000 letters in which the signers promised to abstain. The first morning mail brought 15,000 letters.

Total prohibition is advocated by a large following, but, on the other hand, a great petition, signed by influential workers, has been presented to Prime Minister Asquith, in which it is argued that total and immediate prohibition was deemed impracticable in this country, even at the present time, and a plea was made instead of a compulsory Sunday closing act and uniform rigorous curtailment on other days of business hours in all public houses.

It is signed by such persons as Sir Frederick Treves, Sir William Ramsay, Bishop Durham, Bishop of Chelmsford, Bishop Ingram, Mrs. Humphry Ward, Lady Roxburghe, Lady French and Lady Jellicoe.

Another suggestion made is that employers distribute a limited number of liquor tickets to workmen who do not abuse the privilege.

MAY CUT DOWN PRICES.

In the event of total prohibition here, in all probability there will be a marked decrease in the price of wines and liquors in America, for it is fully expected that there will be a great unloading of liquors in the United States by merchants here as well as in France.

In that event, the prohibition movement in America may get a severe test. The liquor situation here also has had a humorous side. To obtain champagne after the 10 o'clock closing hour, night owls often have been driven to the subterfuge of renting inexpensive hotels and ordering champagne and then departing with it in a taxicab. Likewise good-natured hotel patrons often permit friends to come into their rooms to drink highballs after the closing hours. One American at a big hotel today said that he would be glad if total prohibition came, for he had been imposed on lately by dry-throated friends that he had to hire an additional room in which to sleep.

BRITONS IN FAVOR OF PROHIBITION.

LONDON, April 3, 2:40 p.m.—The morning mail to reach Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd George brought about 15,000 letters, nearly all dealing with the question of abstinence from drinking in England. This number indicates that the day's total of letters will be in excess of 25,000.

These communications were received by the Chancellor in answer to the full-page appeal appearing in the newspapers yesterday urging citizens to join him in favor of absolute prohibition.

Cloudburst.

GREAT STORM IN OREGON; LOSS REACHES THOUSANDS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PENDLETON (Or.) April 3.—Eastern Oregon is in the throes of the worst storm in years and thousands of dollars of damage has been done ,in fact the loss in washed out grain is almost impossible to estimate. A heavy cloudburst fell on the divide between Hinton and Little Button Creek last night, ten miles northeast of Heppner. A barn and all its contents belonging to Mike Kenney was washed away. The creeks in Heppner were filled to their banks and there was fear for a time that damage might result here.

Reports from the surrounding country coming in today show that the storm was one of the most severe that ever struck Umatilla county. In Pendleton and many other localities rain fell in torrents without any decrease in violence for half an hour. Deep gullies were cut down every hillside, walks were washed away, lawns washed out, mud piled several inches deep over the sidewalks in flats, and great loss was caused.

In farm sections considerable grain was washed out on hillsides. The trestle between here and Pilot Rock was washed away and the county roads were made almost impassable.

Many automobile parties were caught in the storm and had to abandon their cars.

Battle Continued.

At any rate they have, say Dutch correspondence, depleted the garrisons in Belgium and have actually withdrawn men from the Yser front.

Not much importance is attached in London to the raid by Bulgarian irregulars into Servia. These raids are continually taking place, the only difference being that the latest one was carried out with greater force than usual, and was aimed at the railway from Uskup to Saloniki.

German submarines continue their activities, today's score being one British steamer, the Lockwood, and a French fishing smack, bound for Newfoundland.

With the return of calmer weather, it is expected the airmen will soon become more active and reports of proposed Zeppelin raids on England are being revived.

THE AUSTRIAN VIEW OF IT.

VIENNA, April 3 (via London, 6:25 p.m.)—A correspondent of the Neue Freie Presse of Vienna telegraphs from the front that constantly increasing forces of Russians are making almost superhuman efforts against the center of the Austrian line in the Carpathians along a front about 40 miles long.

"A violent combat has now been raging for several days without producing any changes in the general situation," he writes.

"The heights on the north declivities of the Carpathians now constitute the chief object of the Russian attack, as they open a path to the highest ridges commanding the mountain wall.

"The Russian forces show no signs of diminution in this constantly alternating fight. They seem to possess endless reserves."

Dispatches to other Vienna papers, although carefully worded and strictly censored, convey the impression that the situation in the Carpathians is a desperate one. They all dwell on the enormous reserves and strength of the Russians. The Germans now are sending great numbers of reserves to Hungary. Ordinary train service on the main lines has been suspended for the last three days on this account.

SLAV INTERPRETER HANGED AS A SPY.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PETROGRAD, April 3 (via London, 7:39 p.m.)—It is officially announced that Col. Miassoyedoff, who was attached as interpreter to the staff of the Tenth Army, proved to be a German spy and was tried by court-martial and hanged. It is also announced that several persons not connected with the army were arrested at the same time as accomplices and are awaiting trial.

GERMANS SQUARE INSULT TO FLAG.

MAKE EXCUSES FOR TEARING STARS AND STRIPES FROM THE BELGIANS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, April 3.—The Belgian correspondent of the Journal des Debats writes to his paper that as a result of a complaint by the American Consul, German officers have called on the burgomaster of Liege and made excuses for German soldiers who are alleged to have torn the American flag from the breasts of citizens the day that an American fete was being held. The German officers pinned American flags on the burgomaster and two councillors and it is declared the incident resulted from a misunderstanding of orders.

The correspondent adds that the news that excuses had been made soon spread and all the inhabitants of the city immediately pinned the Stars and Stripes on the lapels of their coats.

CHASES AND SINKS BRITISH STEAMSHIP

LONDON, April 3, 12 noon.—The British steamer Lockwood was torpedoed by a German submarine Friday night off Start Point, in Devonshire. The members of the crew were saved.

A German submarine pursued the Lockwood for several miles before being able to gain a position from which she could discharge her torpedo. The projectile struck the steamer abaft the engine-room, but the crew of twenty-five found time to lower a lifeboat. Later they were picked up by a trawler and brought into port.

Steam railroad traffic was slowed up. Street car service was interrupted, causing a partial paralysis of business.

WEATHER BUREAU PROMISES RELIEF.

WASHINGTON, April 3. — The Weather Bureau promised tonight relief for tomorrow's Easter finery from the unusual storm which held the entire Atlantic seaboard in a wintry grip today for twenty-four hours. Fair weather in the South and Central Atlantic States and clearing weather in Eastern New York and New England was foremost after a day of snow, rain and wind.

Weather Bureau officials said that while the Easter snow storm was not unprecedented, so general a fall of snow in April was unusual. The disturbance placed the entire Atlantic Coast from Northern Florida to Maine in winter habit and brought with it winds that at times approached cyclonic velocity. About nineteen inches of snow were reported at Philadelphia, breaking all records in the history of the Weather Bureau there.

The forecaster predicted tonight that the storm would be entirely passed in the South and Central Atlantic States by tomorrow, but said that blustery winds and the after effects of the disturbance would put a damper on Easter parades in New York and New England.

SOUTH NORWALK (Ct.) April 3.—A parrot, which was supposed to be over 125 years of age, and which was secured by the late Gen. O. From the latter date, "Linda" would not eat. She was as long in dying as she was in living, as it took fifteen days before death came. "Linda" could sing entire hymns, both in English and Spanish. She never knew what a cage was and occupied a place of honor upon all occasions. Her table manners were especially fine.

Sworn statements about Pahvant Valley Irrigated Farm Lands by Pahvant Valley farmers.

No. 1

"I have seen nothing that will compare with Pahvant valley"
—Myron A. Abbott

Mr. Abbott has farmed for years in the Pahvant Valley District. His letter follows:

Western Securities Co., Los Angeles, Cal.

Gentlemen:—

Alfalfa, sugar beets, alfalfa seed, grain, hogs, poultry, vegetables are a big success here. The land has scarcely been scratched yet. I have 40 acres in alfalfa. I get three cuttings yielding 6½ tons to the acre, and I use my fourth crop for pasturage. Better alfalfa I have never seen anywhere. There is also big money in alfalfa seed here. I irrigate my alfalfa only once per season. I have sold my crop for $7 per ton right in the field (in the cock.) Hog raising is very profitable in this country. We have succeeded in sugar beet raising here beyond all expectations. Beet growing has certainly shown great returns and the industry has just started. Very little care and cultivation has been applied to our beet fields and still our yields have been heavy and profits large. We think nothing of 20 tons to the acre.

I like this country better every year. I have studied farming conditions in many sections, but have seen nothing that will compare with Pahvant Valley in soil, climate, irrigation system, domestic water, crop yields and low price of land. I am trying to get my sons to come and locate here, and I am urging all my friends to do the same. This is a place where a man with a little money can succeed. I will be glad to answer all inquiries to any interested parties. (Signed) MYRON ABBOTT.

FUNSTON SEES MEXICANS ENGAGED IN A BATTLE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

BROWNSVILLE (Tex.) April 3.—Intermittent rifle firing from the Carranza trenches in Matamoros at Villa outposts continued all day. Maj.-Gen. Frederick Funston and a party of American army officers witnessed part of this firing from the American bank of the river about 150 yards from the western end of the Carranza trenches, which were well filled with men. The shooting apparently was without effect.

Maj.-Gen. Funston, Maj. W. H. Hay, his chief of staff, and Capt. W. G. Ball, his aide, left tonight for San Antonio.

Gen. Funston said he had much work to attend to in San Antonio and that he expected to return here when Matomoros is attacked.

About 500 Villa reinforcements left today for Camargo, about 100 miles from Matamoros, en route for the front here.

and informed the chauffeur that I was in just a little bit of a hurry. He wasn't. He waited just long enough to make my tongue stick to the roof of my mouth again. Then—and I was not surprised—one of the gentlemen who had searched me hopped into the machine and we started. I wished then I had written in my farewell letters at Mexico City that mine was the valor of ignorance. I was wondering what was going to happen when my heart gave a jump. We were heading directly for the international bridge and El Paso. Then, as the car swerved, my heart throb of joy suffered the reaction. The car drew up in front of the Mexican customhouse and I was ordered out to be searched. That operation performed, I was about to re-enter the machine when I was again called back into the customhouse and led into a private office. After more searching and as much tall talking as my tongue would do, I found myself in the machine thundering under the toll gate that marks the American border. Then I turned in my seat, stood up in the car and shouted to the Mexican winds: "Go to ——."

BIG GARRISON AT AGUA PRIETA.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) April 3.—Col. Miguel Samaniego's column of 966 Carranza soldiers returned to Agua Prieta today from a raid in Northeastern Sonora bringing more than 150 horses loaded with rifles, food and clothing and 200 burros packed with ment and miscellaneous supplies.

The raiding party was reported to have made several unsuccessful attempts during the last week to regain its base but the cordon of Villa troops said to have been surrounding Agua Prieta seemed today to have been drawn off to the west, as Samaniego reached home without interference.

Agua Prieta now has the largest garrison in its history, with well over 3000 troopers in the town. Carranza leaders in Agua Prieta say that hundreds of men have deserted from the Villa army in Sonora the last two weeks.

THE WESTERN RATE CASE.

Soft Coal Would be Carried for Less Under the Readjusted Tariffs According to Witnesses in Chicago.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, April 3.—More reductions than advances in freight rates on soft coal would result from the western railroads' proposed readjustment of the rates on certain commodities, according to testimony before the Interstate Commerce Commission's hearing of the western rate cases today by B. J. Rowe, coal traffic manager of the Illinois Central Railroad.

Mr. Rowe said that, although the forty-one western railroad systems were seeking an advance generally, of five cents a ton on soft coal, shipped from Illinois and Indiana mines to Central and Southern Wisconsin, ten cents a ton to points on the west bank of the Mississippi River and west therof in Iowa, Missouri, Minnesota and part of North and South Dakota, the proposed equalization would cause reductions. This would be done, he said, to place all the rates on a proportioning basis.

Destruction of Mexico.

tic; the removal of public archives, and the stripping of public buildings; the open invitation to riot and loot; the sacking of churches and desecration of images; the killing of men and the outraging of women, are events too recent and well known to permit judgment. The wantonness of such acts renders it impossible to accept the professions of the factionists, or their counsels, as to the course to be pursued by foreigners. It is the earnest desire of the Americans in Mexico to assist the Washington administration to find a solution for the perplexing international situation that exists and to this end they request that their efforts be regarded as made in good faith and that their knowledge and experience of the Mexican situation be accorded full weight. They are willing to make a sacrifice if through them any ultimate good may accrue to the Mexican people or American prestige, but they feel that thus far the very opposite has been the result. They consider that American civilization is on trial and that it has a duty to perform to humanity which no longer should be postponed.

"Mexico is drifting toward total destruction, from which a mistaken altruism is powerless to save it. The present struggle does not represent the efforts of a people to secure liberty and equal rights so much as a clash of personal ambition and revenge.

"Americans in Mexico look to the administration for the protection which they believe it is their due to receive and the administration's desire and unquestionable duty to afford; and they further respectfully express the hope that their views may be given such publication as may effectively assist the American people in forming a sound opinion of the Mexican situation."

DECLARES BIERCE DEAD IN MEXICO.

SECRETARY DENIES AUTHOR IS FIGHTING WITH THE ARMY OF KITCHENER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, April 3.—Ambrose Bierce, the Washington and San Francisco author, is not fighting in Europe as a member of Kitchener's staff, but is dead in Mexico.

This conviction was expressed today by Miss Carrie Christiansen, who served as Bierce's secretary, after having investigated published reports today that Bierce is alive in Europe.

Hopes of the author's Washington friends were aroused today by the publication of a news story which said Bierce had written his daughter, Mrs. Helene Cowden of Bloomington, Ill., advising her that he is on the staff of Lord Kitchener.

Miss Christiansen, who has been active in efforts to locate Bierce through governmental agencies, said the report first had been published some time ago by papers in California, where Bierce formerly made his home and had been found to be untrue.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The total net revenue of all steam railroads of the United States with operating revenues of more than $100,000 for the fiscal year, ending June 30, 1914, was given at $845,216,654, in a report made public tonight by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Operating revenues for the same period were $3,047,019,908 and operating expenses $2,200,313,159 with a net deficit from outside operations of $1,490,095. The net corporate income was given at $347,206,000. Operating revenues for the same period in 1913 were $3,125,135,798, with operating expenses of $2,169,968,924.

The investment of the roads to June 30, 1914, was $16,936,697,840 or $512,338,326 more than on June 30, 1913. Of this increase about $330,000,000 were for betterments and additions from cash or other working assets and about $138,000,000 from issues of securities. There were 1,695,483 persons on the payrolls of the railroads at the end of last June, a decrease compared with the same day in 1913 of 119,756 persons. The wages paid last year amounted to $1,373,422,472. The par value of the outstanding securities of all the companies concerned amounted to $20,247,301,257 and dividends paid by all steam roads, irrespective of revenues, amounted to $451,263,197, being equal to 7.97 per cent. on dividend paying stocks. On $3,019,020,981 of stock no dividends were paid.

The average rate of dividend on roads with $100,000 income was 5.20 per cent. There was an increase in dividends $82,656,870, which the commission reports was accounted for by increased dividends of the Union and Central Pacific Companies.

On June 30, 1914, the roads had a total mileage of 247,397,599 or 7,522.65 miles more than the year previous. Of this increase 2,995.24 was in yard tracks or sidings.

The railroads carried 1,058,188,718 passengers or 19,459,038, more than in 1913 and carried 1,976,138,155 tons of freight, a decrease of 81,897,333 tons in the year.

ERMANS DREAD SUBMARINE HUNT

RPEDO - BOAT DESTROYERS THEIR WORST ENEMY.

Count Reventlow in Article Advises Under-water Squadron to Show Itself as Little as Possible as the Alert Mosquito Fleet of Allies may Get Them.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

BERLIN, March 15.—Count Reventlow, in the Tageszeitung, describes "submarine hunt" by British destroyers:

"The light-footed torpedo boats either cruise at definite distances from each other or they lie still, preserving the same distance. Each of them, however, exercises all the time an extremely careful control of that section of the sea appointed for it. The moment that the periscope of a submarine or perhaps the conning tower, appears above the surface, it is fired at, or else a torpeda boat, which happens to be favorably placed for the maneuver, leaps at top speed toward the point where the submarine has appeared, its object being to ram the submarine before the adversary has seen it or has time to dive deep enough to enable the vessel to glide over it.

"Even if the attempt to ram is a failure the enemy's destroyers only increase their watchfulness, on the ground that the submarine must sooner or later come somewhere to the surface to get its bearings. That is particularly the case in waters where there is a great deal of merchant shipping.

"Owing to the narrow range of vision of the submarine through its periscope, compared to the range of its own visibility from the bridge of a destroyer, it is quite possible for a destroyer to receive it and reach the spot traveling at full speed before the submarine in turn can sight the destroyer and dive for safety.

"It follows necessarily that submarines should show themselves as little as possible on the surface of the water. Recently, it has been repeatedly stated that German submarines have summoned British or French steamers to stop and ordered the crew to leave the vessel by signal or megaphone. That is doubtless humane, but it is exceedingly dangerous and may be even suicidal.

"Destroyers so far off, or in such a light as to be invisible from a submarine, may be lurking or may note the meeting of submarine and steamship. The delay in sinking the merchantman may then easily prove fatal to the submarine.

"The torpedo boat is the submarine's worst enemy. They can be used in all waters. There are large numbers of them available. They are exceedingly mobile, and can rise from passivity to maximum speed at a moment's notice. They carry guns with very rapid fire and capable of mortally injuring at a considerable distance any submarine showing itself on the surface."

HAIR TURNING GRAY OR FALLING? JUST MIX SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR.

It's Grandmother's Recipe for Dandruff and Restoring Color for Hair.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also cures dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking at any drug store for the ready-to-use product—called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound"—you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Some druggists make their own, but it's usually too sticky, so insist upon getting "Wyeth's," which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is the best remedy for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and to stop falling hair.

Folks like "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" because no one can positively tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly, says a well-known downtown druggist. You dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This requires but a few moments, by morning the gray hair disappears and after another application or two is restored to its natural color and looks even more beautiful and glossy than ever.

ROME (via Paris) April 3, 4:35 p.m.—The news of the invasion of Servia by Bulgarian irregulars caused a deep impression here, the fear being entertained in official quarters that it may be the spark which causes a new explosion in the Balkans. The Giornale d'Italia says that what occurred at Vallandovo was actually a battle and can hardly be classed in the category of frontier incidents.

SERVIANS AS VICTORS.

NISH (Servia) April 3, via London, April 4, 12:40 a.m.—A Bulgarian attack began at 2 o'clock this morning near Vallandovo, when several thousand irregulars, wearing military uniforms, crossed the frontier, and surprised and killed the Servian guards. They occupied all the heights on the left bank of the Varda River and penetrated as far as the station of Strumitza. They cut telegraph and telephone wires and drove back the Servian troops and captured two guns.

The Servian troops, reinforced, repulsed the invaders after a violent all-day fight and recaptured the guns. The Servians are now pursuing the Bulgarians, who lost heavily in killed and wounded. The Servians lost fifty men killed.

The American Idea.

AUSTRALIA IS HUSTLING TO CATCH UP WITH US.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

SYDNEY (Australia) March 2.—How Australia is making efforts to push itself agriculturally and how closely it follows American schemes and methods is indicated by a report lately submitted by the New South Wales Minister for Education, Mr. Carmichael, to Parliament. Mr. Carmichael made a trip to Europe some months ago to study the educational systems there, and intended to stop in the United States and Canada, but had to cut his tour short on account of the outbreak of war.

However, he learned all he could about the boys' corn clubs, girls' canning clubs, and father and son clubs in vogue in the United States. As a result of his experiences he has come back with several distinct plans for the furtherance of agricultural education in this state. His recommendations include agricultural high schools for agricultural communities and where numbers do not warrant the establishment of such high schools he suggests rural day schools with an "agricultural top;" and tree culture be made prominent in all agricultural schools.

EITEL AT HER MOORINGS; DASH TO SEA RUMORED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NORFOLK (Va.) April 3.—The German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich was still at her moorings at Newport News at 11 o'clock tonight, according to late reports received here.

Many of the Eitel's crew enjoyed shore leave today. Accompanied by noncommissioned officers from Fortress Monroe, they witnessed a motion-picture performance in Newport News. There were no indications that the Eitel was preparing to leave tonight.

There was practically no communication between this city and Newport News today, and it was impossible to obtain any news of the Eitel's situation until late tonight.

No British merchant vessels had cleared from this port since Friday afternoon at 5:15 o'clock, so far as the official records show. There was considerable speculation as to whether the Eitel would take advantage of this and make a dash for sea.

No confirmation could be obtained of reports that the German commerce raider had intervened.

Unverified reports reached here tonight that several British warships off Cape Henry had been damaged by the storm during last night and were preparing to go to Halifax for repairs.

NEUTRALITY OBLIGATIONS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Obligations of strict neutrality caused the United States government today to impose absolute secrecy on all information pertaining to the movements or intentions of the German commerce raider Prinz Eitel Friedrich, tied up at Newport News for repairs.

Athough the wireless was practically the only means of communication for many hours today with Newport News, telegraph and telephone wires being paralyzed by the snowstorm, the Navy Department at all times refused to say whether or not the Eitel had sailed.

The fact that a blinding snowstorm swept over the Virginia capes, forming a curtain of gray haze which naval officers here thought provided an ideal opportunity for the Eitel to escape to sea, spread the impression that the ship might have slipped out to run the cordon of British and French cruisers lying in wait for her.

The Navy Department took added precautions to prevent any domestic wireless from recording the time of the Eitel departure or sending any information concerning her, for fear belligerent cruisers at sea might pick up such messages and afford Germany a ground for complaint of a violation of neutrality. It was intimated Rear-Admiral Beatty at Norfolk and the commander of the American ships standing guard near Newport News had instructions to send nothing by wireless concerning the Eitel or her movements unless a situation arose requiring advice from Washington. This precaution was taken, it was reported, to prevent any messages whatsoever being sent to the Navy Department so that no blame could be imposed on the American government if the Eitel's break for liberty was unsuccessful.

Officials at the Navy and State Departments indicated that they probably would not comment on the Eitel's movements until at least twenty-four hours had elapsed after her departure, although any announcement as to internment would be made instantly.

ECONOMIST'S SON DIES IN BATTLE.

PAUL LEROY-BEAULIEU GIVES LIFE TO COUNTRY.

Had Already Shown His Courage in Violent Political Campaign and Letter to His Wife Gives Details of His Sacrifice and His Daring. Buried with Military Honors.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PARIS, March 15.—Pierre Leroy-Beaulieu, son of the well known economist, Paul Leroy-Beaulieu, is the latest member of Parliament to give his life to his country.

He had already shown his courage in a particularly violent political campaign in which he braved several attacks and received a bullet in his shoulder. According to the following letter from a German surgeon announcing his death, he showed the same courage on the battlefield.

"A.... la C.... Jan. 19.

(Probably Aix la Chappelle.)

"Madame: It is with the expression of deepest sympathy that I inform you that your husband, captain of a group of reservists of the ....th Regiment Artillery, died day before yesterday in my hospital of a wound in the head. As was reported to me he was wounded while fighting with the bravery of a hero. After all his gunners had fallen he himself served his piece; when he was finally obliged to cease firing he continued to defend himself with his revolver until struck by a bullet in the temple, which affected his right eye.

"He was wounded January 13. The wound was so grave that he immediately lost consciousness and did not recover his senses before his death, which was peaceful and painless.

"The burial took place today in our military cemetery with military honors and in presence of German officers as well as soldiers.

"The tomb has been marked by a cross identified by the number 75. The benediction was pronounced by a Catholic priest of our army division. I bow humbly and full of admiration before the valor of this comrade fighting heroically to the last extremity for his Fatherland.

"It is painful to me that our medical science, which did everything it could, was unable to save such a precious life for his dear ones.

"May God console you and your children.

HOW THE WAR AFFECTS BERLIN.

CAFES IN THE KAISERSTADT MUST CLOSE AT ONE.

"Owl Cars" are to be Abolished Entirely and the Late Suburban Trains will Also be Cut Off—And the "Jitney" Bus will Also Soon Vanish from the Streets There.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

BERLIN, March 17.—Not only have Berlin cafes been required to close at 1 o'clock, but late night suburban trains and electric "owl" cars are to be abolished. At one fell swoop, therefore, the Berliner has lost his famous night life, as well as the means of getting home should he tarry in town in search of some trace of it, for, in addition to reduced train and bus service, the use of taxicabs has been ordered curtailed by two-thirds so that tires, fuel and oil may be saved.

The recently-announced order for all private cars to cease running has caused a flood of requests from individuals and firms asking for special permission to operate their cars, accompanied by detailed reasons why they should be given these permits. Under the law, however, the requests can be recognized only in case the motor cars are to be used exclusively in the service of the empire, one of its states or an official; for protection against fire, for the transportation of the sick or rescue purposes, or for the general public welfare—by physicians, veterinarians and the like.

Though permits may be issued for the automobile busses, Berlin anticipates that these soon will vanish from the streets. Already all but three lines have been abolished, the withdrawn vehicles being used for military purposes.

BRITISH SOLDIER KILLED BY LION.

DESERT CASUALTY IS REPORTED FROM THE WAR IN GERMAN EAST AFRICA.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, March 15.—A British soldier was killed by a lion, according to the latest casualty list from German East Africa. In a letter accompanying the list an officer explained that for his regiment the wild beasts have proved a more serious foe than the Germans. He writes:

"Soon after we began our advance into German East Africa we found we were going to have a lot of trouble with beasts of prey. One night six lions were seen hovering around the camp, and they killed two mules before we got going at them. We killed two and slightly wounded a third. This wounded one next day attacked one of our men who had gone down by a stream to shoot wild fowl. The poor fellow was taken by surprise, the wounded lion springing out of some tall grass right behind him. He planted one shot, but unfortunately without fatal effect.

"The animal sprang upon him and tore him up terribly. He managed to regain his rifle, and although suffering intense pain, finished off the infuriated brute with a shot in the head, but the man was badly hurt, and died three days later."

FREAK FASHIONS ROUTED BY WAR.

NARROW GOWN SEEMS TO BE A THING OF THE PAST.

Shortness and Fullness of the Skirt Coming into Vogue Affords Added Physical Relief to the Wearer and at the Same Time Gives the Shoemaker a Chance.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PARIS, March 17.—Freak fashions as well as other eccentricities have been unable to withstand the serious spirit of war time.

In the opinion of competent authorities fashionable women will never again be imprisoned in the narrow gowns of the past few years. It requires from six to ten yards of material to make the full, flowing, plaited reactionary skirt that is coming into vogue. The colors are very serious, black, dark blue and dark gray, but frequently set off by original fantasies in collars, lapels, vests, stripes and belts in lively colors, "like a ray of hope among the somber thoughts that beset us," said a Rue de la Paix dressmaker.

The shortness as well as the fullness of the new skirt affords added physical relief and at the same time lends itself to the increased elegance in styles of footwear. It is reported that it will also deal a hard blow to the handbag since the opportunities for pockets are immense. A mysterious law of fashion seems to require a wide hat with a narrow skirt and a narrow hat with a full skirt, in consequence the broad brims are going out and the toques, bicornes and the popular military "bonnets de police" (fatigue caps) are the rule.

"The great trouble with all this," says an important tradesman of the Rue de la Paix," is that one hat and one gown now do the service of from six to ten." Instead of ordering reception gowns, evening gowns, dinner gowns and gowns for all sorts of special social functions, the Parisienne orders one simple costume. The industry, however, is recovering from the stagnation of the summer and fall seasons. The foreign trade is very good and has made up largely for the loss of private trade, Italy and America particularly having bought freely for spring.

SERBS WILL HELP CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY OF KING ALBERT'S BIRTH.

Alex Dellens, dressed in a Belgian uniform, will be the flag-bearer for the occasion. A Servian military company will be present and salute the Belgian flag.

Antoinette Ballade; speech by Edmund Mitchell, president British-American League; short address by Dr. Ed P. Bailey, secretary British-American League; "Forward, Belgium," song by E. Miller; speech by Louis Sentous, French Vice-Consul; "Sambre-et-Meuse," sung by Henri Cottave; speech by Mr. Nicsic, representing the Servian colony; piano and violin selections by Misses Agnes and Lottie Buisseret; "Les Belges," by Jerome Charvier; La Fayette Drum Corps, under the direction of Frank Domecus; Scotch bagpipers, Servian military company saluting the Belgian flag.

TEA, COFFEE, SOUP SOLD IN SALOONS.

CHARACTER OF LONDON "PUBS" CHANGING RAPIDLY SINCE THE WAR BEGAN.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, March 15.—Tea, coffee and soups are now offered in the ordinary bar-room in England, and many of the saloons keep open long after the hours when the sale of alcoholic liquors is forbidden, offering their patrons "soft" drinks of various kinds, but mostly these three favorites—tea, coffee and soup.

It is generally predicted that the English "public house" of the future will bear a closer resemblance to the continental cafe in its provision of refreshment counters which will supersede the bar.

The saloon-keeper in many places finds that by providing this character of refreshment he is able to draw a considerable amount of trade from the cheap restaurant and tearoom, many men regarding the atmosphere of the saloon as more "clubbable" than the more formal and pretentious restaurant. Moreover, beer, with the added war duty, has become somewhat expensive for the workingman, who finds that a pot of tea, with unlimited quantities of hot water for dilution, serves about the same purpose to the inner man as twice or thrice the same money's worth of beer or spirits.

TIES CAPTIVE TO AEROPLANE.

Russian Aviator's Ingenuity Disposes of Problem Caused by Taking an Austrian Prisoner.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PETROGRAD, March 10.—The story of an aviator who came back to the Russian lines with an Austrian prisoner strapped to the tail frame of his aeroplane is told in a dispatch from the front in Poland.

The airman, Terentic Paschaloff, ascended from the aviation headquarters in the rear of Gen. Ivanoff's army in his 150-horse-power machine, accompanied by his mechanic. The machine carried a small gun and a number of bombs.

Owing to motor trouble, Paschaloff had to descend two miles behind the Austrian lines. While the mechanic was repairing the motor, six Austrians approached. Paschaloff turned his one-pounder on them and fired one shrapnel shell, which exploded accurately and felled five men. The sixth surrendered.

Then came the problem—what would he do with his prisoner? Paschaloff decided to abandon his stock of bombs, and tie his prisoner to the tail-frame of his machine. Thus burdened, the aeroplane rose and flew over the Austrian lines amid a storm of bullets, regaining the Russian lines without damage.

EXPECTS ITALY TO BEGIN WAR.

PARIS, April 3.—Giuseppe Bevione, editor of the Turin Stampa, and also a member of the Italian Chamber of Deputies, told the Associated Press today that he had a deep conviction that Italy would begin war against Germany and Austria before the end of April.

Signor Bevione said Italy's military preparations were almost complete. The Italian government, he declared, was not waiting for a decisive battle in favor of the allies, but desired to become engaged in the war before such a battle, as Italy would then be in a position to realize her aspirations in accord with the allies. He added that it was not possible for Austria to satisfy these aspirations because, in part, they concerned the Mediterranean.

The belief was expressed by Signor Bevione that the Vatican would not be opposed to Italy intervening in the war. He said also that it was not necessary for the government to convoke Parliament for the purpose of declaring war.

FEW EDISONS MADE BY WAR.

INDUSTRIAL INVENTION SEEMS TO HAVE BEEN CHECKED.

Among the Novelties Suggested in France is One that Would Stretch a Net Over the City to Protect it from the Bombs of the German Aeroplanes and the Zeppelins.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PARIS, March 18.—Inventive genius has done what it could to save the country since the beginning of the war, but its inspirations have not been entirely practical. Among the thousands of ideas presented only four have been experimented upon with interesting results; the rest remain in a state of embryo.

After the first visits of German aeroplanes to Paris a man conceived a plan for the protection of the city from aerial bombs by stretching a metallic netting from the Sacred Heart cathedral in Montmartre to the Eiffel Tower.

A Marseilles inventor proposed a portable railroad to accelerate the concentration of troops. "It is very simple," he said. "When a train has passed over the rails you have only to pick them up and place them again in front of the train, and so on, indefinitely." At the War Department they told him the idea was of immense importance but that there might be some difficulty in working it out. "Oh, that is only detail," he replied.

When Clemenceau in the Homme Enchaine commenced his campaign for the amelioration of the sanitary department, a man suggested the idea of transporting wounded in trains of balloons drawn by aeroplanes.

The greater development of the use of barbed wire inspired an inventor to contrive a shell with wire-cutting attachments.

The war has had a depressing effect upon industrial inventions in general. The average is forty-five applications a day in time of peace. It fell to fourteen in August and had increased to twenty-three in February, including inventions inspired by the war. The war of 1870 had the same effect and the records show that it required three years for inventive genius to recover.

MANY CHANGES IN CANAL ZONE.

U. S. ARMY OFFICERS RAPIDLY BEING SENT TO OTHER ASSIGNMENTS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PANAMA, March 15.—May probably will see several changes in the engineering personnel of the Canal force.

Lieut. Albert H. Acher, U.S.A., will retire from the position of Assistant Engineer in charge of fortifications, which position he has held since the departure of First Lieut. George R. Goethals, U.S.A., who now is assigned as an instructor at the United States Military Aacademy, and will be succeeded by C. P. Darlington who has been the assistant to Mr. Acher on the Atlantic fortifications.

Another change will be that of Capt. R. E. Wood, U.S.A., building quartermaster. He has been on the Isthmus for about nine years. It is understood he will retire from the army to engage in commercial pursuits. He will be succeded probably by George M. Wells, present head of the Municipal Engineering Division.

THE CHECKERBOARD OF THE WAR.

BY HARRY CARR.

TALK of peace has followed the fall of Przemysl. With the surrender of this important fortress, the interests of the various belligerents have somewhat shifted, but those who can see peace coming as a result must be blessed with optimistic eyes.

Fights stop, ordinarily, from one of two causes: either one of the fighters is unable to continue, or there is no longer anything to fight for. It is impossible to consider the talk of probable peace without querying whether either of these two conditions now prevail in the European war.

The first proposition may be dismissed without ceremony. With the possible exception of Austria, none of the belligerents is exhausted or beaten. In fact the war has not yet opened into full bloom.

In order to consider the second proposition it is necessary to take up for the first time in these checkerboard articles the real causes of this war and the real prizes for which the different nations are fighting.

I take it that even the most ardent partisan is not for one moment deceived by the "bunk" issued by the various governments in the form of blue books and white books and other books of myriad and various hue. More particularly, no sane person believes that England entered this war out of a chivalric determination to protect Belgium; or that Russia went to war to shield her little brother Slav nations in the Balkans; or that Germany mobilized her troops because she was in honor bound to help Austria. They are all fighting from thoroughly business-like and selfish motives.

THEIR INTERESTS.

Briefly summarized, these are the interests of the various nations and what they are fighting for:

Germany, a shut-in country that has outgrown its home, wants to break into the Orient and to have a more direct contact with South America. In keeping with this ambition, her famous "world-policy" involves the extension of German influence and dominion in a broad band going southeastward through Austria, through the Balkans; down through Turkey to the Persian Gulf. Once let the German become settled at this gateway to the Orient and the Kaiser would dominate the world. He would be on the threshold of India, in a position to cut off England from her richest colony; he would look with proprietorship upon the Indian Ocean; practically control the entrance to the Suez Canal; and have a naval base for any operations he might undertake in America.

Russia comes in conflict with this German world-plan by reason of the fact her path as she goes southwestward crosses the German path going southeastward. Russia has, no doubt, many grand dreams of empire in the far future; but her immediate concern is an open port on the Mediterranean; and this port is Constantinople. Russia occupies the most humiliating position with her great commerce going through ports of which the entrance in every case, save the ice-bound port of Archangel, is controlled by some other power. Russia is a bear in chains. Her only interest in fighting Germany is to get Germany out of the way of her march southeastward to Constantinople and the Mediterranean. Russia may be worried about a lot of things, but it is a safe wager that the Czar doesn't care a puff of cigarette smoke whether Germany stays or leaves Belgium.

To England, this is purely a defensive war. If Germany should go down to the Persian Gulf the British Empire would be hopelessly lost. How dire is this threat we may judge from the eagerness with which England consents to the occupation of Constantinople by the Russians. We must remember that she has fought two wars to keep Russia out of the Mediterranean. The British excuse that she is fighting to protect poor little Belgium is very slim. The English viewed with Christian forbearance the violation of Luxemburg's neutrality; she herself violated the neutrality of Chili with a light heart. The reason she is fighting Germany is to keep Germany away from the English channel. She is dismayed at the idea of losing Belgium as a buffer nation.

To France this war is partly an effort to recover lost pride and lost provinces; but there is a more compelling reason. By reason of falling birth rate as well as political considerations, France realizes that she cannot much longer keep pace with Germany in the terrible game of seeing which can build up the larger army. France knew she had to fight some day and she wanted to fight before her resources began to diminish.

Belgium is fighting because she has been the victim of the double cross. She was instructed by England and France to make an armed resistance to Germany. They promised to send troops to fight her battles. She threw down the gauntlet as instructed and called for the troops. France and England then said it was their busy day and told her to fight her own battles.

Considering these circumstances, it does not seem that the fighting has yet accomplished anything that very definitely affects any of these national ambitions. It is difficult to see how peace can be brought about, for instance, until it is established whether Constantinople stands or falls.

Assuming that peace cannot be established this summer, let us consider the possibilities of the spring campaign, now about to open.

The general impression seems to be that Gen. French or some other dignitary is going to blow a whistle on May 1 and that all the soldiers on both sides will jump up out of the trenches and shoot at each other. Probably this would be as effective as the more complicated plans that will actually be followed.

The spring campaign will be divided into the following theaters of operations: Flanders and Belgium; Alsace and Lorraine; East Prussia; Austria-Hungary; Constantinople; Egypt and what we may call vaguely "the outer zone."

In the first phases of the war, the French and English troops fought together as one army. It is to be expected that they will now act to a greater extent as independent allies. To England will be assigned the storming of the line in Flanders.

The efforts of the Germans during the winter months to discourage English recruiting and to interfere with the transporting of Kitchener's new army to the continent both failed. The bombardment of the British coast towns by German cruisers gave a great zest to recruiting and Kitchener has landed an army estimated at a million men in France.

APPALLING LOSSES.

The chief handicap of the British army at the opening of the May campaign will be a lack of trained officers and a shortage of war material. Owing to the melodramatic custom of the English officers of setting examples of courage to their men, the British loss in officers has been appalling. Gen. French has tried to discount this loss as far as possible by establishing a training school for officers in the trenches during the past winter. A few months in the actual school of war is worth several years in a military training school. The vast majority of French's troops will be as green as grass, fresh from the English concentration camps; but they will have the advantage of contact with war-hardened veterans among whom they will be distributed.

There is some question as to whether England is not seriously embarrassed for war material. After the severe campaign that is now closing in the trenches, it is reasonable to suppose that it will be necessary to completely rearm and re-equip all the British troops now in the field. France also looks to England for both financial assistance and supplies. The commandeering of the British factories and the frantic excitement of the British government over the labor strikes in some of these factories indicates that the question is serious.

It is to be assumed, however, that British money will provide the necessary war munitions and that, in May, the British army will begin an offensive movement in Flanders.

EXPECTED DRIVE.

The recent fortifications erected by the Germans around Ostend indicate that the British offensive movement is expected to be a tremendous drive along the coast. The retaking of these coast towns is vital to the British for the reason that England would be open to German invasion should she lose complete naval control of the channel. Also, should her allies suddenly take it into their heads to conclude peace on their own terms, without removing Germany from Belgium, the future of England would be about as safe as was the illustrious Damocles over whose head hung the sword.

It requires a fine hopeful eye to see the British army making any advance against the German trenches; but, assuming that the offensive develops into a real drive with the Germans going before it, the direction taken by the British advance will be toward Antwerp. Should the war last long enough and the Germans become sufficiently enfeebled, the next strategic move of the English would doubtless be a drive northward to destroy, by land operations, the German naval stations around Kiel—destroying the hidden German navy by destroying its home. My own opinion is that the British will never be able to break the deadlock that at present exists. The whole of Belgium has been fortified by the Germans and the artillery ranges have been worked out. The force that tries to drive them from these fortifications has a heart-breaking job ahead.

The French have an even more hopeless task in Alsace and Lorraine. The Rhine country is the most wonderfully fortified section of land on the entire face of the earth. Its wonderful parallel railroads whirl army corps around at a rate that renders futile the effort to find a weak spot in the line.

In East Prussia, military activity can be expected to consist only of German attacks upon the Russian line made with the object of relieving pressure to the southward. The Russians have no desire to invade Germany. Austria is the Russian meat.

The real weakness of the German-Austrian defense is in the Carpathians. Since the fall of Przemysl, the Russian army has one distinct objective—an attempt to capture the stronghold of Cracow. Whether or not this succeeds we can expect to see the Russian offensive this summer consist of a southward advance into Hungary. In any case, Austria has very little chance of holding out against this attack; none at all if Italy joins the allies.

ITALY'S OPEN HAND.

Italy's intentions are dependent solely upon one question: What she will get out of it. Italian diplomacy is conducted upon a simple and fascinating plan. She is for the side that offers her the best rewards. At one time she was heart and soul a member of the Triple Alliance. When the Kiel Canal compelled England to concentrate her fleets in the North Sea the Triple Entente became alarmed about the control of the Mediterranean. It was suggested to Italy that England and France would be pleased if she wanted to slip down and grab out a slice of North Africa; whereupon Italy cooled in her ardor for the Triple Alliance. She found, to her embarrassment that North Africa wasn't as easy to conquer as she expected, however, and Germany won back the heart of Italy by offering to hold back the Turks from the defense of North Africa and let Italy win the war. This was accepted, but Germany could not deliver the goods owing to the revolution brought about by the Young Turks. In this present case, Italy is quite frank in holding out her hand. Her troops are mobilized; her competent and highly-trained army is ready to move. Italy waits to be "shown."

CONSTANTINOPLE.

The battles in the vicinity of Constantinople and the war in Egypt are directly connected with one another. British journals of the standing of the London Times which scorn to descend to lies, are quite candid in admitting that the worst is yet to come in Egypt. The attacks by the Turks that have taken place were only preliminary to a grand attack to be made upon the completion of a military railroad under construction by Turkish and German engineers. The bombardment of the Dardanelles was intended by the British partly as a counter-move against the advance into Egypt.

Politically, diplomatically, from a military standpoint and from its religious significance, the fall of Constantinople is the most important and vital event that could happen in this war. Without it, the Russian government cannot safely make peace and by surrendering it, the German government gives over its dream of standing on guard at the Persian Gulf and watching the world go by.

Mrs. de Baker's estate consists of 5000 acres of land in and near Los Angeles and was valued at $7,000,000. She died intestate in 1912.

LUSITANIA HELD UP.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

NEW YORK, April 3.—The liner Lusitania, due to sail at 10 o'clock today for Liverpool, was held up at her dock by thick weather and a heavy snow storm. Her officers said she would be held in so long as the storm lasted—till tomorrow, if necessary. Aboard the Lusitania were 835 passengers, the largest list since the war began.

Surprise.

TIME SUDDENLY CALLED ON CANDIDATES; PANIC.

Unexpeced Ruling that Nomination Petitions Must be Filed by Last Midnight, Instead of Monday, Causes Feverish Haste, but no Aspirant is Left at the Post. One More for Mayoralty.

CANDIDATES for city offices were thrown into a panic yesterday when the City Attorney ruled that instead of having until Monday night to file their petitions they must have their nominating papers in the City Clerk's hands by last midnight.

Scores of candidates learned of the ruling and redoubled their efforts to get signers to their petitions. Petition peddlers were making money fast all day and some signatures were paid for at the rate of 15 cents each. Until midnight the rush continued, with City Clerk Wilde keeping a large force ready to handle the petitions as they came rolling in.

Deputy Public Administrator Casselman came in at the eleventh hour with a mayoralty petition, making the sixth man in the race. "Tip" Casselman, former Republican City Chairman, had been mentioned during the campaign as a possibility. When it was learned the closing time was midnight Saturday, instead of the same hour Monday, his petition was taken out early yesterday morning, filled and returned last evening.

President Whiffen hustled his petition in before noon yesterday. Others who had not heard of the ruling were warned of the ruling by City Clerk Wilde and his deputies, and all managed to squeeze in by midnight.

More than 160 candidates had signified willingness to be voted for at the primaries on May 4. Some of the petitions, however, may prove insufficient when the checking is done.

The candidates who filed petitions are:

CHIEF ANSWERS CHARGES.

Chief of Police C. E. Sebastian, mayoralty candidate, addressed members of one of the largest motion picture producing companies in Edendale yesterday noon. He referred briefly to the charges that have been made against him, then turned to the platform on which he stands as a candidate, and discussed the questions of the campaign.

Mr. Sebastian was introduced by Dr. Glenn McWilliams, who spoke of the life and work of the candidate from the time when as a boy he played over the hills where the studio is now located, to his present situation as Chief of Police. When Dr. McWilliams offered the opportunity for all so desiring to pledge their support to Mr. Sebastian there was a rush for buttons, cards and campaign literature.

In Tense Battle.

WIELDING A BROADAX CHOPS OFFICER'S HEAD.

IN A DESPERATE hand-to-hand battle with a giant Russian early last night Patrolman Jesse of the Boyle Heights division came near losing his life. He was struck a glancing blow on the top of the head with a broadax and no doubt would have been killed but for the assistance of an Austrian who rushed to the scene in the nick of time.

The patrolman made a hurried trip to No. 438 Gless street upon receiving a telephone message that Jim Partnoff was there trying to kill his wife and children. When he demanded admittance the Russian slammed the door in his face and threatened death if the patrolman made a further effort to get in.

Realizing he had a desperate man to deal with, the officer rushed to a telephone and summoned help. Then he returned to the Partnoff home and, starting around the house to prevent the man escaping by the rear exit, ran into him face to face in a dark, narrow alley.

Like an enraged bull the Russian charged upon the officer and dealt him a murderous blow on the head with an ax. Though it weakened him and nearly rendered him unconscious the patrolman quickly recovered his equilibrium and closed in upon his ferocious adversary. The Russian was getting the better of the fight, however, when an Austrian, whose name is not known, ran to the aid of the officer and overpowered Partnoff.

A few minutes later Patrolmen Spencer and Bomar arrived, and after handcuffing the Russian sent him to the City Jail, where he is booked on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. The injured patrolman was taken to the Receiving Hospital. The wound on his head is not serious, but that he was not killed instantly was due to the fact that the ax did not hit him squarely.

An immense crowd gathered at the scene after the Russian had been overpowered, and many threats of violence were made.

ANGLERS SCARED BY A SUBMARINE.

PERISCOPE APPEARS SUDDENLY JUST A FEW FEET FROM A SMALL BOAT.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, March 15.—Four fishermen who had anchored their boat near Deal report a visit from a German submarine, which scared the quartette out of their wits and spoiled the fishing for the day.

One of the four men, seated in the stern of the small boat, first noticed a considerable disturbance of the water just beyond the end of his fishpole. He shouted to his companions, thinking that a shark or some other big fish had been entangled in his lines. All four had their eyes glued to the spot where the water was disturbed when the submarine emerged only a few yards away. A door in the top opened and a single head appeared for a minute or two. Then the head withdrew into the submarine, the door popped shut, and the craft sank slowly out of sight again.

Not a word was exchanged with the fishermen, who had been so alarmed at the visitor's sudden appearance that they had not even offered a greeting. Their fright was not allayed by the submarine's return to the depths, and as soon as they regained senses they divested themselves of their clothes and put on life-preservers in case their boat, barely large enough to boast a sail, was attacked. The wind being dead for the moment, they grasped oars and rowed with might and main for the shore, where they informed the life-guards of their fortunate escape.

The submarine had apparently been resting at the bottom close to their fishing ground and had come to the surface for observation purposes before starting off again.

Two masked robbers carrying automatic revolvers made a raid on three street car crews at the east end of the Stephenson avenue line late last night and robbed seven carmen of [illegible] in cash.

While the three crews and Inspector C. E. Wiley were waiting to make return trips into the city, the two appeared and by fast work prevented collusion that might have led to a capture. Good descriptions of the pair were furnished the police.

AN ARMY OF MEN TO PAY THE ARMIES

SEVEN THOUSAND CLERKS AND SEVEN HUNDRED OFFICERS IN BRITISH DEPARTMENT.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, March, 18.—The pay department of the British army now employs nearly 700 officers and about 7000 clerks. This is nearly ten times as many people as were required for the work in times of peace.

The housing of the constantly-growing staff of the paymaster's office was one of the first difficulties, and the London main office has moved twice since the war began. Lately it has taken to adding private houses to its office area. Much of the time since the 1st of August, the whole army pay organization has worked day and night.

The soldier receives his pay, if he wishes it, not only at the front, but even in the trenches. The cash, in French treasury notes, is issued by his company officer in the field, and is accounted for on the so-called "acquittance rolls." Every soldier carries his pay book right through the war. As far as possible, he is paid weekly. Men in the advanced trenches draw their pay almost as if they were in the barracks at home.

COLOR ISSUE IN AUSTRALIA.

IT MAY UNDERGO A CHANGE AFTER THE WAR.

Governor of One of the States in the Other Hemisphere Touches on a Subject that Causes Him Some Regrets Afterwards — How Sir Henry Galway Squared Himself.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

MELBOURNE (Australia) March 3.—The subject of "White Australia" and the question of admitting Asiatic immigrants recently was discussed publicly by one of the state Governors in the commonwealth, with the immediate result that he was officially asked for an explanation, and he expressed his regret that he had said anything at all on that head. The executive who spoke his mind was Sir Henry Galway of South Australia, and it was the Prime Minister of the Commonwealth, Andrew Fisher, who called him to account.

Sir Henry was speaking at a luncheon at an agricultural fair in South Australia and he devoted part of his speech to the northern territory, the huge area in the upper part of Australia which is under Federal control through the medium of an administrator. It is a much debated question how the territory is to be settled for the development it needs. Sir Henry said among other things:

"Looking generally at the future of this vast continent I am inclined to think that the hardest nut the Federal government has to crack is the development of the Northern Territory. How that territory is going to be developed by white labor alone I for one am unable to conceive. By all means have a 'White Australia' if under that principle you can develop the country. If otherwise, it would be a thousand pities to allow what is undoubtedly a splendid country to remain undeveloped purely on account of a 'White Australia' policy.

"Looking at the splendid services being rendered to the empire by our Indian troops and by our Japanese allies, I am one of those who think that the feelings of Australians on the color question will undergo considerable—or should I say a softening?—change when the war is over."

The day following this comment Mr. Fisher said that if Sir Henry had been correctly quoted his words constituted "a grave official indiscretion" which could not be allowed to pass without protest. Thereupon he telegraphed to the Premier of South Australia asking him to ascertain whether the Governor had said what had been imputed to him. Sir Henry replied to the Premier that the newspaper reports of his speech were correct, that it would have been wiser if he had not touched upon the color question and that he was sorry he had done so. This closed the incident.

Will Teach Spelling.

[Boston Transcript:] In common with all large cities, Boston contains many citizens who are just "old-fashioned" enough to cling to the notion that the really educated boy or girl should know how to spell. Not infrequently these men, as leaders in the business world, are large employers of youth, and are not slow about insisting that their ideas shall receive attention. As a result of their protesting interest, Boston is now tackling the task of improving the teaching of spelling in its public schools. As yet this effort is still in the "inquiry" stage, but already some sort of remedy is in sight. The new department of educational investigation and measurement, in its first report, finds that the principal problem is to determine what words children should be taught to learn. It is admitted, candidly, that "our spelling material for the various grades is not well selected, that the pupils misspell over and over the most common words and that there is need of concentrating instruction in the common words of the child's writing vocabulary." Plainly, then, we are about to take a step in the right direction.

Intellectual Enthusiasm Needed.

[Cincinnati Times-Star:] American universities are many, and their activities are manifold. Degrees are turned out with the regularity of manufacture, and preparation for almost any walk of life is offered. Indeed, a study of the curricula of American universities astounds the observer. "Educational versatility" is hardly the term. It is almost true that you can shunt a young man through the portals of a university and have him emerge swathed in robes of any pattern within a few years.

The machinery undoubtedly exists in the American university. But Arthur T. Hadley, in his latest report as president of Yale University, has pointed to a deficiency in American university life, which undoubtedly exists, though it is on the wane. "A thing which we need to do, and have as yet done imperfectly," says President Hadley, "is to organize intellectual interest in things worth while."

In other words, President Hadley would have universities less concerned with the number of diplomas dispensed than with the quality of scholarship they symbolize. This creation of an atmosphere of intellectual enthusiasm is the greatest problem of education in America. It is something that cannot be procured by endowments. It must be communicated by faculties to students.

Constantinople.

TURKISH WOMEN WELL EDUCATED

Gradually Being Enlightened in Modern College.

Declare Harem Slowly Being Done Away With.

German Influence Welcomed as Help to Country.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 10.—Interviewing three young Turkish women in Constantinople College, the Associated Press correspondent was frankly told by them that the educated Turkish woman of today knew more of America than Americans generally knew of Turkey.

The interview was remarkable for the fact that the three Turkish girls were allowed to appear without the traditional veils. Louise Wallace, one of the American women in charge at the institution, who had arranged the interview, had advised the young women to put on the veils, without which they never venture into the presence of men, but the three representatives of feminine young Turkey thought they could meet Americans without hiding their faces.

Accordingly Efzaish Hanim, Semiha Hanim, and Hatije Hanim were ushered into Miss Wallace's office to meet the American newspaper man. The girls were not sisters, the name Hanim not being the family name, but the Turkish equivalent for "Lady." The young ladies declined to have their family name mentioned, but were eager to embrace the opportunity of talking to a representative of the American papers, who they thought might find some "news" in the present position of women in Turkey.

"Lady" Efzaish was the most alert of the three and did most of the talking. She punctuated her remarks with pleasant smiles. She explained that while life had many serious aspects, she was inclined to look on the bright side of things. At school, she had something of a reputation of being a "regular tomboy." But, like her companions, she was a young woman of charming manners. All three spoke English with ease, while Miss Efzaish used Americanisms with a delightful grace. They also spoke French and German, besides their native language. Hatije Hanim was taking an advanced history and sociology course; Efzaish Hanim was absorbed in science exclusively and Semiha Hanim studied history and science.

EAGER FOR EDUCATION.

"The young Turkish woman is very eager to get a better education," said Miss Efzaish with eagerness. She thought that the women of Turkey were the superiors of their brothers in that respect. "Many of our men are still somewhat indifferent to education, but conditions are improving. The new regime is doing everything possible to catch up. So far, however, the schools for the girls have been slighted a little. The boys' schools are much better and, I believe, really good. But we hope that within a few years the girls will have the same chance as the boys.

RUSH TO LECTURES.

"Some time ago one of our universities started a course of lectures for women," remarked Miss Semiha. "The rush for admission was so great that many failed to get the opportunity they sought. The lectures are given by the professors who teach the men, which I take to be one of the many signs that the seclusion of the Turkish woman is nearing its end. Most of us still wear the veil, of course, but the condition which once existed in Turkey may be considered as of the past. You will still find more veiled women in Constantinople than you will in the provinces, where very few women are in seclusion today. Of course, the harem is still in existence. But I believe that its days are counted. I wish to correct a very popular error concerning the harem. It is generally believed that the harem is a Mohammedan institution. It is not. As we know the harem, it is entirely Ottoman and was first a Greek institution. When the Ottomans took Constantinople, they found the harem right here."

No tendency toward modern feminism was manifested by the young women. Miss Efzaish said that this was far from her mind. Miss Hatije did not seem to be interested even in the question put to her on the subject.

"The women of Turkey have more to do right now than occupy themselves with equal suffrage and the like," she said. "In fact, we do not need such a movement. In Turkey the woman has the same personal and property rights as the man. We are hedged in by old conventions and customs, instead of legal and political handicaps imposed by our men. I have every right any man in Turkey has—with this exception. The man can divorce his wife by merely telling her to go, while the woman must bring a lawsuit. But even here we are better off than some women. In England, for instance, a woman can secure a divorce on just one ground; all we have to do is to show that life with the man we wish to divorce is not agreeable. The woman of Turkey is better off in that respect than many others. What we need is not political equality with our men, but better education. We are slowly getting that. Meanwhile, we are not trying to invade the business and industrial world of our country. There are men enough to do that work.

"The women of Turkey need education for the purpose of bettering that of the men and improving life generally."

ALL GREAT PATRIOTS.

The three young women were great patriots. They wanted their country to be treated fairly. Turkey had its faults, they said. But its people were not as bad as they had been made out to be. They thought that in the past their country had been the prey of all, because the powers of Europe had been too jealous to have it become the prey of one.

Miss Efzaish welcomed German influence in Turkey. The Germans were a very efficient people, she thought. But Turkey would win in the end and work out her own solutions of the problems before her people.

Thus the interview ended. They salaamed in the manner of old Turkey and shook hands after the fashion of the people whose effort had made it possible for them to gratify the wishes of an enlightenment-seeking mind. Gravely, the three bowed and with a sweep of the right hand from the floor up, touch bosom, chin and forehead, uttering the while a salutation in a sing-song fashion, and withdrew.

RUSSIANS DROWNED IN MAZURIAN LAKE.

GERMAN SHELLS BREAK ICE AND SOLDIERS SINK TO THEIR DEATH.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

KOENIGSBERG, March 10.—The difficulties with which the opposing forces in East Prussia have had to contend during the winter months are described by a Prussian soldier who has been through the long campaign.

His company was intrenched near one of the Mazurian lakes, when three Russian companies attempted a surprise attack by creeping over the ice. The assault was discovered and repelled, and the Germans were able to annihilate every member of the Russian force without leaving the trenches by the simple expedient of breaking up the ice with heavy shells, so that their opponents drowned.

Clad in their heavy uniforms and weighted with cartridge belts, the Russian soldiers never had a chance. Before the eyes of the Germans they clung desperately to cakes of ice, and then, one by one, sank from sight. Not a man ever reached shore.

Sketch

VON HINDENBURG A WAR STUDENT.

NOT ESPECIALLY GOOD PUPIL IN HIS YOUNG DAYS

His First Thought on Strolls Through the Country was the Adaptability of Certain Positions for Fighting a Battle—Looked Forward with Confidence.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

BERLIN, March 10.—Some new lights are shed upon the personality of the now famous Field Marshal Von Hindenburg in a sketch of him brought out by a Berlin publisher.

He was not a particularly promising pupil in his early school days, it appears. When he left his first school at Glogau at the age of 12 to enter a military school, his certificate mentioned that he had failed to come up to requirements in mathematics, the branch which is regarded as especially the basis of a military education. Though Hindenburg is now described as a man of few words, his certificate at that time said that "talking too much in school" was the only exception to his otherwise good behavior. His standing in Latin, German, French and geography, however, was just good enough to pass him, and so the teachers recommended him for promotion at the military school and sent him on his way "with God's blessing."

In 1864, when the boy saw his elder companions going away to the Danish war, he was impatient to join them, his military ambition having already been kindled. When about to start two years later to win his spurs in the war against Austria he wrote to his parents: "It is high time that the Hindenburgs again smelt gunpowder. In that respect our family has been singularly neglected." He looked forward to his career as soldier with the usual joyous confidence of the young officer. "I rejoice in this future filled with bright colors, for to a soldier war is the normal condition, and, besides that, I am in God's hands. If I fall it is the most beautiful and glorious death; if I am wounded it can only be of good service to me, and if I return unscathed all the better."

His sister writes of him as folows: "His military calling was ever the center of all his thinking and brooding. Even as a cadet of ten years he would run along by the side of his father's company while exercising. When, as a young officer, he would come home on a furlough and we took walks together he would often stop on the top of a hill, survey the surroundings with never a word for a long time, after which he would begin to describe to us a plan for a battle there. Then during the evening at home he would take a map of the General Staff, and, bending down over it, study it carefully, making measurements from time to time. He was a battle thinker.

"On his desk he keeps a card in view with the inscription in Latin 'work and pray.' It had formerly stood on our father's desk. When hundreds of his friends halted his automobile at Graudenz and jubilantly honored him for his victory, some climbing into the trees to get a sight of him, he made an upward gesture with the hand and said, 'Thank Him up there'—and drove rapidly away."

WAR INSPIRE FUTURIST.

Noted English Painter Says His School Is Only One Which Can Do Justice to Conflict.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, March 10.—C. R. W. Nevinson, one of the chief disciples of futurist painting in England has been invalided home from the front, where he went six months ago in charge of a motor ambulance.

"It needs an iron nerve to find poetic inspiration in such scenes of horror as one must view over there," he said on his arrival here, "but the war will be a violent incentive to futurism, for we believe there is no beauty except in strife and no masterpiece without aggressiveness.

"In the pictures which I have painted in France, I have tried to express the emotions produced by the apparent ugliness and dullness of modern warfare. The futurist technique is the only possible medium to express the crudeness, violence and brutality of the emotions seen and felt on the present battlefields of Europe.

"All artists should go to the front to strengthen their art by a worship of physical and moral courage and a fearless desire of adventure, risk and daring. Thus they will free themselves quickly of the canker of professors, archeologists, antiquaries, and beauty worshipers.

"Modern art needs not beauty or restraint, but vitality. The sooner the exploitation of the old masters and the wastage of millions of money ceases, the sooner will come the opportunity for the artist to make a livelihood. A masterpiece must disappear with its author. Immortality in art is a disgrace which has built up a prison of timidity, imitation and plagiarism."

Constipation and Indigestion.

"I have used Chamberlain's Tablets and must say they are the best I have ever used for constipation and indigestion. My wife also used them for indigestion and they did her good," writes Eugene S. Knight, Wilmington, N. C.—[Advertisement.

Paris.

COL. DESCLAUX IS CONVICTED.

Goes to Prison for Stealing French Army Stores.

Mme. Bechoff is also Found Guilty by Court.

Nearly a Ton of Supplies Offered as Evidence.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, March 25.—Col. Francois Desclaux, former paymaster-general in the French army, charged with stealing military stores, was convicted today and sentenced to seven years' solitary confinement and military degradation. His name was ordered removed from the list of the Legion of Honor.

Madame Bechoff, the wife of a German, in whose house the stolen goods were found, also was declared guilty by the court-martial and sentenced to two years' imprisonment. A soldier named Verges, who was accused of aiding in the thefts, was given a one-year sentence. All the other defendants were declared not guilty.

PLEADS FOR WOMAN.

Charles Philippe, counsel for Madame Bechoff, protested during his summing up against the imputations that his client had organized in France a spy service and that at her country home she had installed cement foundations for the implacement of German cannon. Mme. Bechoff's father and uncle, he declared, had fought for France in 1870, and a number of her relatives were doing the same today. M. Phillipe also referred to Mme. Bechoff's work as a nurse and as the directress of a hospital. Tears were dropping from the eyes of Mme. Bechoff as her counsel completed his address.

ELOQUENCE OF NO AVAIL.

Maitre Demange, counsel for Col. Desclaux, made an eloquent plea for his client. He declared that Desclaux was not a thief and said that Desclaux had furnished him in confidence the names of officers who had turned over the supplies and trophies to him. Desclaux would not reveal these names, M. Demange said, desiring to save his fellow-officers from scandal.

TON OF EVIDENCE.

Desclaux, who was formerly chief secretary of Joseph Caillaux, when Caillaux was Minister of Finance, was arrested in January, charged with stealing military supplies, and sending them to the home of Mme. Bechoff, one of the best-known dressmakers in Paris. On account of the conspicuous political connections of Desclaux and the prominence of Mme. Bechoff the charges created a sensation.

When the court-martial assembled last Monday to try the accused one corner of the courtroom resembled an army storehouse. There were packages of coffee, tents, trophies of war, big shells and helmets, making perhaps a ton of material. All these were found in the home of Mme. Bechoff and were brought before the court-martial as evidence.

Tit for Tat.

HOW PRISONERS ARE TREATED.

DUTCH DOCTOR MAKES A TRIP TO MANY CAMPS.

Declares British Treat Germans Better than the Germans Treat the British—Bitterness in Berlin Over Way Teuton Civilians are Placed in Hulks at Portsmouth.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

ROTTERDAM, March 10.—Civil prisoners of war are not nearly so well treated as military prosoners in any of the belligerent countries, according to an eminent Dutch doctor who has just returned here from a trip through the British Isles, France and Germany, where he visited many camps. The treatment of prisoners, he says, varies according to the temperament of the camp commandant. Some commandants are very kind-hearted, while others go beyond all the limits of strictness, and in some of the civilian camps the unfortunate prisoners suffer from the rapacity of the contractors who have secured the right to provide the food supplies.

The impression of the Dutch physician was that the military prisoners of war, especially the officers, were handled infinitely better in the British Isles than were the British soldier prisoners in Germany. He found extreme bitterness in Germany concerning the placing of German civilian prisoners in England in hulks at Portsmouth and elsewhere, and he says threats were uttered by the German authorities to send all the British civilians in German to Cuxhaven as a reprisal.

One thing condemned severely by the Dutch visitor was the imprisonment of army medical officers by all the fighting nations without exception. Everywhere these doctors complained that they were not even permitted to treat the wounded soldiers of their armies who had fallen into the hands of their opponents. Similar complaints were heard from British medical officers captured by the Germans at Mons early in the war, from German doctors captured by the British and from others in the hands of the French.

Where Armbands are Essential.

[Manchester Guardian: The armband is exceedingly familiar in France just now, and there are all sorts of mysterious significations attached to it. In a conscript country it may be not precisely complimentary—it may be necessary to avoid suspicion and to prevent its wearer from being arrested as an evader of military service. In its most common form it is white like the Red Cross armlet, and on the white are lines, sometimes in red, sometimes in gold, to denote the exact service for which the wearer is mobilized. Also there is the blue "lightning armlet" of the postal service, and the green, red, and gold of the Garde Civile. It is rather doubtful whether anything of this sort would be popular in England. We, of all nations, are least inclined to the wearing of badges and the most self-conscious in the matter of dress, and it is difficult to imagine the staid and immaculate civil servant parading the streets with a white handkerchief tied round his arm.

UGH! NOT CALOMEL, OIL OR SALTS, TAKE "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS."

Delicious "fruit laxative" cleanses stomach, liver and bowels.

A harmless cure for sick headache, billiousness, sour stomach, constipation, indigestion, coated tongue, sallowness—take "California Syrup of Figs." For the cause of all such misery comes from a torpid liver and sluggish bowels.

A tablespoonful tonight means all constipation poison, waste matter, fermenting food and sour bile gently moved out of your system by morning without griping. Please don't think of "California Syrup of Figs" as a physic. Don't think you are drugging yourself or your children, because this delicious fruit laxatalve cannot cause injury. Even the most delicate child can take it as safely as a robust man. It is the most harmless, effective stomach, liver and bowel cleanser, regulator and tonic ever devised.

Your only difficulty may be in getting the genuine, so ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." This city has many counterfeit "fig syrups," so watch out.

SICK OF HEARING ABOUT THE WAR.

THREE WOMEN IN PRAGUE ARE FOUND BY THE POLICE.

Barricade Themselves in Home with Plenty of Provisions and Order Officials Out After They had Forced an Entrance Through the Front Room.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

AMSTERDAM, March 10.—Austrian papers received here tell how three women who had chosen to hibernate through the war have been discovered by the Prague police hidden away in a strongly barricaded house in that city.

The Chief of Police recently received a letter from a resident in the Konwiktstrasse stating that the widow Betty Stoll, together with her two daughters, had been murdered.

The writer of the letter, on being interrogated, said that for many weeks no one had been seen to leave the house, the window shutters of which remained closed all the time.

A number of constables, under the leadership of the Commissary of Police, were thereupon dispatched to the premises.

No answer being forthcoming to their repeated knocking, the door was forced open by a locksmith.

In the front room an elaborate barricade had been erected. Tables, wardrobes, portmanteaux, chairs, and even a piano filled the apartment literally from floor to ceiling. The police having with difficulty made a clearing in this artificial jungle, pushed through to the inner room.

Here in three beds, placed side by side, lay the three "murdered" women. On seeing the intruders, the three, in an angry chorus, shouted to the police chief, "Clear out, al of you; clear out, and quick too! Leave us in peace.

"For the last two months we have lived here barricaded, because we don't wish to hear anything whatever about the war. It sickens us to hear about it. We are in need of nothing. We have provisions, in plenty."

In the adjoining rooms the police found a store of provisions sufficient to last another six months.

Georgians of the Caucasus.

[Pall Mall Gazette:] Though the Russians are the dominant race in the Caucasus, the aristocrats of the very mixed population of that region are the Georgians. A people of mysterious antecedents—their race, according to some ethnologists, being older even than the Egyptians—they stand upon a higher plane of civilization and culture than any of their neighbors. Formerly Georgia was an independent kingdom, and its people, converted to Christianity in the fourth century, have never relapsed into the Mohammedanism of the surrounding tribes.

Their golden age was the twelfth century, in the days of the great Queen Thamara. Now there are no more kings in Georgia, but an amazing number of princes. It is a Russian joke that every Georgian, whatever his occupation, boasts a title. It might be added, with more truth, that every Georgian is a poet.

THE GERMAN AIRSHIPS.

Change in Shape of Zeppelins, with Addition of Armor, Guns and Wireless Telegraph.

[Engineering Magazine:] The military authorities of Germany have prohibited all references in the German press to the number or design of her airship fleet for many months past, and no official data is therefore available. It is known, however, that Germany has about twenty sheds erected, large enough in some cases to house two Zeppelins, and even allowing for the eight or ten vessels lost since the war commenced, it is quite possible that a fleet of between twenty to thirty airships of this type could be assembled by Germany when the time and hour has come for the great attempt on England, or on the English navy, to be made. Little attention has been given to the construction of airships of the non-rigid type in Germany.

The latest Zeppelins are 500 to 600 feet in length, are fitted with engines of 1000 horse power, and have a cruising radius of 1200 miles when traveling at fifty miles per hour. They carry a crew of twenty to thirty men, are armored against rifle and machine-gun fire, and carry small guns for defensive purposes, and a wireless telegraphic equipment. A vertical passage through the aluminum framework of the Zeppelin leads to a platform on the top, where the defensive guns are placed. Side fins and horizonal rudders act like the bilge keels on passenger ships, and prevent rolling. The engines are contained in the cars that are suspended at the fore and aft ends of the framework, and by means of suitable gearing the power is transmitted to the four propellers, which are carried on a projecting framework of the hull, under each fin. With the object of saving ballast the vertical movement of the ship is brought about by the movement of horizontal rudders or planes, and also more quickly by the use of a small propeller, working on the horizontal plane at the bow of the ship.

THE DESERTED PEACE PADACE.

The Huge Structure at The Hague Occupied by Only One Secretary and a Typewriter.

[Cleveland Plain Dealer:] The peace palace at The Hague looks lonely and desolate, says Andre Tudesq, the Journal's special correspondent, who is the first European to visit the building since the beginning of the war.

M. Cremonicus, the secretary, in immaculate evening suit and white kid gloves, who piloted the correspondent through the deserted halls, said no one had been there since early in August, when a party of tourists belonging to belligerent nations and accompanied by a Cook's guide indulged in a free fight in the hall of arbitration and had to be ejected by force. Tudesq continues:

"The stately halls, plunged in darkness and chill, are not completely furnished. The library contains only sham volumes, whose splendid bindings conceal cardboard boxes. In the hall of justice twenty-five portraits of sovereigns and chiefs of state hang covered with draperies.

"Six of them," said the secretary, "have been assassinated since their portraits were placed there. Others have died a natural death and the rest are at war with each other."

Continuing his visit to the bureaus where the actual work is done, Tudesq found a lonely secretary busy with a heap of papers, which proved to refer to a legacy of a quarrel between the congregation of the Sisters of St. Vincent and Portugal, France and England

A Memorial Afloat.

[Manchester Guardian: The Nieuw Amsterdam, of the Holland-America line, will retain a permanent memorial of one of her war-time experiences. There has been unveiled, in her main companion-way, a bronze tablet presented by the passengers who sailed in her from Rotterdam to New York on August 8-17. It is erected "in grateful appreciation of the successful efforts of both the company and the captain to render safe, comfortable and pleasant a hazardous voyage, when American citizens were compelled to leave Europe on the outbreak of the war." The design of the tablet includes, of course, the crossed flags of Holland and the United States, and also sprays of laurel symbolizing the accomplishment of the captain's purpose, and sprays of oak leaves indicating the sturdy character of the Dutch.

GIRLS! HAVE BEAUTIFUL, LUSTROUS, FLUFFY HAIR—25 CENT DANDERINE.

No more dandruff or falling hair—A real surprise awaits you.

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance; freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and luster and try as you will you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp. Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower; destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.

A Helpful Lesson of the War.

[Birmingham Ledger:] Before the European war started there were thousands of people in this country who had formed the foolish idea that imported products alone were worth while. Happily that notion is being dispelled under the effects of the war. Many of those who patronized imported goods as far as possible have had to purchase American-made goods, and have found them just as suitable and just as desirable, frequently more so, than stuff brought from abroad. Even American fashions are taking the place of Paris designs, and gradually the habit of patronizing American-made goods is gaining strength among those who long pursued the mistaken policy.

KIDDIES HUNT EASTER EGGS.

HUNDREDS LOST IN SAN DIEGO EXPOSITION GROUNDS DURING FUN.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN DIEGO, April 3.—An egg hunt in the Pepper Grove of the Exposition grounds was participated in this morning by 1200 children. About 600 children were expected but twice that number came and joyfully searched for the thousand colored eggs the rabbit had hidden.

Little barefooted Mexicans rubbed elbows with the daintily dressed children of the rich in the hunt. The youngsters came with baskets and sand buskets to carry the eggs they found.

After the hunt, juvenile songs and games completed the morning. As all of the tots were under 7 years of age, many became lost during the hunt in the big grove but a clearing house for children was established in one end of the grove and the lost youngsters were there returned to parents and teachers by Exposition guards.

The Kansas State Building at the exposition was formally opened this afternoon and evening with appropriate exercises by the Kansas State Society. A musical programme was held this afternoon and addresses were delivered in the evening by F. C. Mead of Beloit, Kans., Mayor C. F. O'Neal, Dr. F. J. Hughes and oth-ers.

COVINA PREACHER NOW POSTMASTER.

WINS FROM DOZEN CANDIDATES AND REPLACES MAN OF LONG SERVICE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

COVINA, April 3.—Rev. Raniel F. Stafford, for two years pastor of the First Christian Church here, has been appointed by the Wison administration to the position of Covina postmaster. He succeds J. L. Matthews, editor of the Argus, who held this position for twelve years.

The appointment comes as a compromise after a long controversy in Democratic circles during which over a dozen candidates for the office endeavored to secure the approval of the department. Rev. Mr. Stafford took office on April 1.

The assistants in the postoffice, together with thos who had served as assistants during twelve years, met at the home of Mr. Matthews on Thursday evening and presented him with a gold Masonic emblem as an expression of their appreciation for harmonious years spent under his supervision of the office.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

FRESNO, April 3.—The first interscholastic track and field meet held under the management of the California Interscholastic Federation was held here today.

Central California 33 points.
North Coast 22 points.
Northern California 6 points.

The seven sterling athletes competing under the colors of Manual Arts won the trophy for annexing the largest number of points, scoring the large total of 25 points, with Visalia High second with 18 points.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PASADENA, April 3.—At the vesper services to be held tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock on the summit of Monk Hill, thousands of Pasadenans will join in the most effective and the first great public Easter service ever held in the Crown City.

Fox of the First Congregational Church and Dr. Robert Freeman of the Pasadena Presbyterian Church. Just before the benediction, which will be given by Rev. Leslie E. RELICS OF OUR PAST.

Physical Characteristics that May be Traced to Our Ancestors Living Under Different Conditions.

[Philadelphia North American:] Run your forefinger round the rim of each ear. You are almost sure to find in one of them, and quite possibly in both, a tiny hard lump.

It is only a relic of the days when innumerable hundreds of centuries ago, man was only one of the animals of the wild, and had a pointed ear, like a wolf's or dog's.

What good is the little furrow that runs down from the nose to the middle of the upper lip? None. But it, too, has a history. It is a legacy from the time when the human upper lip was in two parts—a hare lip, like that of the rat tribe. The split has healed up long ago, but the new skin is so recent in the history of the race that hair refuses to grow on that furrow.

When a fly settles on you anywhere can you serenely twitch that patch of skin and shake him off? Probably not, but once these skin muscles, now almost dead after centuries of clothes wearing, were as active as those of a horse. A few—a very few—people can twitch their ears like a dog, and do instinctively when startled, and cases do occasionally occur in which the scalp can be moved at will.

But, generally speaking, our skin muscles are even more dead nowadays than our ear muscles. We've neglected them. The only set still in use are those we employ when we want to raise our eyebrows.

The appendix is another thing we could do quite well without. It is a relic from old vegetarian days. It has been workless ever since mankind started meat eating and is apt to get in the way.

The large intestine, too, is a thing we really don't need nowadays. The many coils of this long tube are kind to the doctors, quite unnecessary, now mankind has become a flesh-eating animal, and merely provide a resting place for germs. Surgeons have often cut out a few old coils and stitched the ends together. We don't really need to carry a great intestine about with us.

Another thing we don't need much nowadays is the instinct to walk on hands and feet together. You think walking upright the only natural way for man? It isn't. If ever you have to make your way along some narrow plank or some narrow, dizzy mountain ledge, you will find the old instinct strong in you.

Charity in Chicago.

[Boston Transcript:] One out of every ten persons in Chicago receives aid from public charity, according to a report of the retiring president of the Board of County Commissioners. The report states that during the current year partial or complete support was given at public expense to 250,000 residents of Cook county. The total population of the county is approximately 2,500,000. Of the 250,000 public charges, about 50,000 were cared for in public institutions. Food, clothing and fuel were given 200,000 more. These figures, it was pointed out, exclude the number of persons who appealed for aid to private charitable organizations.

Electrical Device Kills Insects.

[Popular Mechanics:] A curious electrical device, invented in Argentina, is designed for the wholesale electrocution of insects that are harmful to trees and grain.

It consists of a metallic net suspended over the ground where the insects are to be killed and carried on a two-wheeled vehicle, so that it can be moved from point to point as required. Electric current is supplied to the net at 6000 volts, and this is allowed to discharge from the net to the ground through the insect-covered plants.

A metallic broom, energized by the same apparatus, is used in brushing the trees for killing insects on the bark and leaves.

EXPERT WITNESSES VALUELESS.

They Swear to Only what They Think and Cannot be Accused of Perjury, but do Discredit the Trial.

[New York Commercial:] Leading members of the legal and medical professions have at last realized that the scandals connected with the testimony of experts in our courts are discrediting both doctors and lawyers, as well as the administration of justice throughout the land. One Thaw case does more harm than a hundred properly-conducted trials can counteract.

To check the abuse of the "hypothetical question" in trials in which insanity is an issue, a committee of lawyers and doctors has been struggling with the problem in a sensible way. As this committee includes such men as Judge Albert C. Barnes of Chicago, Dean William E. Mikell of the University of Pennsylvania, Dr. Adolf Meyer of Johns Hopkins University and Dr. Morton Prince of Boston, its recommendations are entitled to serious consideration.

The most radical change in procedure recommended by this committee is to authorize the trial judge to call expert witnesses in addition to those put on the stand by the opposing parties. If the judge selected well-informed and unbiased alienists the system would be a great aid to justice, for the jury would certainly pay more heed to such testimony than to the opinions of men paid for saying what fits in with the rest of the evidence on their side. Every juror realizes that experts swear only to what they think and cannot be convicted of perjury under ordinary circumstances, otherwise the experts on one side or the other would go to jail at the end of almost every insanity case. This plan seems simpler and cheaper than the maintenance of a public staff of experts, which some advocate.

DELUSION OF HYDROPHOBIA.

Rarely is There Any Danger from the Bite of a Dog and Common Sense Should Replace Fear.

[Dr. W. O. Stillman in National Humane Review:] Ninety-nine persons out of a hundred, when they have been bitten by a dog, entertain the liveliest anticipation that they are bound to die from hydrophobia. Probably not one dog bite in 20,000 is liable to cause hydrophobia. Only three or four deaths in a million, in the human race, are credited to this dread disease, and probably three out of the four are due to fright rather than to genuine hydrophobia. We are moved to this reflection by a newspaper clipping describing the death of a man in Syracuse. He did not have hydrophobia. The dog which bit him was shown not to have rabies, but practical jokes played upon him caused a condition of autohypnosis which resulted in his death.

The editor of this magazine has been actively practicing medicine for nearly forty years. For nearly twenty years as president of a large local humane society, he has had charge of public dog kennels which have received many thousands of dogs. In spite of a constant lookout for hydrophobia and rabies, he has never seen a case. Dr. Charles W. Dulles, formerly lecturer on the history of medicine in the University of Pennsylvania, about a year ago delivered an interesting lecture on hydrophobia, in which he calls attention to the extreme rarity of this disease and the many absuses which have grown out of unnecessary alarms over its possible existence.

The point of this discussion lies in the fact that the public has been systematically terrorized by rabies literature let loose by departments of agriculture, and by sensational newspaper alarms. These have resulted in many imaginary cases of hydrophobia and an immense amount of wholly unnecessary suffering. Why not try to exercise a little common sense in regard to this enormously-exaggerated danger?

MORE ELECTIONS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

COVINA, April 3.—C. L. Hollingsworth of Baldwin Park and E. F. Gloege of West Covina were elected yesterday to the Covina Union High School Board to succeed D. J. Shultis and C. J. Hurst. S. A. Stowell was re-elected to the Grammar School Board in Charter Oak, as was W. W. Nash to the Covina Grammar School Board. A. J. Rooks was elected to the Grammar School Board of Baldwin Park, and J. Pearson to the board in West Covina. There were no unusual features to the elections beyond the fact that the vote was larger than usual, indicating more interest in school affairs.

AT BRYN MAWR.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BRYN MAWR, April 3.—The Mission school district, which includes three schools, had its annual election yesterday to select one trustee. When the polls closed last night it was found that Wilbur Bell had been elected. His opponent was Gordon Smith. Bell received forty-six votes and Smith had ten. The members of the board now are Mr. Bell, Mrs. Elsie Giles and Mrs. Clara Harris. A school trustee election was also held in Redlands yesterday and there W. E. Putnam was elected to succeed himself. Mr. Putnam has been a school trustee there for six years. He received a total of thirty-three votes, all that were cast out of over 4000 voters in the city.

ONLY FIFTY VOTE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WHITTIER, April 3.—Only about fifty votes were cast in the elections held in this city yesterday for school trustees. There were no special issues before the people and apparently there was no opposition to present policies in either the city schools or the Whittier Union High School. Mrs. A. C. Johnson was elected without opposition to succeed herself as a trustee of the city schools, and Messrs. George L. Hazzard and Ralph McNees were chosen likewise without opposition as their own successors on the High School Board.

FULLERTON FIGHT.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

FULLERTON, April 3.—There was a big fight here yesterday over the election of three trustees for the Fullerton Union High School district, which includes Fullerton, Placentia, Yorba Linda, La Habra, Brea, Orangethorpe and Olinda. Nearly 1000 votes were polled. O. A. Kreighbaum of Fullerton, L. B. Steward of Orangethorpe and Allen Craig of La Habra were elected. They were supported by voters who are in favor of keeping Prof. Brunton at the head of the high school.

Grammar school trustees weer elected as follows: A. H. Sitton, Fullerton; C. McGill, La Habra; H. J. Schulte and Walter Parrott, Orangethorpe; L. Von Horebeke, Brea; George Kinsman, Yorba Linda; S. W. McCullock, Placentia.

PICK HANDLE HANDLES FIVE.

SECTION BOSS ROUTS MEXICANS WITH CAPABLE WEAPON NEAR SANTA ANA.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA ANA, April 3.—With a pick handle as a weapon J. D. Teague, a Pacific Electric section boss, put five Mexicans to flight this morning. One of those routed received a broken arm and two others barely escaped serious injury.

Mexicans have been staking horses on the Pacific Electric reservation. Teague tied one of them to the rear of his hand car and started for the pound. Pedro Villa and four other Mexicans tried to rescue Villa's horse after Villa had been given a thump on the head with the club. The allied forces armed themselves with clubs and rocks and ran after the hand car for 200 yards before a rock thrown by A. Arellano hit Teague on the back of the head and knocked him off the car.

Teague got up fighting. With his pick handle he waded into the melee. Villa threw up his arm to protect his head and Teague's blow broke both bones of Villa's left forearm. The section boss then swung on two other assailants and knocked them down. The five men had all they wanted and they beat a retreat.

REDONDO BEACH, April 3.—On behalf of a number of citizens here a reception was given tonight at the Hotel Redondo to Harry Brolaski in recognition of his work in helping at Sacramento in the passage of the tidelands bill, which would give the city title to tide-lands in the city. Mr. Brolaski reported that the bill, after passings the Assembly, was recommended for passage by a committee in the Senate.

Long Beach Elections to Require Attention.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONG BEACH, April 3.—Frank Sugita, Japanese, may die, and Scott W. Alexander, proprietor of Hotel Alexander, is in bed suffering from an electric shock as a result of the escape of electric fluid in the hotel this afternoon.

The water tank on the roof of the seven-story structure overflowed, the concrete floor becoming charged with electricity and as the Japanese attempted to mop up the water he was thrown to the floor unconscious. Mr. Alexander rushed to his rescue and he, too, was thrown by the force of the current.

Other hotel employees came and suffered shocks until the current was turned off and the Japanese and proprietor were resuscitated. Sugita's face was blue for an hour and tonight it was feared that he would not survive. Mr. Alexander is resting easily.

HOW TO DO IT.

Hon. J. E. Raker of Alturas, Congressman, after looking over Long Beach and the harbor here, declared that the people of this city should bend their energies toward the dredging of a channel to connect Los Angeles and Long Beach harbors if Congressional help was desired for the local port.

He declared that the national government would hardly set up a rival harbor here within gunshot of the San Pedro Harbor, but if this port was developed as part of the Los Angeles Harbor there would be good reason to believe that Congress would help the local waterways.

ELECTION SEASON.

The season for elections is now on, and it is expected that, between the bond issues, municipal elections and referendum elections the voters will spend much time at the booths this spring and summer.

The latest election was called last night by the City Council, who placed in the keeping of the voters the question as to whether the city should be bonded for $50,000 for the building and equipping of a municipal hospital. Although no date was named for the election, it is tacitly agreed that May 10, the day before the municipal election, is to be the date.

BEACH BRIEFS.

Lewis Kindlinger paid $10 today for telling a lie to Police Judge Hart. He and George Haverly were arrested for disturbing the peace, and in the course of their hearing the judge was convinced that Kindlinger told him a lie about the case, attempting to shield himself at the expense of Haverly. Accordingly the judge assessed a fine of $20 against Kindlinger and $10 against Haverly.

F. W. Welch, a former janitor at the Seaside Hospital, created a mild panic at that institution by shouting at the top of his voice while running through the corridors. The nurses overpowered him and discovered that he had become deranged. Miss Gertrude C. Brandon, head nurse, signed an insanity complain, naming Welch, this afternoon.

It belonged to Fred Arth and he soon learned his loss, for, with the coat went his pocketbook, bank book and important papers. He started out after Flores, caught him and turned him over to the police. Flores was lodged in the City Jail until Justice P. G. McIver had disposed of another case. Flores pleaded guilty to the charge and was at once sentenced and started for the County Jail. He will work with the road gang on mountain roads.

THREE CARS IN SMASH ON HUNTINGTON DRIVE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SOUTH PASADENA, April 3.—Two automobiles driven by William E. Tribit of No. 2603 Griffin avenue, Los Angeles, and George K. Darling of No. 1944 Primrose avenue, South Pasadena, crashed into each other on the curve of Huntington drive at Sierra Vista station at 11:30 o'clock last night.

Both drivers claim to have been traveling at a moderate rate of speed, but say the heavy fog which prevailed in that vicinity was responsible for the accident. The locking of and dismembering of the front wheels of the machines swerved them to either side of the road, where they were left by their occupants, who were uninjured, to be brought in after daylight.

Later in the night a powerful seven-passenger car, while rounding the corner, crashed into the machine of Darling, shoved it for more than twenty feet and collided with a large telegraph pole, cutting it clean off at the ground. The car bore a Minnesota license No. 1185 and is said to belong to a tourist at one of the Pasadena hotels.

The driver covered his trail thoroughly by instructing the service department in Los Angeles to give out no information and has himself failed to appear at the scene of the accident so that policemen detailed from the East Side Station and of South Pasadena and Pasadena have yet been unable to learn his identity.

Regardless of the great impact of both accidents and the collision with the pole, not a tire nor a windshield was broken and the headlights of but one car were shattered. Five front wheels, fenders, running boards and side fixtures were thoroughly demoralized.

CROP REPORTS.

SAN JACINTO, April 3.—George Clemens, who owns an orange orchard in the Little Lake district, southeast of town, announced this week that his crop of Valencia oranges would amount to eight or nine carloads. The total output of the valley from the Little Lake and Valle Vista districts is expected to reach fifty carloads. Two crops were practically lost as a result of the big freeze of 1912.

Local land owners have received shipments of 14,000 trees during the past ten days, the largest consignment of fruit trees ever received in the valley. The stock is being planted on lands recently bought by the California Orchard Development Company, surrounding San Jacinto.

ORANGE PRICES.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

CRAFTON, April 3.—The orange growers of this district are wondering whether better methods of distribution of the fruit would not result in higher prices for the oranges. The wonder was brought about by the story of C. D. Bost of Covina, who took with him about ninety field boxes of oranges when he went on a trip to Crowell, Tex., with some household furniture. There he found that good oranges could not be purchased and he sold the fruit that cost him about $9 at a profit of over $80.

Bost says that he was told conditions were similar in all the small towns of Texas, that good oranges could not be purchased unless an outrageous price were paid. Growers here believe that at least fair prices could be secured for the fruit each year if better methods of distribution were used. Whether the fault is here or with the jobbers back East has not been determined, but many of the growers in the Redlands district have made talk of an investigation to see if something could not be done.

GREAT APPLE CROP.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

YUCAIPA, April 3.—Indications are that the Yucaipa apple orchards, which almost as a whole come into bearing this year, will produce a great crop of apples. The trees are heavy with bloom and the growers are optimistic over the outlook.

The work of spring planting is about completed. It is estimated that almost 1000 acres have been planted to deciduous fruits this spring. Apples predominate, but there will be several big orchards of peaches and apricots and some of cherries.

The largest planting was that of the Mentone Heights Ranch Company which has planted 200 acres between here and Redlands to one variety of peach, the Hale variety.

It is understood that the acreage planted to tomatoes this year will be almost doubled.

ONLY HALF PICKED.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

POMONA, April 3.—According to the orange packers of this community the orange crop of the Pomona Valley is not more than half gathered. A representative of the San Antonio Fruit Exchange declared Thursday that fully half the crop still hangs upon the trees. In color and flavor the fruit is now in better condition than it has been at any time during the season. The dry spell in March improved it considerably. Growers are not dissatisfied with the prices they have been receiving the past few weeks, but they hope for better prices in a short time. The lemon crop has not been in heavy demand, but it is expected that the lemons will move more briskly soon, as more lemons are consumed during the spring months than at any other season of the year.

PLAN TO TAKE IN SAN PEDRO.

Citizens Outside of Harbor Would be Annexed.

Question of Water Involved in the Proceedings.

Dredging of Fishery Fill to be Rushed Along.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LOS ANGELES HARBOR, April 3.—Annexation is becoming a live issue among the property owners in San Pedro who live just outside the city limits and to discuss the advisability of coming into the city a meeting has been called for Monday night at the residence of John T. Gaffey.

The annexaton was brought to the front recently by a petition to the city Council by Maj. R. H. Raymond asking that steps be taken to include Fort MacArthur within the limits of Los Angeles. It developed, however, that as there were but one or two voters living on the fortification site the project would have to include a larger area.

Sentiment in favor of the enlarged project has grown until now it seems likely that all the area east of the Palos Verdes ranch south of the holdings of the Harbor View Land Company may be voted into the city in order to get water. The Public Service Commission, having laid down the rule that no extensions will be made outside the city, property owners are faced with the alternative of allowing their property to lie undeveloped or annex their holdings to the greater city.

At the present time those outside the city are supplied by two small water plants. The larger of these is that of John T. Gaffey, who under contract with the old San Pedro Water Company, made before the plant was taken over by the city, has a limited amount for sale outside the city.

The large number of new residences built outside the city during the past five years has, however, about exhausted the capacity of the Gaffey plant and it has become apparent that there is no other hope of future growth without annexing.

HARBOR NOTES.

Now that the petition of W. H. Savage for an injunction to prevent the Harbor Commission from contracting for the necessary dredges for the fishermen's harbor at East San Pedro has been non-suited, work is being rushed to get the fill made for canneries and other industries incident to the fishing industry.

Over 700 feet of wharf has already been built and work of making the fill behind the wharf will begin as soon as S. D. Hindes, the successful bidder, can bring a dredger down from San Francisco. To arrange for the inspection of additional piling required to complete the wharf, S. C. Jubb, assistant harbor engineer, left tonight for Seattle.

Other activities in outer harbor improvement this summer will be the completing of the big 1800-foot transit freight shed and the construction of a six-story reinforced concrete warehouse. The first materials for the rofing for the shed will be delivered about May 1. The roof will cost about $15,000. Plans for the big warehouse are nearly completed and will be submitted to the Harbor Commission for approval soon.

Members of the City Planning Commission were here today on an inspection trip over the harbor. The various municipal enterprises were inspected and plans of the harbor engineers for further development given careful consideration.

Dr. Osler on Tuberculosis

Sir William Osler, one of the foremost of living medical men, formerly of Johns Hopkins, Baltimore, and now Regius Professor of Medicine at Oxford, says in his "Practice of Medicine" (1892) on page 249:

"The healing of pulmonary tuberculosis is shown clinically by the recovery of patients in whose sputa elastic tissue and bacilli have been found. . . . In the granulation products and associated pneumonia a scar tissue is formed, while the smaller caseous areas become impregnated with lime salts. To such conditions alone should the term healing be applied."

Many eminent medical authorities have testified to the efficacy of lime salts in the treatment of tuberculosis, and the success of Eckman's Alterative in this and allied throat and bronchial affections may be due partly to the fact that it contains a lime salt so combined with other valuable ingredients as to be easily assimilated.

Widespread use of this remedy in numerous cases of tuberculosis—many of which appear to have yielded completely to it—justifies our belief that it is worth a trial, unless some other treatment already is succeeding. It contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs. We make no promises concerning it any more than reputable physicians give promises with their prescriptions, but we know of many cases in which IT HAS HELPED.

STILL ALIVE BUT MISSING.

MESCAL PUTS LEGS ON ZANJERO AND CARRIES HIM MILES AWAY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NILAND, April 3.—The "mystery" in the disappearance of Guy Alexander, a zanjero, for whom search has been made since Sunday, was dissipated today by the receipt of a letter from Alexander in which he stated confidently that he was still alive.

The message came from Yuma to a water company and asked his effects be sent to him, and that he is coming back to Niland no more. When it became known that Alexander had not been at his zanjero house near Flowing Wells for several days, Deputy Sheriff Pruitt organized posses and irrigation ditches were combed and the desert scoured on the theory that he might have met with foul play.

But, according to Alexander's letter, his worst injury consisted of an overdose of mescal, a quantity of which he consumed while with two vagabond Mexicans. He woke up at Yuma, he said, but knew not how he got there, but, being footsore, believed he walked the long distance.

EVENTS BRIEFLY TOLD.

Southern States Picnic.

The Southern States Society will hold an all-day basket picnic at Exposition Park next Saturday. There will be music, speeches and other forms of entertainment. The society invites all southerners and their friends to be there.

Geological Structure.

A meeting of the Southern California Academy of Sciences will be held tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in the Friday Morning clubhouse, Tenth and Figueroa streets. R. T. Hill of the United States Geological Survey will speak on "The Geological Structure of Southern California." The public is welcome.

Wouldn't Nominate Anybody.

The City Club, yesterday had to postpone the time for election of officers for one month because the members took so little interest in the direct primary system, adopted by the club, that they wouldn't respond in sufficient numbers to nominate anybody. To overcome this situation the Elections Committee was instructed to present at the next meeting the names of at least two candidates for each office to be filled.

Just Misses the Wheels.

Riding a bicycle down the Second-street hill, between Broadway and Hill streets yesterday afternoon, John McMiron, a messenger boy living at No. 845 Maple avenue fainted, fell and rolled, just missing the wheels of a big motor truck. Still unconscious he was carried to the sidewalk, where he lay until the police ambulance took him to the Receiving Hospital. "Everything just went black," he said. A bruised elbow is his only apparent injury.

Long Life Ends.

Mrs. Amanda A. Rivers, 83 years old, died yesterday morning at the home of her son, H. L. Rivers, No. 1348 West Sixth street. Mrs. Rivers leaves four children, E. B. Rivers and H. L. Rivers of Rivers Brothers Company, wholesale produce; T. J. Rivers and Mrs. J. B. Radford. All are residents of Los Angeles. Services will be held at the home of H. L. Rivers Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Fine Liners Coming.

Trans-Panamanian service will be started May 1 by the Panama-Pacific line, when the passenger steamer Finland will sail from New York for this city. It will be followed three weeks later by its sister ship, the Kroonland. Both are 12,500-ton ships, equipped with refrigeration facilities and designed especially for tropical travel. They have speed ratings of seventeen knots and are expected to make the run from New York to this city in sixteen days.

Yankees Looking Forward.

The New England Society of Southern California yesterday received permission from the Park Commission to hold its Fourth of July picnic in Sycamore Grove. A campaign is being made to greatly increase the membership, and it is expected that New Englanders from all parts of Southern California will participate in this annual picnic. At a recent meeting it was proposed to increase the membership of the New England Society to 10,000 persons.

AUDITORIUM OPENING.

Men's Meetings at Bible Institute Last Night—Formal Dedication Occurs Today.

Several hundred men, practically all of whom had taken part in the construction of the building, gathered last night in the new auditorium of the Bible Institute and engaged in the first devotional meeting that signified the completion of the auditorium. It was led by Superintendent Horton, who in feeling words expressed his gratitude to the Almighty for the realization of his hopes. The formal opening will take place at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Seen for the first time under its splendid indirect lighting system, even the men who designed the splendid auditorium must have been surprised at the beauty of the work of their hands. There are no dark corners and no brilliant spots, but the lighting is as even as the sunlight and as soft as the rays of the moon. Masses of Easter lilies and callas graced the front of the large platform and added their beauty to that which the builders had made.

Dr. W. B. Riley, who will commence his series of addresses this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and again at 7:30 o'clock this evening, was among those who sat in the chairs last night. With a seating capacity of 4200 there is room for the comfortable seating of a large audience, and the public is earnestly invited to attend all the meetings.

SERVICE IS ENDED.

Pioneer Who Worked for City and County, Father of Boston Ball Player, is Dead.

C. M. Whaling, a pioneer of Los Angeles and father of Bert Whaling, pitcher with the Boston Braves, died yesterday at his home, No. 157 West Thirty-ninth street, at the age of 75 years. He had lived here thirty-three years, was at one time a member of the Police Department and until recently was a messenger in the office of the County Clerk.

Besides the widow he leaves six sons, Joseph J., Frank A., a patrolman of the city Police Department; William C., Thomas A., Robert M., and Albert J., and two daughter, Mamie and Mrs. J. E. Riley.

The funeral will be held at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning at the residence and later at the Church of the Holy Cross. The body is at the Cunningham & O'Connor mortuary.

RULES FOR PIPE SMOKERS GIVEN.

DEALER TELLS THINGS TO DO AND NOT TO DO, THAT FEW KNOW.

It has been estimated that there are more than 5,000,000 men in this country who smoke pipes. And yet, of all this vast number, there is only a corporal's guard that know how to treat a pipe as it should be treated.

For the benefit of the legion that is as yet uneducated in the finer points of pipe-using, a well-known local tobacco dealer has given a set of rules to cause fewer sore tongues and more happy evenings with the "glowing bowl."

Here are the rules and useful information:

Amber burns, because it is mineralized gum.

Don't bite too hard on an amber mouthpiece; no cement can mend amber.

Meerschaum is a rare and peculiar clay which is found or mined, incased in red clay and kidney-shaped. The only real meerschaum of any value comes from Asia Minor.

Meerschaum does not color; it is the wax that keeps the coloring matter on pipes. Don't burn out the wax.

Don't pay dollars for a pipe that is worth cents.

The easiest way to color a pipe is to use a false bowl. Smoke one pipeful out of the top bowl and don't fill again until the pipe is cold.

Briar is the shrub of the heather (Erica Arborea.)

Calabash is the gourd of a squash grown in South Africa. The first calabash pipe was made by an English soldier during the Boer War.

To clean, pour alcohol into the pipe, which dissolves the nicotine. Don't let alcohol stand in the pipe. Don't leave tobacco in the bowl.

Don't boil a meerschaum in milk. Don't wrap in chamois skin.

Rub water inside the bowl of a new briar pipe. Never fill a new pipe when it is hot.

Don't try to unscrew a bit while the pipe is warm. It is absolutely unnecessary to ever unscrew the bit of a straight pipe.

A pipe is like a steam boiler. There are always fire and water in it when in use. If the boiler got the treatment a pipe gets, the boiler makers would work in three eight-hour shifts.

Smoking good tobacco in a pipe that is just a pipe is like frying a steak in axle grease.

This is a pipe story, but not a "piped" story.

THE WEATHER.
[Official Report.]

LOCAL OFFICE, U. S. WEATHER BUREAU, Los Angeles, April 3.—[Reported by Ford A. Carpenter, Local Forecaster.] At 5 o'clock a.m. the barometer registered 29.97; at 5 p.m., 29.90. Thermometer for the corresponding hours showed 55 deg. and 65 deg. Relative humidity, 5 a.m., 100 per cent.; 5 p.m., 80 per cent. Wind, 5 a.m., northeast, velocity 5 miles; 5 p.m., southwest, velocity 9 miles. Highest temperature, 73 deg.; lowest, 54 deg. Rainfall for season, 15.36 inches. Barometer reduced to sea level.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.—The area of low pressure which was Friday off the Florida coast progressed northerly along the eastern coast, resulting in moderate rains in its path and snow north of Tennessee. Snow was falling in Washington, D. C., at 8 o'clock Saturday morning. The area of high pressure now forms a ridge-like extension covering the country between the Rocky Mountains and the Atlantic coast. The weather throughout that region is generally fair and cold. Frosts are reported in Oklahoma and Texas, and freezing temperatures are general over the region of the Great Lakes, and southerly into Iowa and South Dakota. The western trough of low pressure drifted eastward and is slowly giving place to the North Pacific area of high pressure now off the Oregon-California coast. This depression caused general rain in Washington, Oregon and Northern California, and fog conditions along the Southern California coast. Aside from intervals of fog or cloud, the weather Sunday will be generally fair in Los Angeles and vicinity.

LOCAL FORECAST.

For Los Angeles and vicinity: Fair, except for intervals of cloud, Sunday; northwesterly winds.
For Southern California: Fair Sunday.

STATE FORECAST.

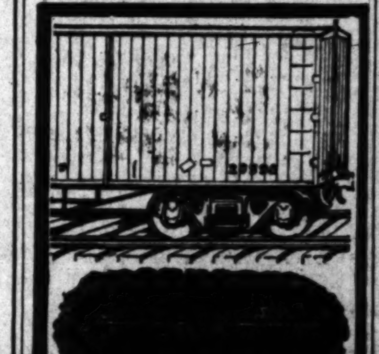
AUTO STRIKES JAP.

A. Asuki, a Japanese, 25 years old, was run down by an automobile on the San Fernando road early last night and probably fatally injured. Suffering from a basal fracture and many wounds about the head and body, he was taken to the Receiving Hospital. F. D. Booth, a ranch owner, was driving the car that hit the man. He said Asuki stepped in front of the machine and there was no possible chance for him to avoid the accident.

WEST END SALES.

The McCarthy Company reports sales in its various tracts and properties as follows: To Thomas Broderick, lot in West Ninth Street Heights tract, 50x135 feet, $3200; to Mrs. S. R. Ider, lot in Van Ness Avenue Square tract, 50x132 feet, $2400; to the E. G. Judah Company, lot in Norton Court addition to Wilton Heights tract, 50x195 feet; to Fraida Najomie, 40x140 feet in Florence Avenue Heights tract, $700, and three other lots in same tract, $2250.



Rides Like The Car Wheels On Steel Rails

That's the plan of construction in the "Creeping Grip" tractor. It lays and carries its steel track. It rides smoothly, creeping over the soil with a firm grip. It loses no power in slippage—it never packs the soil—saves money in fuel bills because of the greater power delivered—at the draw bar. Here's the tractor that gets the most of plowing and gets crops in on time. The can enter soft fields in early spring when other tractors must lie idle waiting for wet spots to dry. By comparison the creepers are lighter on the soil than an empty wagon. They climb and oscillate over obstructions, carrying the machine on a center axle. Two points of contact rest on the ground, thus avoiding jolts on the machine. The frame rides on 3 points of suspension, which eliminates binding on bearings—upkeep cost is reduced to a minimum.

Assistant General Manager, The Times.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 2nd day of April, 1915.
[Seal] T. L. CHAPIN,
Notary Public in and for the County of Los Angeles, State of California.

The Times is the only newspaper in Los Angeles that does not make a practice of permitting newsboys, newsdealers and dealers to return unsold copies to its office. Neither does it mislead nor predate its editions, nor inflate its circulation by printing more copies than are actually required to supply its patrons.

The Times' entire circulation is practically net, and it is more genuine and complete in every respect than that of any other newspaper published in Los Angeles.

WHY BIG MEN STAND ALOOF.

Too Much Slander and Mud in Our Politics.

Candidates for Office Made Scandal Targets.

Why do the truly big men of Los Angeles refuse to serve as public officials?

Why is the spending of $6,000,000 of the taxpayers' money for outlay, salaries and general expenses left to middle-class politicians—great affairs in "peanut" hands?

Why is the supervision of $80,000,000 worth of assets placed in the hands of semi-chronic seekers after office?

In answering any or all of these questions, will some one kindly arise in his seat and point to a genuine instance where the office is seeking the man?

Tomorrow a primary ticket will be made up, showing candidates for all city offices. There will be about 200 of them. Outside of the candidates for Board of Freeholders and a few candidates for the Board of Education, not more than one or two can be honestly put in the class of "sought by office."

Here are some of the reasons why "big" men will not run for office:

WHAT THEY GET.

A Chief of Police decides to run for Mayor. He is immediately charged with immoral conduct, and a great scandal ensues.

The president of the City Council runs for Mayor and is accused of receiving a bribe for his support of the Broadway opening proceedings.

An attorney runs for Mayor and he is charged promiscuously with having exploited improvement associations and clients generally for his own selfish ends.

A Police Commissioner runs for Mayor and he is generally accused of having some connection, either directly or indirectly, with an alleged conspiracy to besmirch the character of an opponent.

The effect of the unsavory notoriety each gets from these charges, insinuations, scandalous gossip and the like, determines public-spirited men to remain out of the race, because they care more for the cleanliness of their character and family name than for the dubious honor of being Mayor.

Without it becoming necessary to Married Sixty-one Years Ago Yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Colton.

He is one of the first of Los Angeles pioneers and helped raise the American flag over the city, then a tiny pueblo. Mrs. Colton began a successful career as a building contractor at the age of seventy.

Recollections.

ECHO OF DAY PIO PICO LOST CITY OF ANGELS.

Pioneer Who as a Boy Made the March from Fort Leavenworth and Helped Troops Occupy Pueblo Here Celebrates Sixty-first Wedding Anniversary — When Broadway was a Mustard Patch, Plaza a Bullring.

WHEN Broadway was a mustard patch and the Plaza a ring for bulls and Pio Pico, with a thousand soldiers ranked ready for battle on the site where the Arcade Station now stands, a 14-year-old boy came to Los Angeles and he remained to celebrate his sixty-first wedding anniversary yesterday. He is Charles Edward Colton of Burbank, now 82 years old. With his wife, 78, and his seven children he gathered at the home of his son, Fred Colton, No. 5133 Pasadena avenue, ate a six-course dinner and took a four-mile walk to settle it.

He was a campfire comrade of Kit Carson, a soldier under the famous Phil Kearney, and a seasoned scout for caravans across the desert when other boys of his age were still in knee breeches. Before he was 18 years old he was famous on the plains.

His wife, by odd contrast, has achieved distinction after she was 70 years old. When she passed her 70th birthday she indulged a life-long desire to become a builder, and she has carried on the work with such success that she has more than twenty buildings to her credit and has amassed a competency. She is now directing the construction of a bungalow where she expects to make her permanent home.

It was early morning of April 6, 1847, that Mr. Colton, as the youngest of 300 soldiers under Col. St. George B. Cook, marched into Los Angeles from San Diego to meet in battle the hostile legion of Pio Pico. He was then touching 14, already a seasoned campaigner, who had joined the Federal troops in Fort Leavenworth.

He had gone to Fort Leavenworth because it was the only city in the outside world of which he had ever heard when he was 12 years old and his old granddaddy gave him a sound trouncing one morning for teasing a horse. Had it been his own father, Charlie Colton thought the punishment would have been well inflicted, but he thought a grandfather too distant a relative to deliver a personal rebuke with a hickory stick, and after the whipping he limped away.

A VAGUE PILGRIMAGE.

"Where you going?" the nearest neighbor to the old home in Independence, Mo., asked.

Young Charlie Colton did not know. He had heard of two places vaguely, a Fort Leavenworth, and he thought a place called St. Louis, but fearing the latter was but a myth, he chose the fort and questioned the way.

Barefooted, he made his way to Fort Leavenworth, with his angry and questing grandfather fifty miles behind him, trailing him by his meals and his bed.

At the fort they inquired his destination. He heard someone mention California and informed them that he was on his way to that land. The reason he had heard California mentioned was that Gen. Kearney had been ordered to take a detachment of Federal troops and proceed to California to take the State from Mexico, and when the troop train moved off across the prairie on the longest march ever known, Charlie Colton was driving a yoke of oxen, dressed in a soldier's uniform, and 12 years old.

At Santa Fe Gen. George Stoneman, who later became Governor of California, took the troops for the last lap to California, and with him was Adjt.-Gen. P. C. Merrill, who noticed the youth of Charlie Colton.

"I know somebody that would like a little buckskin pony," he said to young Colton.

"Yes, sir, you bet I would," said the footsore young soldier. And he got his first mount, only to have him shot from under him two days later, and he walked all the way from Santa Fe to San Diego, and for five weeks lived on mule meat. But they were not allowed to kill a mule in health; only when the valuable beasts gave way beneath the strain were they delivered into the hands of the butcher, and to the mess of the soldiers.

In San Diego, Young Colton first met Kit Carson, red-haired, blue-eyed and fearless, "the best man I ever seen on two feet," as Mr. Colton described him yesterday. It was Colton who was with Kit Carson when the Federal troops were surrounded by Mexican dragoons near San Diego, and Kit Carson went to give the alarm to the marines, muffling his horse's feet in grain bags. And only the chance of a Mexican soldier lighting a cigarette with the old flint appliances prevented Carson from riding into ambush and bringing about the massacre of the detachment.

It was January 29 when the troops arrived at San Diego, and April 6 they came into Los Angeles, marching along a road where Aliso street now stretches. A Mexican flag hung over the town and Pio Pico, the Governor and idol of the people, stood at the head of 1000 armed men, and demanded that the United States soldiers disperse and give up their arms.

Gen. Pico's army was drawn in

TAP SECRETS IN THE SKIES.

Cloud-scraping Towers for Pacific Wireless.

Voices Long Dead may Wake to Articulation.

Llewellyns Get Government Steel Contract.

Intsruments to sweep the skies and perhaps extract secrets of old times from the circumambient atmosphere are now being forged in the shops of the Llewellyn Iron Works. They are the great 600-foot steel towers for the immense wireless stations that the government is to set up at San Diego, Pearl Harbor and Cavite to connect the ends of our far flung nation.

Framed on lines of immensity never before attempted, these stations will have generating facilities that may be compared to all others as the candle to the incandescent light. The towers, higher than any now used for wireless communication, excepting the Eiffel Tower in Paris, and whose efficiency is small, due to the fact that it has no complement, are an index to the immensity of the government's plans.

They are to fling wave lengths of vibrations, in the case of Pearl Harbor-Cavite link, across more than 3000 miles of sea. The greatest communicating link now in existence is that across the Atlantic, slightly under 2500 miles.

Lately, operators at wireless stations have reported sounds as if of voices, music, trampling of crowds and cannonading for which they cannot account. The theory is that as the feelers of the wireless are projected more and more upward into the fifteen-mile envelope of atmosphere, that surrounds this globe, pockets of old vibrations are ferreted out, perhaps the bourne to which the noise of the cannonading at Gettysburg winged its way. It is perhaps needless to recall that scientists contend that vibration is the real perpetual motion, moreover, a wireless wave unerringly follows on the line of least resistance, which is the atmospheric height to which it was originally flung by the generating instrument.

MIRACLES.

So, with the great government wireless in operation across the Pacific Ocean, supplemented by power houses capable of setting up lines of communication in airy avenues, never before reached, it is quite possible that there will be a recrudescence to the age of miracles. Perhaps, some fine night at San Diego or Pearl Harbor or Cavite, the operator will pick up the voice of Moses from some age-old sound pocket, or will hear the discourse of Jesus as in life.

All of this is perhaps, but it must be borne in mind, say the wireless men, that voice waves differently attuned are used in the Morse code of telegraph, and that you can telephone and telegraph over the same wire simultaneously. The same analogy of effects will perhaps hold good with the air drawn wires of the wireless. At any rate, right here on this Coast, wireless operators report, now and then, breaks in their transmissions, queer, odd sounds, which seem almost inarticulate, and which cannot be accounted for on any other premise than that of some phenomena connected with the lingering vibrations of past centuries.

SOUNDS SWING.

As is well known, vibrations of sound remain lingering in the air for some time. An instance is the length of time that it takes an echo to return to the starting point. Moreover, the air envelope around the earth, is but fifteen miles deep. Outside of that radius vibrations cannot carry, as in the vacuum. If sound waves are imperishable, then, say the theorists, our envelope of atmosphere contains all the sounds that have been made since the world began.

The Llewellyn Iron Works obtained the contract for the steel towers of the San Diego and Pearl Harbor stations against a field of fifteen competitors, scattered from coast to coast. This concern was not a bidder on the Cavite towers. Each station will consist of three triangular towers, set on a triangle of 1000 feet from point to point, a power house of generating capacities comparable with that for a town of 5000 persons and the usual quarters.

Each tower will be 600 feet in height, 150 feet in base measurements and will consist of 300 tons of steel. The cost will be $29,100 each for the fabricating and erecting of the San Diego towers and $30,900 each for the Pearl Harbor towers. A year is given for forging and erecting. The Bureau of Yards and Docks of the Navy Department placed the contract.

"It will be about like erecting the steel for an office building, only a much more difficult job, due to the great height of these towers," said an official of the Llewellyn Iron Works, yesterday.

The location for the San Diego station is in the Cholas valley, near Lemon Grove; while Pearl Harbor is the army and navy post of Honolulu.

APPOMATTOX ANNIVERSARY.

Half-Century After Lee's Surrender Will be Celebrated Here With Big G.A.R. Picnic.

The fiftieth anniversary of the surrender of Gen. Lee to Gen. Grant at Appomattox Court House, April 9, 1865, will be celebrated Friday by the four Grand Army Posts of Los Angeles with a picnic at Sycamore Grove. Their auxiliaries and the Spanish-American War veterans and connecting organizations will participate.

A programme of speeches, music and songs is under preparation. The entertainment will be preceded by a basket chicken dinner.

BELVEDERE WATER TRANSFER.

Authority to sell its water system to the Belvedere Water Company in exchange for $100,000 capital stock of this concern is asked by the Janss Company in an application filed yesterday with the State Railroad Commission.

ATTEMPT TO OUST REGISTRAR FAILS.

EXAMINATION HE REFUSED TO TAKE INVESTIGATED—HE KEEPS JOB.

The attempt of a certain political clique to "get" Registrar of Voters McAleer has failed, according to reports about the Hall of Records. Although the County Civil Service Commission several months ago held an examination for Registrar of Voters and recommended an eligible list of three names to the Board of Supervisors for appointment, that body has steadfastly refused to oust Mr. McAleer and name a successor.

Mr. McAleer refused to take the examination after Judge Finlayson had rendered a decision declaring Mr. McAleer was rightfully appointed, and under the law could not be removed from his present position. As David Evans, chairman of the commission, who recently handed in his resignation to the Supervisors, is a bitter political enemy of Mr. McAleer, the latter absolutely refused to take an examination prepared largely by Mr. Evans and his associates, who are anxious to oust Mr. McAleer.

Because the grand jury is investigating certain peculiar circumstances surrounding the holding of the examination, including alleged favoritism and the filing of three different sets of percentage marks of the successful applicants, the Supervisors, apparently, have determined to keep Mr. McAleer on the job he has efficiently filled for more than three years.

PROHIBITS CAKES, PIES, ICE CREAM.

ARIZONA DIETS SUFFER FROM DRY LAW AND ALCOHOLIC FLAVORING FLUIDS.

Cakes and pies, cookies and ice cream have come under the prohibition law of Arizona. In the future the people must go without their usual drink of lemon extract, vanilla extract, Jamaica ginger or any of the similar things that cakes and pies usually contain.

William Baldwin, manager of the Arizona Club of Phoenix, who is visiting Los Angeles, declares the Attorney-General of the State has ruled all flavoring extracts out of the running, particularly the best kinds, which contain at least fifty per cent. alcohol and naturally could assist in the alleviation of a snake bite or furnish the bait for a fishing party.

According to Mr. Baldwin, the anti-prohibitionists are conniving with the prohibitionists to make the laws drastic. They feel strict enforcement means an early referendum against prohibition and even the most ardent supporters of the measure are beginning to doubt the advisability of it. Grocers, bakers or hotel men, who import flavoring extracts that may be used for drinking purposes are liable to prosecution and desiring to be on the safe side, the majority are furnishing consumers with flavorless cakes.

GAS APPRAISAL KEPT IN DARK.

Figures for Fixing Mooted Rate are Guarded.

Unfavorable for the City's Stand, is Impression.

Time for Final Adjustment Only Twenty Days.

The Mulholland report on the appraisal of the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation is still a closely guarded secret, although the general impression among city officials is that the rate-fixing figure reached by Engineer Mulholland and his assistants is considerably higher than the $5,-811,000 fixed last year by the Board of Public Utilities.

City Attorney Stephens won his fight in the Council yesterday to keep the preliminary report from public gaze only after Councilman Conwell had led a strong fight to have it turned over to the Board of Public Utilities.

After a hot argument, during which President Whiffen once more turned a flip-flop, the Mulholland report was allowed to remain with the City Attorney until additional figures are supplied by the engineers who made the appraisal. This will be about Tuesday.

President Whiffen stated that the report was made for the City Attorney, to be used to answer the injunction suit now pending against the city in the Federal Court against the enforcement of the 40-cent gas rate. Not long ago President Whiffen lent his aid to the appropriation of $15,-000 to pay the engineers for making an appraisal to be used in fixing the 1915-16 gas rate. Still later, President Whiffen voted for a resolution assuring the Board of Public Utilities that as soon as the report made its appearance it would be available for use by the board.

Yesterday President Whiffen reminded his colleagues that he has not yet forgotten the art of flip-flopping, for he reversed himself by opposing the Board of Public Utilities' request for the report.

TIME IS SHORT.

"The ordinance calls for the fixing of the gas rate in April by the Board of Public Utilities," said Councilman Conwell. "The only data that the board will have is the Mulholland report. If the board received the report today it would still have only twenty days in which to analyze it. The rate must be fixed by April 23. I don't know why the City Attorney is holding back the report. The injunction suit certainly will not come up before May 1. I move that the City Attorney be instructed to furnish the Board of Public Utilities with a copy of the report he has on hand."

Councilman Roberts objected to this course because not all of the figures

ATTORNEY, IRISH LEADER, PASSES.

LABORS OF NOTED CASE LEAD TO FATAL ILLNESS OF AGED JURIST.

Broken by the labors of a case that ranked him among the leaders of his profession, William J. Hynes, brilliant attorney and former judge, Congressman and prime mover in the Irish home rule movement, died yesterday morning at his home, No. 1019 Beacon street. He was 73 years of age.

He was born in Kilkee, County Clare, Ireland, March 31, 1842. His father died when he was a mere child and six years later his mother brought her family to the United States, settling at Springfield, Mass.

A graduate of the Columbian University Law School of Washington, he was admitted to the bar in 1870. The next year he was married to Miss Jennie W. Way of Ohio, daughter of Judge George B. Way.

He opened a law office in Little Rock, Ark., and in 1872, was elected to the Forty-third Congress from Arkansas as Congressman-at-large, on the Greeley ticket. Two years later he was re-elected by popular vote.

He located in Chicago in 1875, and in the years that followed made a reputation high in the legal profession. He was connected with many important cases, one of them, the famous Cronin case in Chicago. His last great effort was in the Hines case before the Supreme Court in Washington, D. C. The labor which the case entailed was largely instrumental in causing the breakdown that resulted in death.

The deceased for a long time was prominently identified with the Irish home rule movement. He was a prominent figure in the convention in the early 80's and presided at the great Irish convention in Chicago in 1881.

He was a member of prominent civic and social organizations in Chicago and in Los Angeles was a member of the Newman Club and the first president of the Cathedral Holy Name Society.

Motion Pictures of Los Angeles Easter Crowds Will be Taken Amid Rare Flowers.

Easter Sunday in Los Angeles is to be depicted on the motion picture films for distribution throughout the world. Eastlake Park has been chosen as a special setting for the series of views which will be taken by the Indoor Motion Picture Screen Company and Manager Pafenbach hopes for the greatest possible attendance in order to give the general public an opportunity of seeing itself later on and at the same time, giving Los Angeles a better boost.

Many of the pictures will be taken in the conservatory, where many rare and unusual orchids are [illegible] in bloom. The camera will start at [illegible] o'clock on this work and after the conservatory throngs have been mixed with the clicks of the machine, special views on the lake and in other scenic portions of the park will be snapped. The pictures will be shown in Los Angeles in a short time and also distributed throughout the United States, thus giving many persons an opportunity of seeing themselves in a film drama and having friends in distant places see them.

MAKING ORANGE GROVE A FARM.

Wonderful Possibilities of Land are Revealed.

Almost Everything is Grown Among the Trees.

Golden Fruit Better; Purse of Farmer Fatter.

BY R. BRINSMEAD.

To live under our own "vine and fig tree" is no longer with us a mere figure of speech; but it has taken us nearly twenty years to really discover what can be done on our wonderful little California orange grove. It has taken us nearly that many years to find out the truly wonderful possibilities of California sunshine, soil and water; to discover how much can be produced between our twenty-five-year-old California orange trees. And finally it took the jolt given our pleasant little world by the outbreak of the European war to drive home the actual possibilities which have lain neglected these many years at our very feet; to actually stir us into full action and open wide our eyes.

The wiseacre and expert have always told us we could grow only oranges on an orange grove—that is, to make the greatest success out of it; but we noticed that year after year the wiseacre or expert continued to produce fine crops of vetches and peas and many another winter-growing crop between his trees to plow under in the spring for the benefit of his orange trees. So, little by little, the past few years we have tried the growing of other crops, planted and planned to require little or no modification in our regular orchard work, until today we have the wildest range of crops growing for home use and market; increasing vastly the productivity of our land and adding immeasurably to our living.

We have found that the little ranch can feed our small flock of chickens, our cow and young pigs; supply us with all the fruits and vegetables we can possibly require—and of such freshness and fine flavor—as well as providing a substantial surplus for near-by markets to trade in for necessary groceries. We can actually live off our land—and at the same time add to the income from our orange trees; for our intensive farming in nowise reduces the production of the golden fruit. No trees around us look more thrifty and business-like nor produce a better quality of fruit or more of it.

DELECTABLE LIST.

Potatoes and corn; tomatoes, beans and peas; sweet peppers, egg plants, lettuce, beets, sweet potatoes, melons, cantaloupes, squashes, pumpkins, in fact the whole gamut of the most desirable vegetables are to be found sturdily growing and flourishing between our orange trees. Fruit trees, grape vines, berries, edge our out-of-the-way boundary; our asparagus bed fills a hitherto unused corner. Even our street shade trees on three sides of us are more than ornamental; for what more shady in the summer sunny days than the great walnut trees which produce such an ideal combination of beauty, summer shade and—last, though perhaps not least, these days—income.

And how is it done? The skeptical we know will ask. To begin with, individual conditions—of soil, climate, markets, needs, working conditions, water for irrigation—must all play their important part in the selection of crops to be grown; while the size of the orchard trees will finally decide the extent to which the ground can be utilized in inter-cropping. But few are the orange groves which cannot support a small flock of chickens, a cow or so and some young porkers; in addition to providing an abundance of fruits and fresh vegetables and nuts for home use, together with a surplus for market.

Winter and early spring see our ground full, well manured and worked—we always plan here to be forehanded—and when the early spring planting starts, it is in ideal condition for growing anything and everything. Our tomatoes we plant four feet apart in their rows, and interest them with sweet peppers, egg plants, etc., using old tree props on which to train the tomato vines off the ground. With our beans we plant some corn, and so allow nature to provide our bean poles. Melons, squashes, pumpkins utilize ground where little summer cultivation is usually possible, for when once well started, they require little else but water. Our cow feed is largely a winter crop, green stuff being grown for the silo.

CHANCES ARE LEGION.

In fact, the possibilities of production, and at little additional cost of labor outside of that normally required by the orchard itself, on our California orange groves, are, indeed, legion and well nigh incalculable. In the past we have been growing oranges—but we have not been farming; and all can readily find out for themselves that the two occupations truly can go hand in hand, and that right profitably.

The California orange grower, with his perfect climate, soil and ample irrigation water, can feed himself; can bring a variety of produce from his soil which will astonish him in its excellence and flavor and in every truth give him a living—quite apart from the income from his trees—not to be beaten the world over in its very bounteousness and variety. The while not forgetting that where the land is so profitably farmed, it will redound to the great benefit of the trees and increase in their production.

And so we now live an ideal life amidst ideal conditions; amidst a profusion of flowers the year round in (and on) our California orange orchard, so planning that our orange trees, our fruits and berries, vegetables, "feed" and flowers leave no inch of ground unproductive, the while our regular ranch work is but little added to, thus doing away with that old bugaboo—that the cost of labor in California renders such farming unprofitable or impossible.

"I'm afraid I've forgotten it, my dear," meekly answered her husband. "It must be in the train."

"In the train?" snorted the lady. "And to think that the affairs of the nation are intrusted to a man who doesn't know enough to take care of a woman's umbrella!"

SAME AGE, HURTS AND SAD CAUSE.

SMALL LADS, STRUCK BY AUTOS, COMPARE NOTES UPON HOSPITAL COTS.

William Norment of No. 133 South Figueroa street and John Smith of No. 713 Banning street, met at the Receiving Hospital, late yesterday afternoon and, comparing notes as they lay side by side, found that besides being of the same age, they had experiences in common that were interesting, though painful.

"My name's John; what's your's?" said one of the boys.

"My name is Bill. I'm 8. How old are you?" was the reply.

"I'm 8-going-on-9. What hit you?"

"An automobile."

"Same here. Gee, but my head aches."

"So does mine. My knee is skinned, too."

"Well, my ankle is sprained and I'll bet it hurts worse than your knee."

It was found each of the boys had bruises over his left ear and although both were apparently more scared than hurt, the Shubin boy suffered slight concussion of the brain.

George W. Bush of No. 411 Mount Washington drive was the owner and driver of the car that hit little William. He was taking his three small children and a nurse girl for a ride and said that the lad jumped from between two street cars directly in front of his automobile at Third and Figueroa streets. T. G. Collins of No. 1811 West Forty-first place, who saw the accident, brought the Norment boy to the hospital and he was closely followed by Mr. Bush.

The Shubin boy was struck by an automobile truck, owned by the Cudahy Packing Company. H. W. Dayman was the driver.

OLD SOUTHWEST TO LIVE AGAIN.

NINE DAYS LONG WILD BE THE COMING RODEO.

Official Programme Just Announced Contains Much of Promise in the Way of Excitement in the Westerner's Land that was Once Famous for its Wildness.

The official programme for the 1915 rodeo has been issued.

The round-up, as it will be held from May 1 to 9, inclusive, at the 1915 Stadium, East Thirty-fifth street and Hooper avenue, will be one of the series of big open-air entertainments provided by the city and county for Los Angeles' eastern visitors this year.

Included in the programme each afternoon of the nine days will be fifteen events, in each of which there will be cash prizes.

The first event each day will be the bucking contest for the championship of the old Southwest. The winner for the nine days will receive a gold belt, in addition to the first cash prize.

The most famous bucking horses in the world will be used in this number and four cash prizes will be awarded daily.

The other events, in the order of their appearance, will be:

Steer-roping contest for championship of the old Southwest; cattle-separating contest for championship of the old Southwest; cowboy relay races, cowgirl relay races, pony express races, stage coach races, cowboy standing races, chuck wagon races, cowboy quick-change races, potato races, rep races, range races, single-stake race and cowgirl pony races.

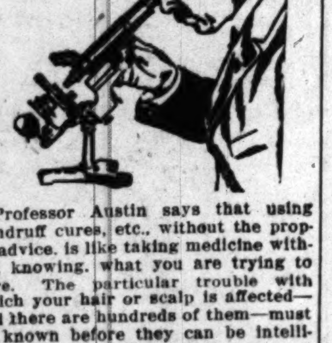
The winner in each of the first five events will not be determined until the ninth day and to each one of such five will be awarded, in addition to cash prizes, gold belts and trophies.

The first entry in the cowgirls' relay race was made yesterday by Rose Gibson, who, mounted upon wild horses, has ridden away in the past with much prize money.

Up to 30 Years Ago Causes of Hair and Scalp Troubles Were Practically Unknown.

Then Prof. John H. Austin Discovered That With the Aid of a Powerful Microscope the Origin of the Troubles Could Be Traced and a Cure Effected.

The people of Los Angeles are especially fortunate in being able to consult with this great professor—who has won medals and government recognition for his work in both Europe and America—at Hamburger's.



Professor Austin says that using dandruff cures, etc., without the proper advice, is like taking medicine without knowing what you are trying to cure. The particular trouble with which your hair or scalp is affected—and there are hundreds of them—must be known before they can be intelligently treated. For example, one person may require an astringent, another a healing ointment, another an antiseptic for an itching scalp, which is caused by vegetable parasites, and still another something to relieve an excessive oily condition.

With the aid of the most powerful compound microscope ever brought to Los Angeles, Professor Austin is able to quickly determine the exact cause of the trouble, and will tell each one what is best to do in his or her particular case.

Both men and women are invited to take advantage of Hamburger's liberal offer of a free examination by Professor Austin. Women need not take down their hair for the examination. His office hours are from 10 to 12 in the morning and 2 to 4 in the afternoon. Private office, Second Floor, Hamburger's, Broadway, Eighth and Hill streets.

Growing! Growing!

Our garment department has been growing so rapidly that our buying chief, Mr. Arthur Kollins, has found it necessary to spend the greater part of his time the last few months, in the New York market.

LOOK for our big ad of silks, laces and cotton weaves on back page of Society Section!

Jacoby Bros.

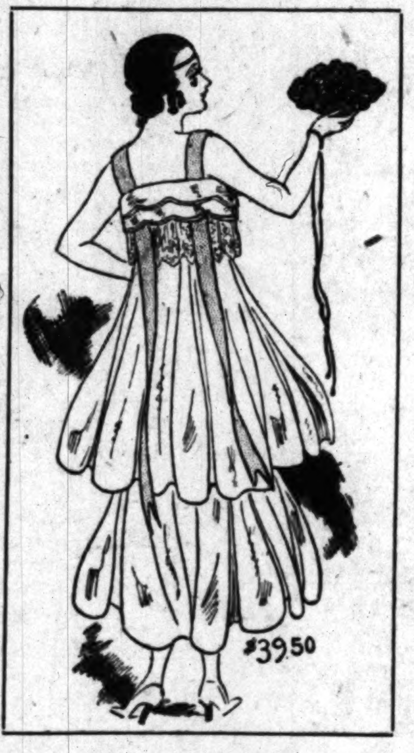
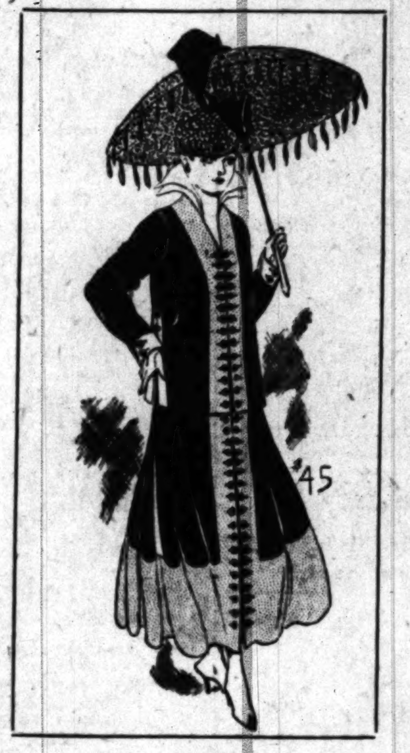
NEW velvet ribbons are here now in all the widths and colors most in demand—Lowly priced!

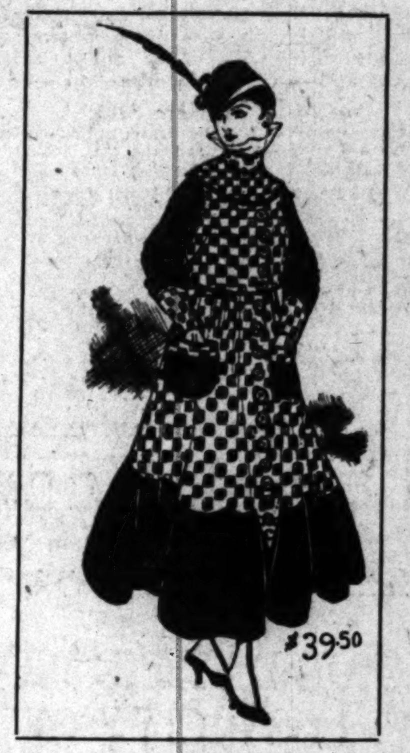
The new things first!

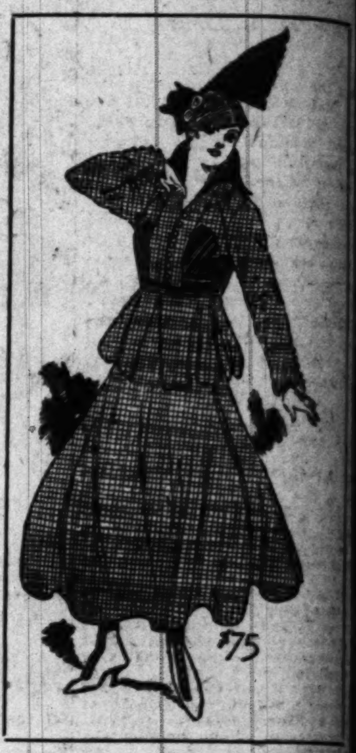
Because our garment chief has been in the New York market continually for weeks past, we have received all of the really worth-while novelties but a few days later than they made their appearance in New York.

A veritable exposition of the new!









New suits—new frocks—new coats—worlds of them have just come in time for this Monday showing!

—These last few days our receiving room force has been busy as busy could be—opening the box after box of new things which have come piling in by Express.

—New suits of silk poplin and of silk faille have come to sell at $29.50 and up to $75.00 (note the one pictured above at the extreme right—it's a clever check in black and oyster gray with rich velvet collar in purple)—then there are suits of splendid serges and gabardines and wool poplins and some in combinations of taffeta and serge like the one pictured above at $45.00.

—Very smart new Street frocks of taffeta, and of crepes, and of satin de chines are here now at prices ranging all the way from $15.00 to $45.00—and there are evening gowns—some dainty little affairs as low as $16.50 and others up to gorgeous beauties at $75.00.

—And there are delightful new lingerie frocks ready, too—the very ones that women will want for the many post-lenten affairs which have been planned for the next few weeks.

—A splendid showing of these new things has been arranged on the 3rd floor for Monday—you are welcome to come looking.

Stunning new hats from "Vogue", from "Rawak" and from our own workrooms!

Untrimmed hat shapes

AT 95c are shapes of rough straws and of silk and straw combinations in a great assortment of styles.

AT $1.95 are hemp and Milan hemp shapes in turbans, sailors, tricornes and shepherdess models.

At $3.95 are shapes of finest quality Swiss Milan hemp—many are hand blocked.

AT $4.95 to $9.75 are hand blocked shapes of Lizeret, Milan and Milan hemp.

—If you were to judge by the showing of new hats which we have made ready for this coming Monday, you would say that this was the week before Easter instead of the week after—yet, in spite of the fact that these hats are as new as new can be, they're priced just as you expect to find hats priced at this season—wonderfully low.

—There are medium and large single and double brimmed sailors of black Lizeret straw with quills and wing trimmings in black and in white.

—Then there are extremely large white hemp sailors—some with black bands of Lizeret straw—many have very striking ribbon and wing trimmings.

—And there are some very new "fore-and-aft" black sailors with novelty quill trimmings in brilliant colorings—and there are chic little close fitting turbans of Milan, of Milan hemp and of Lizeret with decidedly different wing trimmings. Yes, there are genuine, hand-blocked Neapolitan hats in models designed especially for afternoon and party wear, too.

—Prices range from $5.00 to $18.50 and more!

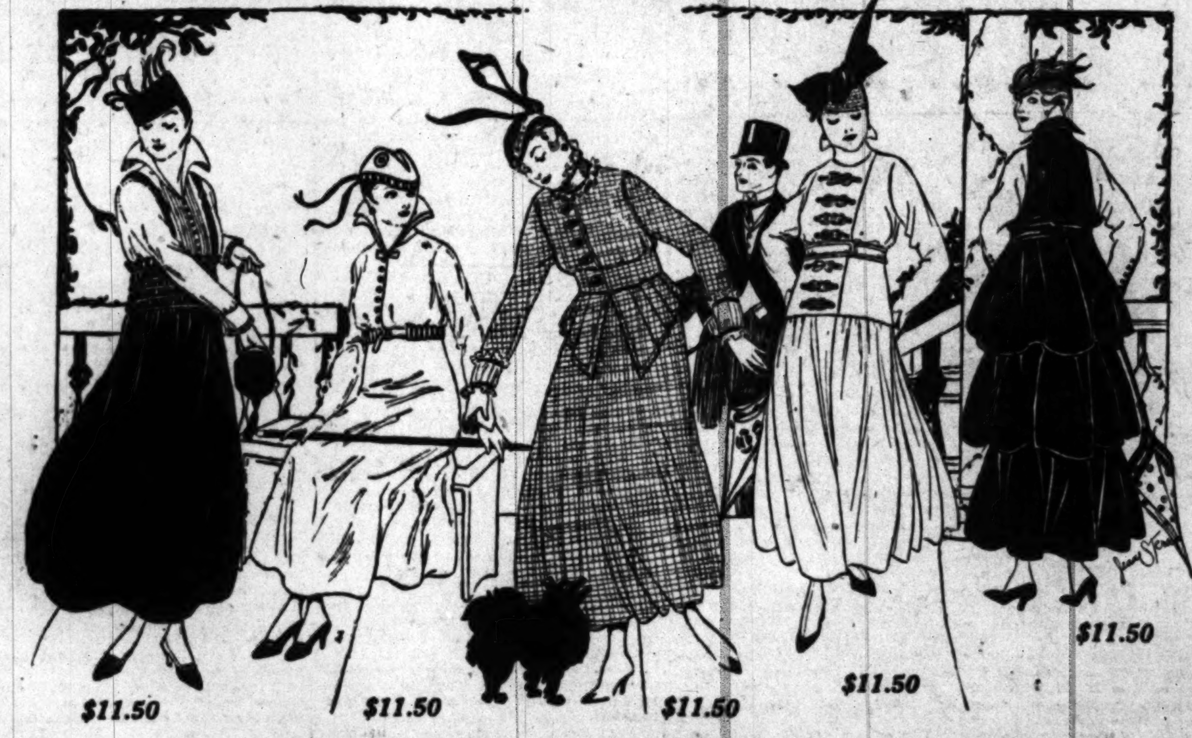
We trim all hats free when materials are bought here!

475 frocks, like the ones pictured, go into a great Monday sale at $11.50



—There would be only one way in which we could show you, the real extraordinariness of these dresses—and that would be to show you the dresses themselves—that's why we've given over a good share of our great center window to their display today!

—There are four hundred and seventy-five of them in all—some of taffeta, and others of crepe de chine, of crepe meteor, of charmeuse, of silk poplin, of silk faille and of fancy serges in an almost endless assortment of styles and colors—all sizes.

oral Considerations Keep Discoverer in Doubt.

After a life-long study of high ex- sives, Maj. S. D. Rogers, U.S.A. tired,) of Sacramento, discovered chemical combination that might y an important part in the Euro- n war—if he should decide he has moral right to dispose of a secret t would result in the destruction thousands of human lives.

A native-born Englishman who mpathizes strongly with the allies the conflict witnessed a highly suc- ful demonstration of Maj. Rogers's covery two months ago in Sacra- nto. Recently the chemist received mmunication from semi-official rces in England, making tentative ers to purchase the secret.

Mrs. Rogers, who has been her sband's confidant and adviser in siness matters for many years, is osed to the sale of the formula. j. Rogers is undecided. He held a nference with several friends at the rk yesterday to ask advice on the rplexing question.

While Maj. Rogers was in the army made several discoveries which re patented and are now the prop- y of the government. The inven- is said to have been paid $110,000 the government for the mechanism a submarine mine. These are ations Maj. Rogers believes that ics prevent him from discussing. He s more at liberty, however, to talk the discovery in which the English ress interest.

"For many years the trend of war- e was humane," Maj. Rogers de- red yesterday. "Steel bullets, for tance, are much more humane than old-fashioned lead bullets. The el bullet wounds a soldier and puts n out of business, but is not so like- to kill. There have been instances ere men were shot through the d with steel bullets and lived.

"In the present European war there s been a return to the barbaric— ancient idea of working as much struction of life and property as sible. The idea occurred to me to to discover an explosive that would st nearly conform to the ideas ich inspire the present fighting.

"I have discovered an explosive in form of a liquid which has ter- c power. One drop of the liquid ll cause vast damage. It explodes matter upon what it falls—human ings, houses, earth or water. I in- nted it with the idea that it might used in an aircraft and dropped on the enemy.

"The success of the explosive was own at a private demonstration in cramento. An Englishman and for- er business associate was present. He rote to England of my discovery and have since received communications the subject.

"My wife is opposed to my selling e secret. I am undecided and am aiting for further advice before I ecide definitely. My friends are vided on the subject. Some of them y I would be committing a great oral wrong to be a party to the hole-sale destruction of life.' Others y it will take something like that end the struggle and believe the d justifies the means."

STUDIES CALIFORNIANS' NEEDS AS EDISON'S ENVOY.

His Only Woman Representative Testing Diamond Disc Under Conditions on Mount Lowe, Striving to Aid Helen Keller, and Finding this Land of Few Wants.

The only woman among the 2000 and more representatives employed by Thomas A. Edison to carry his doctrine of scientific help to mankind throughout the world, Mrs. Ida M. Ilsen, who for several years has been employed as special investigator for the great inventor, is in Los Angeles. Mrs. Ilsen is not here on a special mission. She said last night Mr. Edison has never given her a direct order. She goes where she pleases and does what she pleases, but always with the view of working toward some definite end that may assist Mr. Edison in any one of his great inventions.

Mrs. Ilsen came to California with the intention of testing the new diamond disc records in the dry air of the Mt. Lowe observatory. But since her arrival she has done many things in addition to this. She has investigated and forwarded to Mr. Edison, for approval, plans for a new instrument by which Helen Keller may study and acquire a better enunciation. With the aid of Prof. Larkin of the Mt. Lowe observatory she has studied the effects of the powerful Mt. Lowe searchlight on the diamond disc. Incidentally, she is studying the needs of Californians, with the object in view of reporting to Mr. Edison so he may work to help us all.

"As yet I haven't found much that you lack," Mrs. Ilsen said last night. "You seem so perfectly happy in this heavenly land of yours I really cannot see how things can be improved upon.

"The only room for invention I can see at the present moment is in devising some method by which the frosts may be feared no longer. Of course, you have your smudge pots now, but they are not only inadequate, but tiresome to watch. Perhaps Mr. Edison can help you. I don't know. To me, he is such a wonderful man he seems to be able to do almost anything.

"I love your country out here and fully intend to stay here quite a while. I have rented a bungalow in Huntington Park where I will remain when not touring the country looking for new ideas."

Mrs. Ilsen seemed to deprecate the idea of being the only woman representative of Mr. Edison and talked unwillingly about her appointment.

"I always have been an admirer of that great man," she said. "I was teaching school in the East some years ago when he gave a lecture for our benefit. After the lecture I was talking with him. There was several others around. He seemed to like something I said and asked me to call on him at his laboratory. When I called, he asked me how I would like to work for him. I said I would like it very much.

"Since that time I have been a sort of special investigator for him. I can go lots of places where men cannot go, and with my woman's instinct, I can sometimes get information a man cannot.

"Some people do not realize Mr. Edison is almost deaf," Mrs. Ilsen continued. "It is marvelous how he has held up under this affliction.

"I was in the East when the great factory burned. Mr. Edison took it philosophically. He merely started all over again the next morning."

Mrs. Ilsen will stay in California several months. From here she will travel north toward no special destination. She keeps in touch with Mr. Edison by wire, using a special code from which Mr. Edison can read at a glance just what Mrs. Ilsen reports.

The Smuggler's Ruse.

[Tit-Bits:] The Customhouse officials at Great-sea-on-the-Crab were on the alert. Rumors of smuggling of contraband goods had reached them from all sources. Every official was eyeing the other with suspicion. Now or never was the chance for promotion, and when the steamer from France hove in sight they all rushed down the quay. One by one the passengers came off the ship, and each was carefully questioned and searched, but nothing was found. It seemed, indeed, as if the Customhouse were to lose their prey again. The men in brass buttons were growing desperate. Suddenly there came down the gangway a passenger holding his handkerchief to his eye.

"Hi, there!" shouted one of the officers. "Why are you holding your handkerchief to your eye?"

The traveler removed the piece of linen from his eye.

"I've got a bit of cigarette ash in it," he replied.

A smile of satisfaction broke over the features of the Customs man.

"Foreign substance concealed," he said. "I'll trouble you for duty. This way, please."

have been presented. However, it developed that Roderick MacKay, one of the engineers, furnished the City Attorney with supplementary data yesterday morning. Other data, said Mr. MacKay, would be furnished at once, making enough to supply the board with all needed in its rate-making analysis. He said, however, that further details would be ready for filing Tuesday.

"The figures we have filed need a legal opinion," said Mr. MacKay. "For instance, the question of street paving. This is not an engineering but a legal question, as to whether the companies should be given credit for the cost of pavements above their mains. We have put in the report what it would cost to reproduce the mains and therefore figured in the item of paving. We also show what it costs the gas company to do the paving.

LEGAL OPINION.

"I have advised that the item of paving should not go into the matter of valuation," said the City Attorney. "I hold that paving is not an item to be included in the cost. It is not a part of our reproduction theory."

President Whiffen and Councilman Conwell had an interesting tilt in which the former asserted the figures were compiled for the City Attorney. Mr. Conwell called his attention to the resolution of the Council throwing the figures to the board.

Councilman Bryant made a futile attempt to have the figures referred to the committee of the whole.

"That," said Councilman Wheeler, "would be equivalent to issuing copies of the report to the press, for the newspapermen, he said, have a way of worming facts from the committee of the whole."

Councilman Conwell's was the only negative vote on the motion to allow the mooted report to remain with the City Attorney.

AD CLUB LUNCHEON.

How Henry Ford, the automobile magnate, plans to spend the largest advertising appropriation ever made during the coming year will be told at the meeting of the Los Angeles Ad Club on Tuesday, where Norville A. Horkins, general sales manager of the Ford company, will be the guest of honor. Mr. Horkins is visiting the local factory. President Pieper will himself be chairman of the day on Tuesday at the Clark Hotel. Other speakers include J. A. Graves of the Farmers' and Merchants' National Bank, who will talk on "Present Conditions," and Superintendent of Schools Francis, whose topic will be "The Boy Scout Movement."

FINAL PROOF.

If the war ends by leaving the nations of Europe just where they were before it started, the monstrous folly and futility of all of this wholesale slaughter may even become clear to the participants.

A SAVING CLAUSE.

Whatever may be said against the new jitney bus ordinance of Portland, it has one ideal provision. It prohibits cars from carrying more passengers then they will normally seat. The jitney busses in Los Angeles threaten to expatriate a large number of citizens by converting them into Laplanders.

FAIRS ENOUGH.

The State Board of Agriculture has wisely decided not to hold the usual State fair at Sacramento this year. They might hold it, but nobody would ever hear about it if they did. California is a great State, but a world's fair at San Francisco and another fair covering the whole region of the prehistoric at San Diego is just about as much as it can stand up to in any one year.

BITE TO HIS PEN.

Ambrose Bierce did not perish in Mexico, but is fighting in France. Bierce may have decided that the sword is mightier than the pen, but he gave his mighty pen a valiant tussle for at least fifty years before he reached this conclusion. The Germans may be more afraid of the Bierce sword than the pen, but the average American would sooner trust this hoary old satirist with a cannon than with the stub of a lead pencil.

A FAIR EXCHANGE.

Secretary Bryan has requested of the Turkish government that it protect Americans in Persia. The Turkish government has responded by requesting the United States to protect Turks in Mexico. One is reminded of the comment of the Virginia City gambler who was persuaded to attend divine service. The minister preached from the text, "As in Adam all died, so in Christ all were made alive." "What did you think of it Joe?" said a friend. "Why," replied Joe, "it is the fairest thing I ever knew."

LIMITED RATIONS.

Physicians say that sixteen ounces of food per diem will maintain life in a human being, although commonly two or three times that amount is consumed. The French delegates who are intrusted with the duty of providing food for the people of communes who are cut off from the rest of the country by the German army estimate that they can keep their people alive on nine and one-half ounces of food each day—six and one-half ounces of flour, one ounce of beans, one ounce of rice and one ounce of bread.

It is to be hoped that the experiment will not result as did that of the farmer who tried giving his horse only two feeds per week—just as the experiment succeeded the horse died.

RESERVE FORCE.

When a man's hand is thick in the palm it is a proof of reserve strength. Such a man might be brought low with disease a dozen times, but he would always come out of it entirely fit for the struggle to survive. A man with a thin hand is likely to be snuffed out by the first big blast in his direction, unless he happens to have that clear, mental vitality and powerful will sometimes associated with leanness. In such a case a man is thin simply because his mental energy admits of no surplus of flesh. Too many people are always on the ragged edge of existence. They keep going by sheer will power without an ounce of reserve strength. They look as well as anybody else, but their feet are always trifling with the precipice. Keep away from the edge of the abyss. There may come a time when you need room for a little staggering.

HIS GREATEST STROKE

The death of Baron Rothschild should stimulate a rereading of that cleverly-written play, "The Five Frankfurters." This probably would not make much of a stage production, but it is a charming account of the inception of the Rothschild fortune and presents an excellent idea of the family's strength and unity. The play shows a keen insight of business principles, fine appreciation of family honor and considerable and intimate knowledge of the Rothschild family history.

There is probably no doubt that Nathan Mayer Rothschild, the family head who has just died, will be chiefly distinguished in history for the fact that he made the victory of Japan possible over Russia. He no doubt found Japan a legitimate business investment and could loan that nation money with perfect consistency as an English citizen. This last assumption is clearly evinced by the subsequent Japanese-English alliance. Nevertheless the world has been certain enough that Baron Rothschild was not so much assisting Japan or making a friend for England as striking a blow at Russia in retaliation for the persecution of his own race in the domain of the Czar. It is perhaps the most remarkable example of racial revenge in the world ever to have been directed by a single person. Japan earned its victory, but it probably never could have financed its war if Rothschild had not entertained this remarkable motive for his astounding business transaction.

A PLAN OF PEACE.

Charles N. Bernheimer, chairman of the Committee on Arbitration of the New York Chamber of Commerce, has published a pamphlet submitting "A Business Man's Plan for Settling the War in Europe."

The foundation of Mr. Bernheimer's plan, as explained in a letter to The Times, is to overcome bitterness and antagonism between contending sides. With the engine of public opinion he proposes to accomplish this and pave the way for a settlement less cruel than elimination of one party to the contest by the other. Public opinion can prevent strife, or if strife has been commenced, it can help in the disposition of it without dishonor to any of those concerned.

Mr. Bernheimer finds a striking resemblance between the elements involved in the present international crisis and the matters in ordinary commercial life that come for mediation before the Committee on Arbitration of the New York Chamber of Commerce.

In such arbitrations bitterness often prevents one side from viewing or considering factors outside of its own case. This bitterness is abated, or is banished altogether, when the impartial arbitrator brings both parties together before him to confer.

Mr. Bernheimer sees signs that the bitterness between the contending forces in Europe is abating. He says:

"When nations or races decide to use force of arms in the settlement of a dispute, they cast aside reason, the teachings of a hard-won civilization of centuries, as means or tools by which to seek settlement. They virtually decide that because a boy cannot tell the difference between blue and green that he must be physically whipped, forgetting that the color may be on the border line and hence a blue-green or a green-blue, or that the boy may be color-blind. Their method to MAKE him know is responsible for the phenomenon that Europe is presenting to the world."

These phenomena cannot last; unreason cannot continue to determine events. War is the negation of the rule of reason. There can be misunderstandings and differences of opinion between nations, as there can be between individuals. War will not settle them—at least not with a settlement that endures, for such a settlement must be built upon reason and acceptance of ethical standards.

The arbitrators—whoever they may be—who shall settle the present European controversy must be non-belligerent, non-combatant and disinterested. They must be equipped with keenness of intellect and tact and must of all things possess the confidence of both sides.

Mr. Bernheimer, as a plan of peace, proposes a commission of eight members, the President of the United States to be one, and the other seven members to be selected and appointed by him. These appointments to be made from the following ranks: Diplomacy (1,) Labor (1,) Army or Navy (1,) Law (1,) Agriculture (1,) Commerce and one additional member, who may be a woman.

The commission shall be authorized by the President to confer through the State Department with the nations at war and the neutral nations of the world.

The commission shall organize an international conference, to consist of seven delegates from each of the nations.

The conference shall have full power and authority to hear argument from any and all of the nations at war, to make investigation into any disputed fact that may come before it, and the neutral delegates therein shall select the three members of the council of nine to represent the neutrals.

The council of nine shall consist of (a) three delegates selected by the allies, (b) three delegates selected by their opponents, (c) three delegates from the neutrals: Immediately upon convening, the conference shall consider as the first question: Shall there be an armistice, and if so, upon what terms?

If by a three-quarters vote the conference shall answer the first question in the affirmative, the council of nine shall immediately convene to consider the terms of an armistice.

The council of nine shall report the results of their investigations to the conference. The conference shall then proceed to consider the terms of a treaty of peace. For that purpose it shall hear full discussion from all of the parties representing the nations at war and the neutrals. If the conference by a three-quarters vote approves of a treaty, the treaty shall be executed by the nations now at war and guaranteed by all the nations participating in the conference.

The treaty of peace shall contain provisions for (a) a permanent judicial tribunal for the purpose of settling any controversies arising out of construction of the treaty; (b) a permanent international conference along the lines of the temporary conference; (c) to what extent the parties shall avail themselves of the Hague Tribunal; to the end that causes of the present war shall be eliminated and the problems arising therefrom solved by orderly processes.

Mr. Bernheimer's plan appears to be an excellent one, and if agreed to by the warring nations, would not only put an end to the war, but provide an effectual preventive against future wars.

The obstacle to its adoption would be that Germany is of the opinion that she will conquer the allies, and the allies feel quite sure that they will conquer Germany. Neither side would probably forego the right to exact immense war indemnities from its conquered opponent both in money and territory. After eight months of fighting on land and sea, and an incalculable loss of life and treasure, no really decisive battle has been fought. Until such a one shall be fought, neither party is likely to listen to peace suggestions, and then the victor will be likely to impose terms of peace without submission to arbitration or consulting neutrality. If this is insisted upon, this elaborate peace effort will be a failure. No plan short of restoring the status quo ante bellum—or some plan no more vigorous or nation-destroying—is likely to succeed; and to agree upon such a plan—there will come the rub!

The Times repeats here its firm adherence to its own heretofore-exploited "Plan for Ending Wars," namely, through a combination of five or seven of the foremost powers acting together with the supreme object of securing peace by fighting for it—by the dynamic "reading of the riot act" to all the other nations—and then enforcing the reading vi et armis.

THIS IS THE LAND.

In some sections of the San Gabriel Valley the farmers already are reaping the fall-sown barley. The first cutting of alfalfa is curing in the warm sun. Strawberries are coming on the market in large quantities. Green peas from the garden adorn the succulent lamb chop. Tender asparagus is cheap enough to be found on the tables of the poor, while the rich can astonish their eastern guests with the first cantaloupes of the season. And this is the first week in April!

What a contrast to other sections of the country! There Winter is only beginning to release his cold, reluctant grasp. Green garden-grown vegetables are almost unknown. Even the Easter flowers come from the hothouses, while here every modest yard has its myriad of blossoms and along every highway the golden poppies are in bloom.

Never was there better promise for spring crops in Southern California than now. The waving fields of grain cover the hills and fields with a glorious emerald. The peach, plum and apricot blossoms give a pink and white beauty to the generous fruit trees, a beauty which reminds one of the wonderful complexions of that best crop of all, the girls of Southern California.

We have with us just now thousands of welcome visitors from the East and it is putting it mildly to say that they are astonished at the wondrous and early bloom of everything in this garden of America. Every morning a gentle wind brings to the City of the Angels from the rich Valley of San Gabriel the scent of countless orange blossoms from evergreen trees. And those who are able to enjoy a motor trip along the macadamized boulevards see rich red Kaiserin roses climbing on trellises and dainty Cecile Bruners holding their delicate heads aloft. Porches are given a lavender hue with laden branches of wistaria and roadways are lined with narrow-leaved acacias bearing innumerable yellow balls.

In the rich walnut districts of El Monte and Puente the trees have put on their spring suits of deep green. Around Lankershim the apricot trees are a mass of beautiful blossoms. All along the foothills from Sierra Madre to San Bernardino the citrus trees are throwing out millions of new shoots. This Easter is indeed a time of great awakening for Southern California.

So impressive is this Southland at the present moment that it is no wonder that many of the eastern visitors now here have resolved that, as soon as they can arrange their affairs back home, they will come back to Southern California and join the army of their friends who already have made their homes here. Every valley tributary to Los Angeles has within it the comfortable homes of people who used to live beyond the mountains. Some came here almost empty-handed and now are living on well-tended farms which they have made with their own hands. The East never can beckon them back again.

The supreme beauty of the land, however, is the peace of it all. People read daily in their newspapers of the terrible war in Europe and the dreadful happenings in Mexico. Their imaginations, be they as fertile as the soil, cannot convey to them the real nature of the horrors elsewhere. So delightful is life here, so generous is nature, so beneficent the warmth and so marvelous the productivity of the land that the mind cannot truly picture other lands smeared with blood and converted into cemeteries.

Rich with promise is 1915 for Southern California. The regular rains have given the soil a bountiful watering and have added to the underground supply enough to tide the region over several dry years. The timely and general distribution of water means bumper crops for the farmers. That in turn is equivalent to better business for the storekeepers of the cities for the Southern California farmer invariably is a good spender when he has a good crop and gets a fair price for his produce, as certainly should be the case this year. All that is needed now to fill the cup to overflowing is the cessation of hostilities in Europe. Unhappily that still looks far removed.

LOCAL APPRECIATION.

We are sorry to see Superior Judge John L. Childs of Del Norte county involved in impeachment proceedings, especially since it looks as if he would not be able to weather the storm. Childs always impressed us as a man of remarkable vigor and common sense, as well as one of the highest personal integrity. He is a red-headed chap, something under 50, who never practiced law until after he was 30 and who had a long, hard schooling in active newspaper work to give him a keen insight into human nature. We hope he is not as bad as some of his enemies are trying to paint him. Several times he has been called on to preside over extra sessions of the Superior Court in Los Angeles county and he has given satisfaction.

WHAT LIQUOR MONEY WOULD DO.

The American Grocer enumerates some of the benefits which might accrue to the citizens of the country if the annual drink bill, $1,724,607,519, was turned into legitimate channels, namely:

"It would pay interest and sinking fund on the amount necessary to buy comfortable homes for nearly nine million people.

"It would buy a suit of clothes for every man and boy and a dress for every woman and girl in the United States, with enough left over to buy a pair of shoes for everybody.

"If the money spent for drink were spent for homes tenancy would disappear in the United States within one generation.

"If it were spent for education every child in the country would receive a college education.

"If it were spent for automobiles every family in the country would own a car before 1924.

"If it were spent for religion it would in less than a decade carry the gospel to every living creature.

"If it were spent for railroads it would buy every mile of railroad in the United States in ten years.

"If it were spent for government it would pay all the expenses in the United States, with enough left over to pay the bonded debt of all the States of the Union."

The Old Men's Opportunity.

[Pall Mall Gazette:] A novel plan has been adopted in England to overcome the labor difficulty in the big armament and engineering works at Sheffield. The clerical staffs of the big firms have been searching the records to find the addresses of the men who in years past have been discharged because they were "too old at 40." The operation of the Workmen's Compensation Act led to many men being discharged upon reaching an age when it was thought they were more likely to meet with accidents. Many of these are now being brought back to their old employment—even men up to 60 years of age.

"Who goes there?" sounded a third challenge.

"None of your d——n business!" was the husky reply.

"Pass, Canadians!" acquiesced the sentry.

THE RESURRECTION.

BY JENNIE VAN ALLEN.

Easter Morning!

But the little seaport village was locked in ice. The rugged coast was like a crystal palace, and far out in the "Silent City" the rough-hewn marble sparkled with frost and the dead slept under the drifting snow.

A young mother wept piteously and a strong man trembled as the hail and sleet beat into a new-made grave and spangled the casket of their first-born.

It was bitterly cold and the clergyman hurriedly read the brief burial service and the solemn words fell on their riven hearts like a meaningless ceremonial. Friends, wearied with the long drive and pierced by the stinging wind, forgot they were in the Garden of Gethsemane and remembered only the glowing embers in their firesides and longed to get home.

"Dust to dust; ashes to ashes!" intoned the preacher, and the baby was tenderly laid on the gentle breast of Mother Earth.

"Oh, he is so little and so afraid of the dark!" sobbed the mother.

The frozen clods falling on the little pine box sounded like bursting bombs to a little maid who loved the baby. He was the first baby she had ever held in her little arms—arms that in the coming years would ache for the sweet burdens of motherhood. And because she had so loved the baby, her mother yielded to her prayer to see the beloved body laid away under the snow.

But in the hush of the holy dawning of that Easter morning the mother held her little daughter close to her heart and whispered the wonderful story of the resurrection until she understood that the laying away of the little body she so loved to touch was like putting a precious seed in the earth that it might live and bring forth a perfect flower.

The little mound was finished. The last word had been spoken. The minister had slipped the Bible into his overcoat pocket. The little group complained of the cold and spoke anxiously of the cheerless ride to the village. The bereaved stood apart, too numb to move, too stricken to speak.

With a child's clear vision the little maid knew that the father and mother were going away comfortless; that they were leaving all that was precious in the frozen ground; that their sky was black with woe, and that there was not a star in all the heavens.

Was there no balm for their bruised spirits? Was there no myrrh for their cup of bitterness?

And then she remembered the resurrection.

Eagerly she stepped forward and her voice rang out on the frosty air like the chime of a silver bell.

"Oh, please tell them the baby isn't in the ground! Tell them he is blossoming like a wonderful flower! Please tell them about the resurrection! And then they'll understand.

Suddenly the storm ceased and the bitter wind stopped blowing. The sun came out and the place that had been so bleak and bare was filled with the glory of God Almighty.

And the clergyman's face shone as Moses's face shone when he visioned the Promised Land.

"I am the Resurrection and the Life—the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God and they that hear his voice shall live. Blessed and holy are they that hath part in the first resurrection, for they shall reign with Him a thousand years—one day with the Lord is as a thousand years and a thousand years as one day. And when this mortal shall put on immortality, then shall it be brought to pass the saying that is written. Death is swallowed up in victory. O death where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?

"Hearken, my children! Rejoice and be glad! Sing the song triumphant! Put on the beautiful garments of praise, for this is the hour of triumph!

"Thy babe, baptized with thy tears, has passed through the jasper gate into the Eternal City. He is learning the secrets of eternity and nothing is hid from him. In spirit he is nearer than when you enfolded him in your loving arms. He has a holy name graven on his forehead. 'He is mine! He is mine!' saith the King of Glory.

"Thank God for the resurrection!

"Thank God for Life everlasting!

"Thank God for time. Oh, my beloved may He touch you with a tender hand and may thy sorrow become a sacred memory!

"And now may the Comforter come and remain and abide with you forever and forever and ever."

RIPPLING RHYMES.

REIGN OF MUD.

The weather was a thing of dread, week after week; all men complained; the clouds were always overhead, and every other hour it rained. Then ducks and alligators laughed, the bullfrog raised a cheerful sound; the rural postman, on a raft, still tried to make his weary round. There was no bottom to the road; a muddy stream, it struck the eye; six horses scarce could pull a load that one would pull when it was dry. I heard the dismal farmers croak: "We're ruined if this thing keeps on; already we are nearly broke—the profits of a year are gone." I tried to show that endless rain was what the country needed most; I talked in optimistic strain, the while I leaned against a post. "This is no time for sunshine talk," the farmers said; "it's vain, indeed, while we must watch our starving stock, because we cannot haul in feed. If you turn loose a joyous flood of language, while our hearts are sore, we'll push you headfirst in the mud, and you will dance and sing no more." And that's the luck I always have, when up against colossal grief; my sunny words don't seem a salve, my chortling does not bring relief.

Few Things Uncondemned.

[Baltimore American:] If we banished from our tables all the commodities which—like potatoes—have been condemned in print, our diet would be decidedly monotonous. "Food faddists are most aggressive persons," Henry Labouchere once complained. "In my time I have known them preach that we should give up meat, tobacco, alcohol, soup, starch (including bread and potatoes,) salt, tomatoes, bananas, strawberries and bath buns. I have also witnessed movements for giving up boots, waistcoats, hats, overcoats, carpets, feather beds, spring mattresses, cold baths, linen clothes, woolen clothes, sleeping more than six hours, sleeping less than nine hours and lighting fires at the bottom."

IT IS NO KINDNESS

to appoint her executrix of your estate with the idea of saving the fees allowed to a corporate executor such as this trust company. The chances are that the trouble, anxiety and loss which would result from the handling of the property by an inexperienced person would more than overbalance the very moderate fees the law allows this institution to collect as executor.

There are countless instances of the folly of such a course. Avoid this mistake in your case if you really want to do the best possible for your heirs.

THIS

Pyorrhea, the most destructive disease of the human mouth—the destroyer of teeth, gums and bone sockets, can be cured—is cured, every day, by the Eastern Dentists.

Though Pyorrhea is present in 60 per cent. of the mouths of all adults, many dentists are unsuccessful in curing it—because of a lack of knowledge of it's specific cause and the required technical treatment.

Many dentists are too busy with other work to give the necessary care Pyorrhea demands; often sending patients to us. We have a list of many prominent citizens whom we have cured. We will refer you to them.

We are specialists in Pyorrhea treatment—patients suffering with this disease must either come to the specialist or suffer the loss of their teeth and other disorders that attend Pyorrhea.

Our prices are extremely reasonable and we examine, and advise you of your needs, free of charge. Besides this State, we are registered in Ohio, Indian, Michigan and Illinois.

We replace lost teeth, from Pyorrhea and other causes, with sanitary bridge work. We make a specialty of alveolar inlays. We guarantee our work.

WHO IS TO BLAME?

Old Man, Presumably Struck by Automobile, Dies Without Regaining Consciousness—No Clew Found.

Joseph Pietsch, 60 years of age, a retired merchant of No. 1646 Cordova street, who was found near the end of the street car line on Washington road Thursday night, suffering from a fractured skull and numerous other injuries, died yesterday in the California Hospital.

The condition of his clothing and the nature of his injuries indicated that Mr. Pietsch had been struck down and dragged by a speeding automobile, but he died without regaining consciousness. The county authorities have not been able to find a clew to the identity of the driver of the automobile.

The body was taken to the Booth & Fitch undertaking establishment and the Coroner will hold an inquest tomorrow.

EXPOSITION CONCERT.

The programme for today's concert at Exposition Park includes two instrumental solos by members of the official 1915 celebration band. Director Tandler has prepared a varied musical menu in recognition of Easter. Extra cars will be provided as the crowds attending the concerts have been increasing each week. The San Francisco commission men will be hosts at that time and it is expected a special train will be needed to carry the Southern California delegation. Arrangements are in charge of O. C. Pickrell, secretary of the produce exchange.

BRITISH ENTERTAINMENT.

As a special Easter attraction the British Overseas Club will hold an Old English tea and barn dance at the Fraternal Brotherhood Building, Figueroa and Lincoln streets, Wednesday evening. A special attraction will be the Scotch Pipers, who recently gave an enjoyable concert here.

SENSATION OF YEARS BARED.

Tragic Love Story of a Man and Two Women.

Also of Political Scandal in Chicago.

"He Shunned by Wife as is a Lonely Leper."

The amazing adventures of B. H. Loveless, a wealthy Chicago attorney, who mysteriously disappeared from that city fifteen years ago, following a grand jury investigation and the tragic story of the love of two women for him, were unfolded yesterday by Miss Alice Swanson, "the other woman" in the triangle, after her release from jail upon a writ of habeas corpus.

Miss Swanson was arrested Friday in a Pico-street apartment house by Deputy Sheriffs Nolan and Fox on telegraphic instructions from Rockford, Ill., where Mrs. Loveless swore to a complaint charging her husband with wife desertion and Miss Swanson with a statutory offense. Simultaneously with her arrest the police of San Francisco took Loveless to jail. When arrested he gave the name of B. H. Lovelace. It was not until Judge Jackson had ordered her released from the County Jail with her 2-year-old boy yesterday that Miss Swanson, in the office of her attorney, gave Loveless's true name and related the sensational circumstances surrounding his hurried departure from Chicago and told of her wonderful love for him which caused her to flout laws and conventions.

Attorneys for Miss Swanson declared yesterday that they will leave immediately for Sacramento, to prevent the attempt of the Illinois authorities to extradite Loveless. She asserted she will stand by him to the "end of time, no matter what the consequences may be."

Fifteen years ago Braman H. Loveless was attorney for the Civil Service Commission of Cook county. A scandal resulted when it was discovered that questions to be used at an examination for policemen were stolen and copies made and placed on sale at a pawnshop conducted by ward politicians.

HE DISAPPEARS.

While the grand jury was investigating Loveless disappeared, leaving his wife and two small children in Wheaton, a fashionable suburb of Chicago. Mrs. Loveless is the sister of Charles Hadley, State's attorney of Du Page county. Her relatives are wealthy and she is socially prominent.

Loveless's father died recently in Illinois, leaving an estate, said to total $100,000. Miss Swanson declared yesterday that Loveless recently began tentative plans for securing a divorce so that he could marry his "soul mate." These plans were broken up when his father died, she said. "Mrs. Loveless first heard of me and our little boy a few weeks ago," said Miss Swanson. "She refused to consent to a divorce. She insisted, according to Mr. Loveless, upon his giving her $2500 before she would consent to a decree.

"It is true that for six years I have lived with Mr. Loveless as his wife without the authority of either law or the church," said Miss Swanson as she clasped her bright blue-eyed baby son to her breast. I believe that I have a better right to bear his name than the woman in Chicago, who deserted him in his adversity and who refused to accompany him West because she feared she would contract tuberculosis. You know Mr. Loveless has undergone more than seventy-five operations for a tubercular affection." She said she met Mr. Loveless in a hospital in Denver. "Mr. Loveless told me the whole story," she continued. "He told me that back in Chicago he had a wife who refused to accompany him—who regarded him almost as if he had been a leper."

"SPITE WORK."

"It is impossible to hold this young woman without a warrant," said Judge Jackson in granting the writ. "There is nothing here but a telegram to show that any offense has been committed and I order her released."

Miss Swanson, her face aglow with happiness, swept into her arms her baby, who is named Braman, after his father, and kissed him and then thanked the judge. According to Loveless's mother, who was in the courtroom, the arrest of Miss Swanson and her son is "spite work."

MRS. CHAPIN AND ONE OF HER PRIZE HENS

MRS. LOU V. CHAPIN TO DELIVER FREE
POULTRY LECTURE

Subject to Be "Can I Make a Living from Poultry on an Acre of Ground?"

On Tuesday evening, April 6th, Mrs. Lou V. Chapin, owner of the famous Pilgrim Poultry Pens, will deliver a free illustrated lecture in the big ground floor lecture hall of the Angeles Mesa Land Company at 433 South Hill Street. Mrs. Chapin's success as a poultry breeder has been the subject of widespread comment throughout Southern California. Her extensive experience fully equips her to deliver this talk on the practical side of poultry culture—a talk that is sure to prove interesting as well as valuably instructive.

Her lecture will be illustrated throughout by colored views taken on her ranch where she and her husband clear several thousand dollars a year. Lecture is absolutely free. Those attending the lecture are urged to come early in order to get good seats as the seating capacity is limited to 700.

GIVES ADVICE ON CHARTER MAKING.

NEW YORK CHAMBERLAIN WARNS ESPECIALLY AGAINST THE CRANKS.

Henry Bruere, chamberlain of the City of New York, was the speaker before the City Club yesterday. His subject was "Charter Making."

Anent the fact that Los Angeles is about to plunge again into the dissipation of evolving a new patchwork charter, Mr. Bruere said: "Keep the crank in the background—the man who has a remedy for everything. Don't invite him in. He'll be there anyway. Don't try to be original; don't be afraid to call in help from outside and find out what other cities are doing."

He also warned against depending on the lawyers in charter-framing. "Avoid the lawyers," said the speaker, "because they have made more mistakes in charter-framing than any other one class of citizens.

"A charter should be so simple that even the humblest citizen can understand it. It should be in primer language. It should express the purpose of free home rule, free from the domination of the State. Details of organization should not be placed in the charter, but make the charter a declaration of what you intend to do.

"The Los Angeles charter should be the best American city charter if the freeholders avail themselves of the experience of other cities. A fatal mistake often made by charter framers is that they seek to be original at the expense of being sound."

In discussing the various forms of charter government the speaker said, in part:

"American experience in charter making points to the three solutions of the important questions of the form of government.

(1.) The Federal plan, with executive functions vested in a mayor and legislative functions vested in a council, as in the excellent new charters of Cleveland and St. Louis.

(2.) The commission plan with administrative and legislative functions vested in a board of five to seven officials elected at large, as in upwards of 300 American cities and a number of Canadian cities.

(3.) The city manager plan, with legislative functions vested in a commission elected at large and administrative and executive functions delegated to an expert administrator or city manager, working under the control of the elected board, subject to dismissal by them or to recall by vote of the people. The principal city in which this form is in operation is Dayton, O., but twenty other cities of varying size have followed Dayton in the adoption of this business-like model for municipal organization.

I do not underestimate the importance of charters in the efficient government of a city, but I caution against an over emphasis of the importance of the form of organization, whether Federal, city manager, or commission, to the neglect of other very vital elements in an efficient modern charter.

It is of prime importance that the charter provide for the right organization of the city government under the mayor, commissioner or city manager. The best way to provide for such organization is to name the departments, state generally their function, and then to require the government thus constituted to formulate and publish a plan of departmental organization. A charter should provide for the keeping of modern accounts, for adequate and prompt reports on city business, for scientific budget making with the fullest publicity for every step in the preparation of the annual estimates and allowances. The charter above everything else should require the governing body, commission or council, to formulate and prescribe in detail procedure for carrying on the business of the city, so as to do away with rule of thumb methods and lay the basis for scientific, carefully worked out methods of carrying on city work that may be perpetuated from administration to administration and will not go out of city hall every two or four years under the hats of retiring officials.

This branch of charter making is not the kind of work that can be done by laymen. City government is quite as technical a business as railroad operation or steel making. The experts of the city government of Los Angeles and men experienced in modern municipal administration the country over should be called upon to help to bring it about that Los Angeles will not only have a democratic and simple form of government under its new charter but a government that will be expected and aided to adopt the most efficient methods of conducting city business anywhere.

FIND SANTA'S CACHE.

Four Small Boys Have Exciting Time in Beach Town—More When They Get Home.

Starting out early yesterday to see the world and finding where Santa Claus had cached about $100 worth of toys, left from last Christmas, four boys, 12 to 14 years of age, were interrupted in their play with the toys by Marshal E. C. Mosier of Redondo Beach and brought to Juvenile Hall. They are Merton Ferris of No. 1126 East Vernon street and Bertie, Orrin and Cecil Meadows, No. 1188 East Forty-sixth street.

As the quartette reached Redondo Beach they started first to find something to eat and while hunting food they found where Mrs. C. S. Rose, a storekeeper, had stored her left-over Christmas toy stock in a shed at the rear of her home. There were teddy bears, camels, lions, that roared, and sheep that ba-a-aed and most of the other animals in the menagerie that the boys carried to a vacant lot behind a big billboard. Then they quarreled over the division of the animals until the Redondo Beach marshal got after them. The boys were fleeter of foot than the marshal, but one of them left his hat behind in his flight and by this he was traced to his home.

Marshal Mosier came to the city and with Juvenile Officer Wood he went to the homes of the boys, who were still holding one teddy bear captive.

FOR JAPANESE PARISH.

For the purpose of securing funds for the erection and maintenance of a Japanese parish in Los Angeles, the Catholic men and women of that race, assisted by all the Catholic parishes of the city, will assist at the bazaar that has been planned on the evenings of the 12th to 14th inst., inclusive, in the Y.M.I. Hall, on South Spring street. There are several hundred Japanese Catholics in Los Angeles, and their ranks have been recently augmented by the coming of four sisters of the Order of the Visitation, who are already conducting their charitable labors here. A feature of each evening's entertainment will be a comedy sketch staged by Wilbert Wadleigh and Frank G. Hess.

TAX VEHICLES ON THE STREETS.

OLD ORDINANCE TO BE REVIVED, SAYS COUNCILMAN.

Failure to Take Action on Auto Club's Request for License for Heavy Type of Trucks to Compensate for Street Repair Starts Talk for Added Revenue.

Councilman Betkouski yesterday served notice that he will bring up the old license ordinance which places a tax upon every vehicle using the streets for commercial purposes. This ordinance was passed by the Council two years ago, but when a referendum was started against it by the small grocers, the Council repealed the ordinance.

"It is time for the Council to take this up again," said Mr. Betkouski. "We ought to go into the policy of levying a general tax on vehicles which use the streets as a place of business. Today we are not getting a penny for the use of our streets for commercial purposes, and we are losing $100,000 that we are entitled to on this account."

"This is a mighty poor time to put an additional tax on business men," observed Councilman Langdon.

The discussion arose in the Council over the report of the Public Utilities Committee that the Auto Club request for an ordinance taxing heavy motor trucks be filed without action. The committee asked that it be filed for the reason that a bill is now pending in the Legislature levying a tax on heavy-type vehicles. And besides, the report continued, an additional burden upon business men now is out of place. Councilman Bryant said that something should be done to make the heavy vehicles bear the cost of repairing the streets; that this expense should not be taxed against abutting property.

The committee has heard several discussions over the Auto Club's request, but no one has so far appeared in behalf of their request. The Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association and the Motor Truck Dealers' Association have appeared to oppose the matter.

The Council finally sent it back to the committee to make a further investigation next Friday when all of the Councilmen will be present.

THRICE RAIDED.

MORE MONEY FOR EXPENSE.

The droning voice of Dave Carroll, minute clerk of the Council, called out the next order of business. Few of the Councilmen paid attention.

"Finance Committee recommends that $10,000 be transferred from the reserve to the general expense fund."

"Calltherollonadoption," said President Whiffen, head of the Finance Committee.

None of the Councilmen paid attention to the calling of the roll and none responded. Said the voice of Mr. Carroll:

" BetkouskiBryantConwellLangdon RobertsSnowdenWheelerWilliams Whiffennineayesyourhonor."

The reserve fund was raided again. This makes the third transfer of $10,000 from the reserve to the general fund. When the first was made it was remarked by Deputy City Auditor Fountain, who watches the money filter in and sluice out, that it was the first time it had ever happened.

Yesterday's action of the Council made the third time in a few months that the general expense fund was replenished from the reserve.

President Whiffen denies that he is responsible for the gutting of the general expense. He is chairman of the Finance Committee.

Relocation Order.

After booting it around from one department to another and passing the buck for several weeks, the council once more delayed definite action yesterday on the relocation of the California street line. This time the buck-passing took the form of an order to the Board of Public Utilities to get together with the Los Angeles Railway Corporation and induce that concern to relocate its line up Hill street from Temple. The line now goes from Temple and Broadway to California and Broadway, thence to Hill. Owing to the lowering of the tunnel, the Council yesterday favored the report of the Public Utilities Committee that the line be operated from Temple and Broadway to Hill and thence north to California. The Board of Public Utilities has reported in favor of the Grand avenue rerouting, being opposed to the heavy grade on Hill street.

Firemen Exonerated.

The Fire Commission yesterday notified the Civil Service Commission that hereafter when there are charges against the fire chief and his subordinates, the charges should be laid before the Fire Commission and not the Civil Service Commission. The commission passed a resolution thanking the members of the department for their efforts in getting votes in the queen contest. Charges that firemen left their posts of duty and used equipment wrongfully to boost the queen contest were made by the Municipal League to the Civil Service Commission and a letter from the latter body, carrying a mild rebuke, brought the counter-rebuke yesterday.

Do Both at Once.

The City Engineer was instructed yesterday to proceed with the ordinance of intention for the open cut at West First and West Second streets through Bunker Hill. The City Attorney ruled, at the same time, that while condemnation proceedings for acquiring title to new streets in the cut project should be separate from the proceedings for improvement, both can be started at the same time, and probably will be.

City Hall Notes.

The initiative petition for the two-platoon system in the Fire Department was filed yesterday by D. Joseph Coyne and George A. Lynch of the committee which had charge of the circulation of the petition. The document contains 40,000 names.

The council will hear protests on April 14 against the improvement of Esperanza street from Seventh street to Venice avenue.

The protest against the ornamental lighting of Olive street from Sixth to Pico streets will be heard by the Council April 28.

TWO IN BANKRUPTCY.

Edward F. Blount, a clerk of this city, filed a petition in bankruptcy yesterday. His debts are given at $1788.49, and his assets at $425. The Western Tile and Fireplace Company filed a petition in bankruptcy, having liabilities amounting to $1615.54, and assets of $3297.67. Of the latter $1653.52 is the alleged value of the stock in trade, and $899.26 is due on open accounts.

MUCH INTEREST IN TEST CASE.

"JITNEY" BUS PEOPLE REQUEST WRITTEN DECISION.

Final Argument Comes up Tomorrow in Suit to Restrain Venice from Enforcing Provisions of New Ordinance About "Nickel Chasers." Say P. E. Made the City.

At the request of the attorneys in the "jitney" bus fight, tried before Judge Hewitt, a written opinion will be handed down at the conclusion of the final argument tomorrow. A written opinion is desired for easy reference by the "jitney" bus people. Interest is widespread in the test case, brought to restrain the City of Venice, from enforcing the provisions of a recent ordinance and to compel the trustees to issue a permit to Joseph Hefele, who is alleged to have complied with all of the provisions of the ordinance.

Yesterday was the battle of affidavits. Mr. Hefele, through his attorneys, Veitch & Richardson, presented affidavits stating in effect that the trustees had refused him a permit to operate a "jitney" bus in competition with the Pacific Electric.

City Attorney Hanna presented affidavits by Mayor Gerety and Trustees Carlos L. Smart, J. L. Lewis and F. K. McCarver. A resolution offered by Mr. Smart to the trustees March 15 and passed by the board forms part of the records of the case.

He is quoted as moving to deny the petition for a license and further refusing to grant any license whatever to any of the auto busses running between Los Angeles and Venice. The affidavit quotes him as stating in support of the resolution:

"We owe a debt of gratitude to the Pacific Electric Railway Company. The shortline of this company made Venice. It would be a great hardship on the Pacific Electric Railway Company and ultimately on the people of the City of Venice to let the auto busses run."

DELINQUENT ALREADY, SO ATTORNEY SAYS.

Judge Taft yesterday denied the application of Edward J. Morris, charged with contributing, for a writ of habeas corpus. Hilda Anderson, 19 years old, was on parole from the Whittier State School at the time Morris is charged with misconduct with her.

Attorney Durham held that the law does not apply in Miss Anderson's case, as she was already a delinquent. He will test the matter in an appeal from Judge Taft's judgment to the Appellate Court. Morris had been given a preliminary examination before Justice Forbes and bound over to the Superior Court. Pending trial, his attorneys sought to obtain his release.

FAR FROM IT. THOUGHT HIM AN ARTIST.

The man who looked like a pugilist lost his girl bride yesterday. Judge Taft granted her a decree of divorce on the ground of misconduct. The girl bride, Mrs. Josephine von Seewald, who is now interested in Red Cross work, brought into court a photograph of her husband, Alexander von Seewald. The picture was identified by Officer Watson as the man he found in a Standford-street house in the company of a colored woman.

The suit was a continuation of Friday's hearing, when Officer Watson detailed how he had watched Von Seewald enter the house. He failed to recall the man's name, but the incident was clear in his mind.

Mrs. Von Seewald was 16 when she married Mr. Von Seewald, fourteen years her senior. She says he had compelling eyes and believes she must have been hypnotized into marrying him, as she admitted he is not good-looking. She thought she was marrying an artist. Von Seewald's occupation at that time was a roustabout in a saloon.

REDLIGHT ACT. NUISANCE COMPLAINTS.

Five complaints to abate nuisances under the Redlight Abatement Act were filed by Deputy District Attorney McCartney yesterday. The premises complained of are located at No. 414 1-2 North Main street, No. 313 1-2 South Central avenue, No. 150 South Alameda street, Nos. 228-230 Rosemont avenue, No. 354 New High street.

The suits are respectively against Francis Schultz and Helen Bovard, who are said to have been arrested a number of times as prostitutes by the police, their fines totaling $300; Joe Martin, alias Oscar Ferris and Florence Russi, tenants and owner of furniture, and E. G. Ord, owner; Louise Horse, landaly, and J. [illegible], owner; John A. Pike, owner, and Daisy Dawson, landlady; Jennie [illegible], and Serafina Poist, and Victoria B. Trask, owner.

In the case of the Trask, Ord and Pike properties the petitions were filed at the instigation of the owners. Mrs. Trask, it is stated, filed notice on her tenants to quit before the petition was filed by the District Attorney's office. Ferris deceived her as to the purpose for which he wanted the premises, the petition states.

UP AND DOWN. ELEVATOR IS RUN AGAIN.

Pete Reel's elevator will run again. Mechanics are fixing it up. For years it has hauled up men and women to the fourth floor of the Courthouse and hauled them down again. One day notice was served that the elevator was not running. Days went by and women and children toiled up and wearily walked down the long flights of stairs.

Judges took up the matter with the Supervisors, and word was received that they were experimenting. If there was no kick, it was evident that no one missed the elevator service. There was a small saving a day to the county by not operating the elevator, but a great waste of labor on the part of women and children attending court. Now Pete Reel is getting ready to resume his old stand.

ESPEE ADMITS GUILT.

In Judge Bledsoe's court, yesterday, the defendant in the civil action brought by the United States against the Southern Pacific Railroad, charged with violation of the law providing that stock should not be kept in a car for more than thirty-six hours without water and feeding, pleaded guilty and a fine of $150 was assessed and paid. In November, 1911, a shipment of cows was made from Wilcox, Ariz., to San Francisco, and it was admitted that they had been kept in the car without unloading longer than the period prescribed by the law.

From the Past.

VALUABLE OLD BIBLE FOUND.

Marginalia Show Once Owned by Pilgrim Father.

Faded Entries may Shed New Light on History.

Version Clothes Adam and Eve in Breeches.

When three English exiles, resident in Geneva, in the fifteenth century decided, perhaps with an eye to the feminist movement of the present day, to confer breeches on our universal parents instead of the nondescript garments of fig leaves hinted at in the Hebrew version of the Bible, they produced a version of holy writ which has delighted bibliophiles from that day to this.

A copy of this Genevan Bible, otherwise known as the "breeches Bible," from the reading of the seventh verse of the third chapter of Genesis, "they sewed fig leaves together and made themselves breeches," recently came to light in possession of Mrs. Saidee B. Cowles, No. 5616 De Longpre avenue, and is adorned with marginalia in ink, which, if authentic, makes it invaluable as a historical document.

On a fly leaf appears, "William White, his Booke, 1619;" several pages over are twin entries in faded ink, "William White married on the 3rd day of March, 1620, to Susanna Tilly," and "Sonne born to Susanna White, Dec. 17, 1620, y' six o'clock morning. Next day we met for prayer and thanksgiving."

This son was Peregrine White, the first white child born within the territory of the present United States to that little band of battlers for their faith, who came over on the Mayflower. At the time of his birth, the Mayflower was lying in Cape Cod Bay and the Pilgrim Fathers had yet to make their famed landing on Plymouth Rock.

INVALUABLE.

Most interesting of all is a rude marginal drawing of the Mayflower, executed by a hand that was untrained, but with accompanying annotations that lead one to believe that the draughtsman either saw the famed vessel or had it accurately described to him. If this drawing is as aged as it gives evidence of being, then it is the only likeness extant of the good ship.

Other entries are mere childish scribblings, as the letters of the alphabet painfully ciphered out; but others concern matters now a part of history and throw a new light on some of them. There is also what purports to be a picture of Peregrine White, and various entries by him. The margin is also freckled with entries in which figure the names of John Carver, Roger Williams, and other mighty and sainted men of old.

Whether or not all the entries are authentic is a matter that only the handwriting expert and the historian can decide. Nevertheless, the book is one of an edition that most assuredly was carried over in large numbers by the colonists, who came to this country in the days when William Shakespeare, Ben Jonson, George Chapman, and other men, whose names bulk big in literary history, were still living. It was the Bible from which most of them derived their knowledge of holy writ.

MANY ADDITIONS.

In 1560, three Englishmen, who had fled the Marian terror in the motherland, produced a Bible that ran through more than 140 editions before it was superseded for all time by the King James version. This popularity was in spite of the fact that it was not allowed to be used in church, and was due, more than anything else, to the fact that it was issued in handy size, usually a small quarto, and printed in readable Roman type, instead of black letter.

Due to its wide use, traditions grew up that it was this Bible that was the first in which the chapters were divided into verse. This is an erroneous [illegible] the supposition that breeches for Adam and Eve, as a substitute for aprons, were singular to this version. As a matter of fact, the so-called William Whittingham Bible of 1557 was the first English version to be divided into verse, while, as for our universal parents' bifurcated garments, the same rendering was used in both the Wycliffe Bible and in Caxton's Golden Legend.

The Bible, owned by Mrs. Cowles, was printed by Christopher Barker in [illegible] and contains, besides the Old and New Testaments, "two right profitable and fruitful concordances," the "Whole Booke of Pfalmes," collected into English meter by Thomas Sternhold and John Hopkins, and a quaint poem quaintly named, "The Humble Fute of a Sinner."

This Bible came into possession of Mrs. Cowles from Samuel W. [illegible], formerly of Hartford, Ct., who came to him, according to the best evidence, from a resident of Manchester, England. Of the remainder of its history, nothing is known, except what is shown in the marginalia. It has been examined with interest by antiquarians of the Mayflower Society of New York and other places and the entries pronounced authentic.

Woman Arrested on Shoplifting Charge Bites Detective—Flatly Denies Theft Accusation.

Mrs. Marie Merritt of San Pedro objected to being arrested in a downtown department store yesterday when she was accused of shoplifting. [illegible] her objection consisted principally in biting the wrist of Miss Elizabeth Brooks, private detective. Mrs. Merritt had in her hand when arrested a shopping bag, which contained [illegible] waists and a few small articles, which the detective said had been [illegible]. The woman said that this had been thrust in her hands by the real culprit when the detective attempted an arrest, and she stoutly maintained her innocence. Private detectives declared last night that she [illegible].

Mrs. Merritt said she was searching for work and had another handbag, which was found to contain 53 cents and her lunch, consisting of a hot [illegible] bun and an apple. VALUABLE OLD BIBLE FOUND.

Marginalia Show Once Owned by Pilgrim Father.

Faded Entries may Shed New Light on History.

Version Clothes Adam and Eve in Breeches.

When three English exiles, resident in Geneva, in the fifteenth century decided, perhaps with an eye to the feminist movement of the present day, to consider breeches on our universal parents instead of the nondescript garments of fig leaves hinted at in the Hebrew version of the Bible, they produced a version of holy writ which has delighted bibliophiles from that day to this.

A copy of this Genevan Bible, otherwise known as the "breeches Bible," from the reading of the seventh verse of the third chapter of Genesis, "they sewed fig leaves together and made themselves breeches," recently came to light in possession of Mrs. Saidee Cowles, No. 5616 De Longpre avenue, and is adorned with marginalia in ink which, if authentic, makes it invaluable as a historical document.

On a fly leaf appears, "William White, his Booke, 1619;" several pages over are twin entries in faded ink, "William White married on the 3rd day of March, 1620 to Susanna Tilly," "Sonne born to Susanna White, [illegible] 11, 1620, y' six o'clock morning. Ye day we met for prayer and thanksgiving."

His son was Peregrine White, the first white child born within the territory of the present United States to the little band of battlers for their faith who came over on the Mayflower. At the time of his birth, the Mayflower was lying in Cape Cod Bay and the Pilgrim Fathers had yet to make their famed landing on Plymouth Rock.

INVALUABLE.

Most interesting of all is a rude [illegible] drawing of the Mayflower, executed by a hand that was unskilled, but with accompanying annotations that lead one to believe that the draughtsman either saw the good vessel or had it accurately described to him. If this drawing is genuine as it gives evidence of being, then it is the only likeness extant of the good ship.

The entries are mere childish scrawlings, as the letters of the alphabet painfully ciphered out; but they concern matters now a part of history and throw a new light on some of them. There is also what appears to be a picture of Peregrine White and various entries by him. The margin is also freckled with entries in which figure the names of John Carver, Roger Williams, and other mighty and sainted men of old. Whether or not all the entries are authentic is a matter that only the handwriting expert and the historian can decide. Nevertheless, the book is of an edition that most assuredly was carried over in large numbers by the Pilgrims, who came to this country in the days when William Shakespeare, Ben Jonson, George Chapman, and other men, whose names bulk big in literary history, were still living. It was the Bible from which most of them derived their knowledge of holy writ.

MANY ADDITIONS.

In 1560, three Englishmen, who had fled the Marian terror in the mother land, produced a Bible that ran through more than 140 editions before it was superseded for all time by the King James version. This popularity in spite of the fact that it was not allowed to be used in church, was due, more than anything else, to the fact that it was issued in handy size, usually a small quarto, printed in readable Roman type, instead of black letter.

Due to its wide use, traditions grew that it was this Bible that was the first in which the chapters were divided into verse. This is as erroneous a supposition that breeches for Adam and Eve, as a substitute for aprons, were singular to this version. As a matter of fact, the so-called William Whittingham Bible of [illegible] was the first English version to be divided into verse, while, as for the universal parents' bifurcated garments, the same rendering was used in both the Wycliffe Bible and in Caxton's Golden Legend.

The Bible, owned by Mrs. Cowles, was printed by Christopher Barker in [illegible] and contains, besides the Old and New Testaments, "two right profitable and fruitful concordances," the "Whole Booke of Pfalmes," collected into English meter by Thomas Sternhold and John Hopkins, and a quaint poem quaintly named, "The Humble Sute of a Sinner."

The Bible came into possession of Mrs. Cowles from Samuel W. [illegible], formerly of Hartford, Ct., [illegible] to him, according to the best evidence, from a resident of Manchester, England. Of the remainder of its history, nothing is known, except what is shown in the marginalia. It has been examined with interest by historians of the Mayflower Society of New York and other places and the entries pronounced authentic.

USES HER TEETH.

Woman Arrested on Shoplifting Charge Bites Detective—Flatly Denies Theft Accusation.

Mrs. Marie Merritt of San Pedro objected to being arrested in a downtown department store yesterday when she was accused of shoplifting. Her objection consisted principally in biting the wrist of Miss Eliza[illegible] Brooks, private detective. Mrs. Merritt had in her hand when arrested a shopping bag, which contained [illegible] and a few small articles, which the detective said had been stolen. The woman said that this had been thrust in her hands by the real culprit when the detective attempted an arrest, and she stoutly maintained her innocence. Private Detective Brooks declared last night that she [illegible]

Mrs. Merritt said she was searching for work and had another handbag, which was found to contain 53 cents and her lunch, consisting of a hot [illegible] bun and an apple.

Miss Brooks went to the Receiving Hospital, where the bites on her wrist were cauterized and dressed, while Mrs. Merritt went to jail.

Introducing the Graceful Psyche Prance.

Gladys and Bess Bromley

Of this city, who will give the new dance its première in the California building at the Panama-Pacific Exposition on Los Angeles County Day, the 15th inst.

PSYCHE PRANCE AT EXPOSITION.

NEW STEPS WILL GLADDEN TEA DANSANT THERE LOS ANGELES DAY.

Did you ever see the Psyche Prance danced?

No, you haven't—not yet—but Los Angeles county boosters are to have the chance to see its first presentation. Two charming Los Angeles maidens are to give the new dance its premiere in the ballroom of the California Building at the San Francisco Fair.

The time is the afternoon of Los Angeles County Day at the exposition, April 15. The girls are Gladys and Bess Bromley, and they will attend the tea dansant that is part of the day's programme.

A special train is to be run by the Chamber of Commerce, and Secretary Wiggins says that if the people knew of the many charms of the trip there would not be cars enough to accommodate the crowds. Those who make reservations first will be given places on the first section of the train.

Queen Sibyl Mather and her charming court have been invited to go on the boosters' special, and a favorable answer is expected.

An elaborate programme has been arranged for the day in which the tea dansant is prominent. Four days will be passed at the exposition, the return of the special being scheduled for the following Sunday night.

LUMBER IMPORTS LARGER.

Los Angeles Takes Second Place In Receipts of Hardwoods from Foreign Lands.

Immense receipts lately have shot this city up into second place in receipts of foreign hardwoods, according to figures compiled by mill men. A recent purchase of 550,000 feet of Philippine mahogany by the Southern California Hardwood and Manufacturing Company is one of the largest single shipments to be routed here. This lumber cost $30,000.

"Los Angeles is rapidly becoming the most important American port in receipts of foreign woods," said Manager Morris of the Southern California company yesterday. "It is in second place now. In addition to Philippine mahogany, millions of feet of Japanese oak, ash, birch and other woods are being imported."

SHE IS THE VICTOR.

But Only Temporarily — Woman Prevents Patrolman and Poundmaster from Arresting Her Calf.

Patrolman Stonebraker and Poundmaster T. W. Wilson marched up the hill to the residence of Mrs. J. Rosenburg, No. 2760 Marengo street, yesterday, to arrest a delinquent calf. Then they turned around and marched right down again—without a calf—to file a complaint charging Mrs. Rosenburg with battery.

The patrolman found the calf dragging a piece of chain over the neighborhood and called for the poundmaster, but Mrs. Rosenburg appeared on the scene and objected to the arrest of the calf. Finally her protests included the brandishing of a chain over the heads of the patrolman and poundmaster so vigorously that they changed their mind regarding the arrest of the calf and took steps to prosecute its owner instead.

PAYS UP; RELEASED.

Lance Goldsmith, a law student in the office of W. Ona Morton, was arrested on the charge of presenting a false charge against the government in that he secured a duplicate to a $10 money order that had been sent him from New York, and later released on the recommendation of the United States District Attorney, after the payment by Goldsmith of the extra $10. The postal authorities have been for nearly four years trying to fix the charge on Goldsmith. He deposited the first money order in the Broadway branch of the Hellman Commercial Trust and Savings Bank, and after alleging that it had been lost and a duplicate had been issued from Washington, deposited the second order in the same institution.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

The Historical Society of Southern California will meet in the directors' room of the Historical Museum building, Exposition Park, tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. "The Story of a Boom" will be told by Prof. Joseph Netz; State division will be discussed by members of the society. All meetings are public.

SELECT FROCKS IN ROOF GARDEN.

NOVEL IDEA FOR DISPLAY OF SUMMER WEAR ADOPTED; OPENING SOON.

Now comes the summer dress garden. It is a place where milady may select her dainty garments for the warm months in surroundings of delightful fitness.

Winding paths, vine-covered pergolas, hanging baskets filled with bloom, rustic seats upon which ladies may rest while making their selections, even rustic screens and racks for holding the garments, form a part of the unique equipment. It is to occupy the upper floor at Swelldom, No. 535 South Broadway.

At the opening, which will soon take place, tea will be served and patrons will be able to see just how the lingerie, frocks and summer coats and gowns will look amid out-of-door surroundings, where it is intended they be worn.

"You see," said Louis Furscht, one of the proprietors, "this floor has been unused thus far, and we have considered it as a dead letter, not included in our rental plans; but by thus utilizing it, we mean to give to our patrons the benefit of this refreshing place, where they may lounge for half an hour upon the cool, green, rustic seats amid flowers, vines and painted walls which suggest the reaches of picturesque country far removed from the hurry and noise of the downtown district."

LETTERS TO "THE TIMES."

[The Times invites strong, clear, bright expression of opinion on current subjects, timely, pertinent and popular. Brevity should be kept in sight. Essays eschewed. Religious and personal controversies are tabu. Value is added to such letters by the signing of the writer's true name, which will be either published or withheld at the owner's request. Letters offered for publication should be in "parliamentary" language, and are subject to editorial supervision.]

Bullied in Fighting.

[To the Editor of The Times:] After all, the war game is hardly as popular as it was in olden times—"when nation was destroyed of nation and city of city; for God did vex them with all adversity." From all accounts many of the poor fellows have to be wheedled and coaxed and bullied into fighting. The Times says Rudyard Kipling is heading a movement to give the British soldiers more music. He believes this will not only cheer the troops but will aid recruiting. Some are moved to enlist by the aid of liquor, some by the jeers of women. Others by appeals to their animal instinct (with apologies to the animals) Gen. Alderon said to the Canadian troops: "Germans do not like the bayonet, nor do they support bayonet attacks. If they get up to you, or you get up to them, go right in with the bayonet. You have the physique to drive it home. That you will do it I am sure, and I do not envy the Germans if you get among them with the bayonet."

War is such an untamed, unmanageable monster I don't wonder they blame God for it. When Moses was 120 years of age—old enough, one might think, to know better—he ordered that certain persons be stoned to death and certain cities destroyed. Every male to be smitten with the sword and the women and children and other spoils fetched away. Even dogs are not stoned to death now, except in Mexico and other backward countries.

Though elderly noncombatants as of yore urge on the foolhardy, we surely are making some progress towards humaneness.

SUSAN DRAKE BISHOP.

Sawtelle Trolley Line.

SAWTELLE, April 2.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Referring to a trolley line from Soldiers' Home to Cemetery. Our committee from the different patriotic orders went before the Board of Managers of Soldiers' Homes and were very graciously received. We made this suggestion that they try to get the Pacific Electric Railway Company to build the trolley line, place one funeral car and two coaches on the line, everything ready for service, then the Home take over the stock, paying the Pacific Electric Railway Company 6 per cent interest on the amount they had expended in its construction. I see in your issue of the 31st President Close says the board "could not take the responsibility of assisting financially in that direction." We don't think that it would require a single dollar of Home money to handle this line. With fares at 5 cents each way for civilians and 5 cents round trip for the members in uniform, the receipts would pay the full expense of the road. At each funeral it is necessary to use three teams of horses and that would be a great saving. The forty-seven deaths during March used those three teams each time and at $3 for each team (which is the price we must pay when we hire one) it would save the Home over $400.

The Board of Managers acknowledged there was a great necessity for some kind of transportation and if those interested will assist us we feel sure by another year we can go to our cemetery and pay the honor to our comrades that is their due.

ALL SLEEPING PEACEFULLY.

When in Comes the Call of Robbers and Then Comes the Rude Awakening for Six Boys.

"Send the patrol wagon and a bunch of officers quick. There's a band of robbers in a barn at Tenth street and Ardmore avenue," was the call that came to the Central Police Station early yesterday morning. Four detectives responded. They surrounded the barn and found six boys sleeping peacefully, surrounded by fragments of a feast of pies, cakes and candies and milk.

The boys, who are all from 14 to 16 years of age, gave their names as Thomas Hennessey, Everett Palmer, Gussie Apphuhn, Lynn Keith, George Bonner and Laurence Rober. They were held until investigations of recent burglaries of grocery stores in the neighborhood can be investigated further.

NEW STANDARDS FOR MEDICINE

The New British Pharmacopeia Discards Over One Hundred and Sixty Drugs Formerly Used as Cures.

[Philadelphia Record:] The publication of a new British pharmacopoeia is an event of great importance to the medical profession. It introduces a number of remarkable changes, discards a large number of old drugs and contains many new ones. The omissions and additions are, of course, of interest for various reasons, not the least important of which is that they represent the progress that has been made in therapeutic science, and so far as the additions are concerned, set up standards for drugs that had hitherto been official. The most important features of the new official book of medicines are as follows:

It discards the imperial system of weights and measures, so that every chemists will be required to have complete sets of weights and measures in the metric system. In Great Britain alone there are something like 10,000 chemists' shops, so that makers of weights and measures have been busily engaged in supplying the demand.

It discards over 160 drugs, most of which are seldom heard of or used. But among the discarded substances are sarsaparilla, dandelion, musk, gamboge, elder flower water and several other drugs which are still commonly prescribed by medical practitioners.

It includes forty-three drugs which were not in the old pharmacopeia, but most of these have long been in use. Among them are adrelin, senna pods, diethyl, barbituric acid (commonly known as veronal, but the new name is barbitone,) and acetylsalicylic acid, which has hitherto been known under the German trade mark name of aspirin, but will in future be best known under the British name.

It changes the strength of a number of potent preparations. For instance, laudanum (tincture of opium) is 33 per cent. stronger. As this preparation is a popular ingredient of cough mixtures, it is extremely important that the public should know of this alteration, as mistakes might have serious or even fatal results. The tincture of strophanthus, a very powerful drug, has been increased to four times the old strength, and doctors and chemists will have to be very cautious in dealing with it. On the other hand, tincture of nux vomica is reduced to one-half the old strength. The tests for the purity of drugs has been made much more stringent.

Famous For Her Hair

Actress Tells How to Obtain It.

Madame Rose, the well-known actress, who played on one of the leading vaudeville circuits the past winter and who is especially noted for her long, beautiful hair, in a recent interview in Chicago made the following statement: "Any lady or gentleman can promote the growth of their hair and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe which they can mix at home. To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Apply to the scalp two or three times a week with the finger tips. This is not only the finest hair grower I have ever known, but it prevents the hair from falling out, removes dandruff and scalp humors, darkens streaked, faded gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. The ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost."

BLACKHEADS AND PIMPLES ON FACE

Kept Getting Worse. Very Sore, Inflamed and Unsightly. Itched and Burned. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In Short Time Well.

Route No. 2, Box 27, Frederic, Wis.—"About a year ago, pimples and blackheads broke out on my face and kept getting worse and worse. At first my face was covered with blackheads and in a short time small red spots appeared here and there which increased very rapidly. My face became very sore and inflamed. The eruptions were very unsightly and disfigured me badly. At times they itched and burned so I had to scratch them and after that they got still worse.

"I used two different remedies but got no good results. I wrote for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and that seemed to give good results so I bought three cakes of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. They stopped the burning at once, and in a short time I was entirely well, and all disfigurement was gone." (Signed) Gunard Friberg, November 5, '14.

Beauty of skin and hair promoted and maintained by daily use of Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment.

TAKE SALTS IF YOUR BACK HURTS SAYS DRUGS EXCITE THE KIDNEYS.

Salts Harmless to Flush Kidneys and Neutralize Uric Acid, Thus Ending Bladder Trouble.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

I CURE PILES FISTULA AND ALL RECTAL DISEASES WITHOUT AN OPERATION BY MY PAINLESS DISSOLVENT METHOD

For twenty-five years I have been curing diseases of the rectum and lower bowel. During that time my experience as hospital and railroad surgeon, as college lecturer and professor, has enabled me to develop a method that is superior to others. I cure without surgery and my patients are never confined in bed and never lose a moment's time from their business.

My method is not a "home cure" or a "correspondence treatment," but it is an application of skilled treatments administered under the most rigid antiseptic conditions in my office.

I solicit old, severe and obstinate cases of fistula, prolapsus, fissure and ulceration that have heretofore resisted all treatments employed. If you are a sufferer from rectal trouble I invite you to investigate my method thoroughly by talking or writing to any of my cured patients. If you will call at my office I will be pleased to give you the names and addresses of many well-known Los Angeles people I have cured, whom you may interview in regard to my treatment.

Read what a few well-known Southern California people have to say of my method. Many similar letters are on file in my office.

WOMEN'S WORK AND WOMEN'S CLUBS

FROM all present indications, two complete tickets are to be placed before the members of the Friday Morning Club for election of officers.

Mrs. Russell J. Waters, who is just terminating a successful second term as head of the club—with a membership of some 1500 women—is to receive a large complimentary vote, maybe so strong that her ultimate election will be assured. She is not seeking the office. It is coming from her friends and unsolicited upon her part. As vice-presidents are to be added the names of Mrs. E. R. Brainerd and Mrs. A. W. Francisco, so rumor goes.

The ticket which is headed by the name of Mrs. Seward Simons, the present vice-president, has for first and second vice-presidents Mrs. Brainerd and Mrs. Margaret Frick, with Mrs. J. J. Conaty recording secretary. That has been definitely decided, according to "the powers that be."

The two candidates mentioned were published exclusively in the paper many weeks ago as the likely heads for the club, and it seems that there will not be any deviation from the plans, though the other offices may develop unexpected results, when the nomination ballots are returned to the executive board May 1.

There is no real fight—just good, plain rivalry, as exists in the usual large club and comes up at election time, when enthusiasm always is raised over personalities. Either candidate will graciously extend her support and loyalty to the other, that is certain.

Mrs. Brainerd seems to be the only candidate to head the City Club. She is the able first vice-president to Mrs. Shelly Tolhurst, and the hundreds of members are but waiting for her consent. Mrs. Frank Wolf is mentioned, but will scarcely make the run, should Mrs. Brainerd allow her candidacy to be launched.

The City Club membership shifts perhaps greater than any other in the city. During the suffrage campaign the list swelled to 1500, but now hovers around the 800 or 900 mark. At election time there is always a marked increase.

Coming Lectures.

Mary Antin, who is brought by the City Teachers' Club for two lectures at Trinity Auditorium on Friday and Saturday nights, this week, will also speak before the Friday Morning Club. It is for members only, and her topic will be that wonderful "They Who Knock at Our Gates" lecture, which has held enraptured great audiences throughout the country. Later in the month the club will have Charlotte Perkins Gilman. Both women are to appear on the programme of the National Council of Women Voters, in San Francisco in July.

Normal Hill Civic Center.

President Whiffen of the City Council and Chief of Police Sebastian and other candidates are scheduled to speak at the meeting of the Normal Hill Civic Center, to be held in the kindergarten room of the Hope-street school (old Normal School,) Tuesday evening. In addition a programme will be given. Afterward there will be refreshments, visiting and dancing.

Change in Ebell Programme.

Mrs. Lucia Forest Eastman, the noted harpist, is to appear before the Ebell Club tomorrow afternoon, assisted by Mrs. Harmon D. Ryus. The artists will give the concerto by Zabel. Miss Helen Louise Kimball will also give readings. It is a delightful programme, planned in place of the appearance of Dr. James A. B. Scherer, who was unable to appear. The harpist comes from New York. She is to assist also at the Friday Morning Club festival of April 20. On her way West she played a request programme for the Governor and members of the Wisconsin Legislature and is to appear at Cornell and many other places upon her return.

The charming lady just arrived in the city and is the guest of her mother, Mrs. Katherine Kimball Forest of No. 5002 Institute place. The older musicians of the city will remember that as a young girl she lived in the city and at that early age gave great promise in a musical way, which has more than been realized. She uses a harp which was exhibited at the Chicago Fair.

Tropico Thursday Afternoon Club.

The home of Mrs. Leslie Eames on Brand boulevard, Tropico, was aglow with poppies and other golden-hued flowers Thursday afternoon, when she entertained the officers and members of the Tropico Thursday Afternoon Club. Mrs. Harry Bowman, chairman of the Programme Committee, presented an interesting programme. Mrs. Jessica C. Hazzard of Whittier, being unable to be present, owing to illness, Miss Bertha Jackson, who but recently arrived from Kentucky, and who is an accomplished reader, gave two most excellent readings. Miss Jackson chose as her first reading two scenes from Sheridan's "The Rivals." As an encore she gave a negro dialect selection.

Senor Murio David, tenor of the Los Angeles Symphony, delighted the audience by singing in Spanish, "Lolita" and "Rigoletto" (Verdi.) The charming personality of Senor David and the excellent rendition of his vocal numbers were especially pleasing to the club. Senor David was accompanied by Miss Helene Morgan, a member of the club, and who is recognized as an accomplished pianiste. Miss Morgan's excellent interpretation of the selections of Senor David was keenly appreciated by the audience, who were loath to be satisfied with the two selections given and gave both Senor David and Miss Morgan such an ovation that they responded several times to the earnest entreaties of their delighted hearers. Mrs. Eames was assisted by Mrs. Samuel P. Pallock, Mrs. H. F. Goodwin, Mrs. Kail E. Hollingsworth.

Lincoln Park Study Club.

Mrs. Charles Yielding read a broad and comprehensive paper on Japan, covering many points of interest Monday afternoon, before the members of the Lincoln Park Study Circle, when they met at the home of Mrs. Myrtle Gessner of Monterey road. Miss Anna Herron had charge of the current events and she chose for her topic the method used by Russia to make up the deficiency occasioned by the prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors. The article was authority for the statement that "the Czar would much rather that the country would become poor from the lack of liquor, than that the individual become poor and inefficient, and that never so long as he remained in power would the use of intoxicants be tolerated." Miss Helen Gessner, daughter of the hostess, and Miss Leonora Chamberlain gave some pleasing recitations. Mrs. D. Z. Gardner will entertain the members at their next meeting Monday afternoon, and at this time the annual election of officers will occur.

Los Angeles Special.

Mrs. Frank Garrett announces that the Los Angeles special will leave for the State Federation of Women's Clubs Conference in San Francisco, via the Southern Pacific, on May 15, at 8 o'clock p.m., and will arrive at the Third and Townsend station in the northern city the following morning at 10 o'clock. Reservations can be made at the Friday Morning or Ebell Club meetings at their regular days of meeting, or information can be had by telephoning Mrs. Frank Caldwell, Mrs. Beatrix Duane or Mrs. Garrett.

Channel Club.

Four celebrities were special guests of the Channel Club Monday at the Santa Monica place where Mrs. Lillian Burkhart Goldsmith is spending a few weeks. A delightd group of forty guests were entertained at midday luncheon and a real mental feast. Edwin Markham, James W. Foley and Henry Herbert Knibbs were all there and read their own inimitable poetry and did original verse for the Channel Club, which will remain indelibly impressed upon those who were privileged to enjoy the day. Another person of distinction present was Mrs. Cornelia A. P. Comer, who does those clever short stories in the Atlantic Monthly, "Letters to a Rising Generation."

Mrs. Foley, Mrs Knibbs and Mesdames J. T. Fitzgerald, Willits J. Hole, W. G. Thurston, Eleanor B. Jones, Alice O. Hunnewell, Alice Hardy, Fred Lang, Warwick Symondson, Johnston, J. B. Stearns, Steckel, Henry J. Martin, Thomas Treen, M. L. Davidson, Esther Allen, B. H. Morgan and Misses Ott, Mary J. Murphy, Helen Hunt, Florence Hunnewell, Elizabeth Yoder, Rottman, Dora Holmes, Ida Leonard, Gertrude Comstock, Lucile Clark, Eva Smith and the hostess completed the personnel.

A luncheon was served at 1 o'clock.

O.E.S. Entertained.

Mrs. John P. Newell and Mrs. Parr entertained the members of their Eastern Star at a perfectly-appointed Easter luncheon at the new home of the former hostess on Wednesday.

South Side Ebell Club.

The South Side Ebell Club, which meets in the library branch building, corner of Vernon and Central avenues, each Thursday morning at 10 o'clock, is growing in enthusiasm and numbers. On Thursday the club was addressed by Mr. Wheeler of the main library, who told of the new Carnegie library now in process of construction at Forty-fifth and Central avenue. Arthur Brown, principal of McKinley intermediate school, told of the new night school recently opened in his building; Supt. Francis spoke of the new Thirty-eighth and Hooper avenue school. Next meeting is to be given over to the reading of a play by Lady Gregory, "Spreading the News." All who are interested are invited.

Whittier Woman's Club.

Members of the Whittier's Woman's Club are all expectancy over their sixth annual flower show, which is to be given at the clubhouse from Thursday to Friday inclusive. Committees have been hard at work for some weeks to make the 1915 show the best ever. The official programme and premium list was issued late last week and shows a pretentious list of exhibits desired. Cut flowers will predominate in the show, but the various departments will give much scope to the show as a whole. The children are not forgotten, and many prizes will be theirs for the effort of gathering wild flowers. Household delicacies in the shape of jellies and jams will come in for a large share of attention. Each evening special music will be provided.

South Pasadena Musical Club.

The third annual banquet of the South Pasadena Musical Club was held at the Los Angeles Terrados Hotel Monday evening. Covers were laid for forty. Wild flowers of blue and yellow interspersed with smilax centered the table, arranged in baskets on the two long banquet tables. Toasts were given by Norton F. Mason, "Random Thoughts on Accompanying and Accompanists;" Father Paul Datin, "Little Philosophies of Life;" James W. Foley, "Music and Literature." A musical programme followed the banquet, piano numbers by Oscar Niffen; Arthur Babcock, solo; Mr. Niffen, accompanying; Mrs. Norrine Merritt, violin selection, Miss Clair Wilde accompanist; piano number, Miss Clara Bosbyshell; vocal number, Abraham Miller; Julius Seyler, accompanist. A social hour followed.

Improvement.

The Women's Improvement Association of South Pasadena will make nominations Wednesday afternoon from the floor for offices. This is the first time this method has been used by this club. The feature of the afternoon will be a travel talk by Miss Esther M. Crawford on Japan. She is conversant with the country of which she will speak and will illustrate by postcard pictures thrown on the screen. Mrs. Dale W. Tussing will have charge of the music, and hostesses for the day will be Mrs. B. F. Huntington and Mrs. Harry W. Clough.

A new departure for this club is the appointment by its president, Mrs. E. M. Mumford, of a new committee, of which Mrs. Charles H. Lee is chairman, for the distribution of fruit, flowers and jelly to those of this city, other cities, hospitals and orphanages.

Maccabees to Dance.

The ladies of the various hives of the Maccabees are to entertain the members and friends at a ball and card party on the evening of Wednesday, April 7, in McKinley Hall, Mozart Theater building. Mrs. Jennie Koehler is general chairman, assisted by committees from other local hives. It is to usher in several such social affairs of the order. On the Reception Committee will be Mmes. Leppert, Gibson, Baker, Trimball, all of whom are commanders, and District Deputies Kate A. Russell and Julia G. Ginn.

Already plans are started for the State convention and grand rally which will be held in Los Angeles April 21-22 at the Alexandria. Mrs. Minnie W. Aydelotte, deputy supreme commander, of Oakland, will be in charge, assisted by district deputies of Southern California. There are five local organizations in this city, with a total membership of 2000 women, and these are to be augmented by the Long Beach, Pasadena, Redondo Beach and Santa Monica organizations. A special train will bring 300 visitors and delegates from the north.

Business Woman's Civic Club.

The Business Woman's Civic Club will meet tomorrow evening, April 5, in the lecture hall of the public library. On account of the resignation of Miss Mary DuVal there will be an election of a commissioner of records. A report on the inland waterways congress held in San Francisco March 23-24-25 will be given by Miss Galpin, who attended as the club's delegate.

Hollywood Club.

A large audience of Hollywood club women and guests enjoyed Miss Zona Gale's reading from her "Exit Charity" and "Friendship Village" and her talk on the scope and meaning of federation. Miss Gale is chairman of the civics department of the National Federation of Woman's Clubs, and was presented by Mrs. J. P. Gardner, civics chairman of the club, in a happy speech of introduction. Musical selections were given by Mrs. Susie Ford Perkey, pianist. Roses and dainty refreshments helped to make this a gala occasion.

Next Wednesday, besides the regular business meeting, there will be an address, "A Summer's Quest of the Missions," by Mrs. Laird J. Stabler, and a programme of musical numbers. Hostesses will be Mmes. Charles R. Van Tilburgh, Louise Dreiske, E. R. Misemer, J. F. Mead, W. S. Halliwell and R. S. Toberman. The Shakespeare section meets at 10:30 a.m. the first and third Wednesdays of the month.

Just Organized.

One of the interesting new organizations is the Woman's Club of Orange with Mrs. Lea Collins president. This club has a membership of 100 women and is taking up the study of live questions of civic interest. For its programme on Monday next Los Angeles will send a speaker to discuss the National Marketing Com-

OSSIFIED KELP STRANGE FIND.

Unknown to Science, Dug up in Excavation Here.

Three Small Pieces Bid for with High Spirit.

Shell Stranger in West is Also Unearthed.

Kelp as thick as a wrist and forty feet long has been found in a petrified condition in Los Angeles. It is stated to be the first in the knowledge of geologists. From its nest thirty-eight feet below the surface, scraps of the petrified sea plant have been rescued, and are now in the possession of J. J. Sickner, No. 700 West Sixth street, who has refused all offers of purchase.

Since word has gone forth among scientists that petrified kelp has been found a spirited bidding has been in progress, from private parties and museums and other institutions of a public nature. Three pieces were all that was brought to Mr. Sickner's attention, but later investigations prove that the plant, caught in the mysterious processes of nature that bring about petrification, was more than forty feet long.

It was a contractor excavating for the basement of the Bible Institute who first discovered the kelp. A plowshare tossed the strange-looking lengths of hard substance to the surface. The contractor examined them, thought them odd and interesting and laid them aside. He noted the location from which they came. Ultimately the three pieces came into Mr. Sickner's possession.

He is interested in rarities and without knowing the exact nature of the articles, kept them. He placed them in the window of his hardware store as a display and a geologist passing inquired the composition.

Mr. Sickner didn't know.

The geologist became interested and returned the following day with a microscope. He was permitted to give the three pieces a thorough analysis.

No report was forthcoming from the investigator. Three days later a party of them, with the geologist in command, arrived, and all inspected the three pieces, and then returned the verdict that petrified kelp had been found for the first time.

A scientific report of the discovery is now being circulated, and hundreds of geologists coming West during the year have asked permission of Mr. Sickner to examine the specimens.

Another treasure to science was recovered at the same time and is now in the hands of Mr. Sickner. It is a shell of a variety never known on the Pacific Coast. This shell is common on the Atlantic Coast, and scientists were never informed that the strange sea creature that builds the shell existed in western waters until the recent discovery.

It is presumed by scientists that the shell and kelp were buried many thousands of years ago and a careful report of the earth stratum in which the treasures were found is being compiled against further excavation work that may be carried on in the vicinity.

HIT BY "JITBUSSES."

Aged Harbor-front Man at First Appears Precariously Hurt, But Recovers—Another Bruised.

Daniel Vaughn, 80 years of age, a retired boat builder of the harbor front, was caught by a "jitney" bus at Eighth and Main streets yesterday morning. He suffered a slight concussion of the brain and cuts on the scalp and arms and when taken to the Receiving Hospital he was apparently in a precarious condition. Later, however, he was able to return home unattended. The "jitney" bus is owned by J. C. Dutton of No. 357 West Fiftieth street and was driven by J. J. Fulkerson of No. 5415 South Main street.

R. C. Warriner, a laundryman of Portland, Or., was another "jitney" bus victim yesterday. He was struck by the car at the Main and Fifth-street crossing. Knocked to the pavement, he sustained numerous bruises, but was able to go to his hotel without assistance. The bus is owned by the Bills Auto Company, and William D. Santos of No. 1182 East Forty-seventh place was the driver.

Big Men Stand Aloof.

prove or disprove the charges that are made it is sufficient to know that as soon as a man bobs up for office he discovers he has a whole lot of enemies, official or otherwise, who wouldn't have appeared at all if he had remained in private life.

If a candidate for office happens to have spent part of his life in some other community, the gossips immediately start the story that he has a "record." He may or may not have. The insinuations travel, gather in horrible detail, and mature before election into a monstrous "story."

HIT EITHER WAY.

Whether the average voter believes the tales or not they have the effect of embarrassing the candidate, because his enemies keep bolstering their plausibility. If he is beaten, he ascribes it to the dirty reports that were circulated about him. If he wins he carries into office a name that is besmirched with mud to the everlasting embarrassment of himself and family.

"If you fall down in the mud, get up in the mud—to go somewhere else and get up would only make a trail of mud following you."

This is founded upon some ancient Greek philosophy.

If you think you have no enemies—run for office.

This isn't Greek philosophy. It is a presentment of a condition in American municipal politics, not peculiar to Los Angeles particularly, but possibly even more applicable here than elsewhere.

A candidate for office is charged with the acts of his supporters and any one of them, without the knowledge of his principal, may commit an act for which the candidate becomes severely criticised, just as a public official must be responsible for the official conduct of his subordinates.

TOO SMALL FOR THEM.

Out of the smelling mess of municipal politics rises the query:

Where are the truly great men of Los Angeles in this campaign for office?

The city's business is conducted by a corporation larger than any private concern in its bounds, but the business of almost any corporation you may name is conducted on a more efficient, economical basis, greater values are returned for the dollars expended and the directing geniuses of the business corporations are not libeled, slandered or covered with the slime of gossipy tongues.

But if the successful head of a great private corporation should emerge from the shelter of his private office into the position of a candidate for office, he is immediately assailed from every quarter, and the best he gets is the worst of it.

Nearly every man and woman of voting age in Los Angeles today is discussing rumors, insinuations, charges and counter-charges about certain candidates. Without exception they will be required to vote for a candidate about whom scandalous things have been said—since he became a candidate—or remain away from the polls in disgust.

The big men who have stepped into breaches in the past and helped to guide the city through crises have shied at the thought of becoming targets for the public scandalmonger.

WON'T BE TARGETS.

"My life is an open book," said a prominent citizen yesterday. "I have never done anything that I need apologize for, and nothing for which there should be an explanation. I don't care anything about politics. If I offered myself as a candidate it would be at a personal sacrifice of my business and of my family. I have been asked by various friends to run for office. Committees have waited upon me and I felt proud of the distinction of being asked. I thought it over and seriously considered becoming a candidate. Then one opponent was accused of immoral conduct, another of bribery, still another of having a record, and so on. I made up my mind none of these stories are true and in doing so I saw no reason why the same things could not be said of me.

"That is why I decided not to make the sacrifice. I simply couldn't afford to be a target for similar attacks."

From every substantial citizen who was asked to run for the Board of Education there came the same protest.

Prominent men who were importuned to be candidates on the Board of Freeholders declared they did not want to be placed in the position of targets for the slander tongues that wag and wag and wag until the public spirit of good citizens is coated with slime.

SHE ADMITS NOTHING.

Mrs. Rindge, Who Made Charges Against City Officials, Refuses to Talk About Them.

An effort on the part of Deputy City Attorneys Burnell and Spalding yesterday to obtain admissions from Mrs. May K. Rindge as to the source of her information in making charges that certain Councilmen and other city officials were bribed for their votes in the Broadway opening proceedings met with failure.

Mrs. Rindge admitted nothing. Late Friday night Deputy Spalding outwitted her at her home by serving a summons to appear yesterday morning before E. L. Kinkaid, a notary in the International Bank Building. Mrs. Rindge appeared with her attorney, who instructed her not to testify.

The taking of her deposition resulted in nothing of value to the city, except that she admitted having been present in person at various meetings and hearings of the Council on the Boardway-opening proceedings.

Following the taking of Mrs. Rindge's deposition, members of the Council yesterday renewed their threats to file suit for libel on account of the charges contained in the Rindge application for injunction against the city in enforcing collection of the assessment.

The City Attorney and his assistants are preparing affidavits of Councilmen and other city officials to be used in the municipality's defense of the injunction suit.

Echo of Early Days.

battle order on the sands where the Arcade station now stands. He was defiant and threatening. Gen. Cook, with the American troops, rode ahead on a white mule. When Pio Pico refused to surrender, the general on his white mule and the soldiers proceeded to the spot where the Salt Lake station now is situated, and there made camp. Later, they scouted for a vantage ground and late in the evening passed through an arroyo and mounted the hill commanding the town, now called Fort Hill, above the Broadway tunnel.

There a twelve-pound cannon, that had been carted all the way from Fort Leavenworth, was trained on the Catholic Church near the Plaza. Gen. Cook was a Catholic. Then Gen. Cook sent his ultimatum to Gen. Pico: "Surrender in twenty minutes, or I'll shoot —— out of that church."

Twenty minutes passed, a twelve-pound shot went hurtling through one of the upper chambers of the church and a white flag came sprinting through the mustard patch that covered the approach to the hill. Southern California was in the hands of the United States and Charlie Colton helped lower the Mexican flag and hoist the Stars and Stripes.

For several years Mr. Colton was employed in freighting materials to Arizona, where the several forts that became historic in that State were founded. Then he took up freighting as a business, making twenty round trips between California and Montana, in which State he became an intimate of Jim Bridger, one of the spectacular figures of the Northwest.

EARLY DAY PAY.

The gold stampede took Mr. Colton to Northern California, where his experiences were as dramatic as any in those picturesque times. Later he became a rider of the pony express between Sacramento and Salt Lake City, an enterprise founded by Brigham Young, the founder of the Mormon church in Utah, and James Holladay. The mailing price of each letter was $5.

In his freighting Mr. Colton made as high as $4 a pound in freight, reaching this high figure with tea, which he took into Montana. Twenty-five cents a pound was his freightage charge for goods between Los Angeles and the Colorado River. During the Civil War Mr. Colton worked with P. Banning, founder of the Banning fortune.

"Mr. Banning, who had named Wilmington after his home town, Wilmington, Del., made a hot speech in favor of the Union," said Mr. Colton, "and it was so popular that word reached the United States army headquarters in Washington. The result was Mr. Banning was given the contract for freighting all supplies to the forts in Arizona. He was allowed $25 a day, in paper money, for each mule team, and he paid me $10 in gold, daily, for each of my teams. By sticking to the paper money, Mr. Banning made a fortune.

"I had a chance to buy all the paper money I could take at 30 cents on the dollar in Arizona. The soldiers wanted gold, and when they were paid in paper, they discounted it at any price they could get."

On one of his hazardous trips Mr. Colton brought four men to Los Angeles from Arizona. As they were coming into the town, they met an auctioneer named Lampson.

"Come on, Colton," he shouted, "I'm going to sell some lots out in the south, and there's a chance to get them cheap."

Mr. Colton said he wanted no land, but the four newcomers bought two lots each, at $2.50 a lot, the site being near a water hole that was located on what is now Broadway, between Fifth and Sixth streets. The party went to inspect the lots along a ragged path through a mustard patch.

"I took the men back to Arizona on a later trip," said Mr. Colton, "and a little while later they were caught in an Indian ambush and all scalped. Six months afterwards the lots were sold for taxes, for 50 cents apiece."

Mr. Colton recalls one incident in which he was almost insulted by an aggressive dealer in lots because he would not buy the block where Central Park now is for $60.

At that time, he said, the great amusement here was the bull fighting held regularly in the Plaza.

The details of a thousand fights with Indians are still fresh in Mr. Colton's memory. His right shoulder carries an arrow's wound.

While passing through Utah he became acquainted with Miss Ella Kelting, and they were married April 3, 1854, when she was 17 years old.

Both are very active and without ailments. All day Mrs. Colton is about her work as a builder, and all day Mr. Colton toils on his little farm, weeding onions, attending the chickens, and sometimes sitting in the sun and looking far, far away over the hills towards Los Angeles, and on across the lands where the youth of his perilous and picturesque life was spent.

MOTORS IN THE WAR.

Germany was Well Prepared, and France Requisitioned Every One in the Country to Secure Enough.

[Rochester Democrat and Chronicle:] The Germans were recently enabled to save their lines at Soissons, and through the timely arrival of reinforcements, hurriedly brought to the firing line in motor vehicles. Incidents like this one, and the invaluable work being done by automobiles in carrying ammunition, and in the commissariats of the various armies, are clear proof that the motor vehicle is one of the most important mechanical agents in modern warfare.

In discussions regarding the military preparedness of the United States, not much has been said on the subject of automobiles available for military uses. So far as it is commonly known, the government's supply of motor lorries is negligible. Yet, while there are probably more important things in need of attention in any attempt to reorganize our national defensive powers, this matter of having an adequate number of lorries where they can be put into commission on short notice should not be neglected.

When the European war began the German army was splendidly equipped with motor vehicles, while France solved the problem by requisitioning every automobile on French soil until she got together a sufficient number. This country would have to adopt the French idea if the government should have a sudden need of motor trucks. Such a summary action didn't cause much hardship in France, where the order for mobilization automatically stopped the wheels of commerce. But in this country a wholesale seizure of trucks would very nearly paralyze business in the larger cities, and at a time when business would have all the trouble it could reasonably be expected to take care of.

Many of the European governments subsidize commercial motor trucks of certain size and capacity. This system gives the motor truck owners fair warning of what they may expect in time of war, and compensates them for losses they may incur from suddenly being deprived of these vehicles. Probably the subsidy idea isn't the best one for this country. But the fact remains that motor trucks are just as important in modern military operations as are cannon and aeroplanes, and nearly as hard to obtain, in adequate numbers, on short notice.

Leonard and Miss Elizabeth Marble.

Hans Andersen Festival.

The second annual Hans Andersen Festival, to be given under the auspices of the junior department of the Los Angeles Drama League, next Saturday, will be an all-day affair. All are requested to bring lunches, especially family parties, for picnic groups under the cool shade of the spreading trees of Elysian Park, where the interesting event is to be held. The woods were never more beautiful than right now, and the time seems ideal for such a glorious project. Whether participating in the pantomines or not, children may come in costume if they so desire.

The Park Commissioners, playground department and various schools are co-operating to make this second children's festival eclipse the last year's tremendous success. Following is the programme:

10:30 to 11:30 a.m.—At the picnic grounds, thirty story-tellers will entertain groups of children. Committee in charge: Miss Grace Fullmer, Miss Elizabeth Keppie, Mrs. E. W. Douglas.

11:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m.—Picnic lunches and play in the park.

1:00 to 1:30 p.m.—Formation of procession of children in costume at the first picnic ground. Groups are to march in order named below in list of pantomimes, followed by children in costume who are not to take part in pantomimes. Committee in charge: Mrs. Irma H. Hutchison.

Highland Park Ebell Club.

A programme of delight and artistic quality was enjoyed at Highland Park Ebell Club on Tuesday. Mrs. John E. Croft sang, followed by readings, given by Miss Pearl M. Herndon. She gave Kate Douglas Wiggins' "Timothy's Quest," Riley's "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," with musical arrangement played by Miss Elizabeth Know Ewine; "Spring," with musical interpolation and "High Art," the latter by Kyle Dallas. Her introductory trio number of character selections were cleverly done.

TO HELP THE NEEDY.

Mrs. C. E. Sebastian will be hostess to the Ladies Auxiliary of the Hebrew Sheltering Society Wednesday afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock, at a card party given to raise funds for the purchase of food for the needy. An admission of 25 cents will be charged. The Sebastian home at No. 2282 Cambridge street will be open to all who may come to patronize the charity. Whist and Five Hundred will be played. Mrs. J. Zuckerman and Miss Arline Levy, accomplished musicians, will sing. Those in charge of the afternoon are Mrs. L. Richbart, Mrs. H. L. Zuckerman, Mrs. J. W. Summerfield, Mrs. L. S. Offer, Mrs. A. Lane, Mrs. S. Kaufman and Mrs. M. Brick.

MUSHROOM CHANGE.

A mushroom change is to come overnight soon at Praeger Park. There, in twenty-four hours, the great vacant space will change to one of much activity, to one of tents and crowded humanity. The reason will be the coming of the Sells-Floto circus and Buffalo Bill's Original Wild West, here on its usual spring engagement. The circus is to arrive Sunday, the 18th inst., and will play for the three days following.

QUARTER MILLION CUT OFF.

Amounts of money involved in cases asking judgment totaled $865,747.58. A total of 3691 demands against the county were investigated.

Get the Right Store

Came to Her Rescue

From her home in Mountain Park, Oklahoma, Mrs. O. A. Strange writes to the Pinus laboratories:

"I am taking Fruitola and Traxo for gall-stones with good results. If it had not been that it came to my rescue, I would have been dead I am sure. I cannot say too much for Fruitola and Traxo."

Fruitola possesses properties that act directly upon the intestinal parts. It is a great system cleanser, softening the congested waste and disintegrating the hardened particles that cause so much suffering, and quickly expels the accumulation to the intense relief of the patient. Traxo is a tonic alterative that acts on the liver and kidneys, stimulates the flow of gastric juices to aid digestion and removes bile from the general circulation. It serves to build up and strengthen the weakened, run-down system.

For the convenience of the public, arrangements have been made to supply Fruitola and Traxo through leading druggists. In Los Angeles they can be obtained at the stores of The Owl Drug Co.

Off for Prosperity.

MAKING HAY IN TRADE CONTEST.

The Psychological Hour to Enter Campaign.

New Contestants Have Fair Chance to Win.

Three Hundred Entrants are Already Enrolled.

"Keeping everlastingly at it brings success."

Also, "There is a tide in the life of all men, if taken at the flood, leads on to fortune."

Apply those principles to participation in The Times Prosperity and Trade Contest, which is creating so much comment and interest throughout the city, and you have the working basis of a profitable campaign.

This is the fortunate time to become identified with one of the biggest events in the business history of Los Angeles. Now is the psychological hour when it is possible for the newest contestant to join the campaign and by well-directed effort become the fortunate possessor of one of the valuable prizes which The Times is offering to contenders simply for bringing in cash sales slips and other evidence of purchases from the various co-operating merchants. By maintaining a consistent endeavor to gather as many credit slips as possible during the remaining three months of the contest there is every prospect of a successful outcome even for the late comers.

More than 300 contestants are now enrolled in The Times Prosperity and Trade Contest and their activities have permeated every corner of the city and suburbs. An ocean of cash sales slips and credit coupons has accumulated as a result of the efforts of these workers to earn credits, and they are coming in to the contest department in greater volume every day. More than $200,000 spent in hard cash is represented in the credit evidence that has already been turned in by contestants. This is the striking testimony which proves that prosperity in Los Angeles is a demonstrable reality.

Naturally the new contestants may ask how they can hope to overcome the lead that other contenders have gained. As a matter of fact this advantage is not so formidable as it seems, because a new contestant with a few active friends may readily acquire even more credits than the number secured by any of the leaders in the Contest to date. It is simply necessary to conduct your campaign for credit-getting so that every effort will bring the largest possible result. Study the list of co-operating merchants and try to interest a friend or other willing co-worker in the neighborhood of each business house to trade where they can get Times Contest credit coupons. Then the collection of credit slips becomes a matter of simple routine. Try it—there is plenty of time yet to win a valuable prize.

A new entrant told us yesterday that he had paid little attention to the contest until within the last few days. When he received a credit coupon at the Regal Theater, where he had been enjoying the fine vaudeville presentation, he decided to enter the race himself. Then he got busy among his friends and found that a number of them would be willing to help him in his campaign. One man bought a suit of clothes at Wood Bros., the clothiers, No 343 South Spring street, while another had made a purchase of a traveling bag at Arnold Ross's, No. 221 West Second street. Both turned in their credit slips for the benefit of the new contestant, who thus was able to make a respectable start in the race with the 5000 credits that the filing of his nomination coupon brought him.

Others can do as well as this man. If you have any question on the subject come in and talk them over or call up the Trade Contest department for information. Use the coupon on this page for nomination, either in your own name or that of some friend whom you may wish to aid.

MORE FRAUD ALLEGED.

New evidence, tending to show that J. H. N. Wilson, the man with the "drooping eye," defrauded six insurance companies out of a large sum of money has been unearthed by the District Attorney's office. Wilson was recently held to answer to the Superior Court in $10,000 bail on a charge of obtaining $2500 by false pretenses from the Commonwealth Bonding and Casualty Company, of Texas. Additional complaints will probably be issued tomorrow. Wilson is alleged to have cleaned up more than $100,000 with his left eye, which always has the appearance of having been freshly injured. It really was hurt twenty-five years ago in Montreal, Can.

ASSAULT IS ALLEGED.

Frederick Galbraith, a young rancher of Lankershim, was arrested yesterday by Deputy Sheriff Henley on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. Galbraith is alleged to have struck Henry Miller, a farm hand, on the head with the butt end of a shotgun during a quarrel. Miller was seriously injured and physicians say his skull may be fractured. Galbraith claims he struck Miller in self-defense.

WOULD RENEW NOTES.

An application for permission to renew promissory notes totalling $14,500 was filed with the State Railroad Commission yesterday by the Southwestern Home Telephone Company of Redlands.

DEATH LEAP AS INVALIDS LOOK.

HELPLESS, THEY WATCH SICK WOMAN END HER OWN LIFE.

While other patients in the ward looked on helplessly unable to prevent her, Mrs. Edith Nordquist crawled from her bed at the County Hospital yesterday and leaped from the window of the fourth floor. She struck on the concrete pavement below and was dead when attendants rushed to the place.

Mrs. Nordquist, who was 37 years old, came from Providence, R. I., recently and had been living at No. 337 North Alto street, this city. She told attendants at the hospital where she had been for two weeks suffering from typhoid fever that she had been divorced from her husband a few months ago.

Other patients in the ward said that Mrs. Nordquist left her bed first and went to the door of the ward and then returned, only to get up again and, with great difficulty because of her weakness, made her walk to the window. They called for an attendant, but before they could make themselves heard, the woman had kneeled on the window sill for a moment and then thrown herself out.

Miss Annie Ledbetter, the woman's nurse, said that at 4 o'clock her patient was apparently resting quietly. It is the belief of the hospital authorities that when she jumped from the windows she was delirious.

THE MAN OF MANY NAMES.

Attorney for Chinese Accused of Impersonation Says It's Nothing to have Half-dozen.

The hearing of the charge against Gee Chung, an alien, of impersonating another Chinese of the same name, on appeal from the order of deportation made by Commissioner Williams, was concluded in Judge Bledsoe's court yesterday with the exception that several depositions are to be taken in San Francisco.

Gee Chung alleges to have arrived in Vancouver, B. C., from China, in either December, 1897 or January, 1898. Special Agent Joliffe, representing the Canadian Bureau of Emigration, produced the manifests of the landings of the Empress of Japan, on which steamer Gee Chung claims to have been a passenger. It was shown that on December 12, 1897, there were two Gee Chungs on the lists, but neither man in personal description corresponded in any way.

There was no Gee Chung in the manifest of the vessel arriving January 18, 1898, with the defendant. Gee Chung had a hearing before United States Commissioner George Johnson at Burlington, Vt., having been picked up with a number of Chinese along the border, and was refused admission into the country.

One of the features of the case was the effort of John L. McNabb of San Francisco, attorney for the Chinese Six Company, who represented the defendant, to show that every well-regulated Chinese has at least a half-dozen names—one given at his birth, another when he goes into business, another when he marries, and another for convenient use in case they are arrested for violation of the exclusion act, but the question was ruled out. The point sought was to show that it was in the range of possibilities that his client at the time was known by another name.

WOMAN SLASHES WOMAN.

Mrs. Maria Semaroz of Florence was arrested yesterday after slashing Mrs. Juanita Lomilito with a razor and seriously wounding her. She told Deputy Sheriff Wright that she attacked Mrs. Lomilito after charging her with trying to steal her husband. The injured woman was taken to the County Hospital. Mrs. Lomilito lived with Mr. and Mrs. Semaroz. Yesterday, according to the deputies, Mrs. Semaroz found the other woman in her husband's room.

Couldn't Be Fooled.

[London Answers:] Proudly young Tompkins displayed the sights of London to his uncle, fresh from the verdant country. They visited St. Paul's and the Embankment and the National Gallery and all the places they could get in free; finally, as an especial treat, they visited a music hall, where a trombone solo was in progress when they entered.

With rapt attention the old man watched the instrumentalist's facial contortions. At the close the audience applauded thunderously, but the old man sat mute.

"Well," said young Tompkins, "didn't you like it?"

"Verra good, verra good, no doubt," nodded the old man, "but we country folk canna be taken in so easy as all that; I knew all the time he wasn't a-swallowin' of it!"

Combing Won't Rid Hair of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

CLASSIC DRAMA FOR THE MASON.

Morosco Success "Songbird" to Continue.

Pretty Girls will Become Vases at Orpheum.

Continuous Vaudeville for the Republic.

What promises a great dramatic spectacle is the forthcoming presentation at the Mason next Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights only, of "Damon and Pythias." The piece is to be elaborately staged and accurately costumed.

A professional cast will give the drama, under the direction of William D. Taylor, who will also play the role of Damon, while George McDaniel will be Pythias. William G. Freeman will play Dionysius; Henry Kernan, Procles; H. G. Groul, Damocles; John Sheehan, Lucullus; Lillian Gardner, Calanthe; Phyllis Daniels, Hermione, and Mazie Clifford, Arria.

A special musical programme will be given under the direction of Marcel Meier, late of the Metropolitan Operahouse, New York.

Burbank.

Jane Cowl has the greatest role she has ever played in "The Songbird," by the Hattons, well-known Chicago dramatic critics. The piece is rated as the biggest success since "Peg o' My Heart." The production is to go East next week, where it will play at $2 prices, at the Princess Theater in Chicago, with practically the present cast, including William Courtleigh and George LeGuere.

"The Songbird" opens its final week this afternoon.

Orpheum.

Ceramic art, translated into terms of vaudeville, is to be the headline attraction at the Orpheum, whose promise piques our curiosity. Maria Lo and her especially selected company will present reproductions in china, the title of the act being "Porcelaine." It is said Miss Lo has carefully gone through museums and private collections, selecting therefrom for a unique reproduction the priceless examples of ceramics. The act promises beautiful and spectacular novelty.

Franker Wood and Bunee Wyde, in a patter act; the Big City Four, in harmony; Charles Prelle and his poodles, in a play, "The Robbing of the Overland Mail," and the holdovers—Ray Samuels, MaBelle and her ballet, Melville and Higgins and Bertish, the strong man—complete the bill, which will open on Monday afternoon.

Trinity Auditorium.

Irvin S. Cobb, noted humorist and war correspondent, will tell the real story of the European war at Trinity Auditorium tomorrow night, reciting not only the big facts as he saw them, but many little intimate details which came under his observation.

When the war started Cobb was sent to Belgium by the Saturday Evening Post, and his articles have received world-wide attention.

Motion pictures will, in part, illustrate Mr. Cobb's talk.

Mission Play.

The great California pageant, "The Mission Play," continues to draw large audiences to the pretty playhouse at San Gabriel, with its old-time atmosphere and its quaint historical settings.

Loew's Empress.

Jim Morton will head the new bill at the Empress, beginning Monday afternoon. He is billed as the "original nut of vaudeville," and his act is said to be most amusing.

Inez McCauley will present "The Girl from Childs;" the three Keltons are musicians; Cook and Stevens will give a colored comedian act; Charles Ledegar is a funny German in acrobatics, and Marie and Trevetto will give a grand opera programme.

Pantages.

Pantages will have two headliners on its new bill to open Monday. They are the Marco twins, who promise one of the funniest acts in vaudeville, and Will Abrams and Agnes Johns, in "Her Honer, the Mayor."

Others are the Bremens, acrobats; Howard and Mason, in musical comedy, Ray Lawrence and the Musical Nosses.

Hippodrome.

A seaweed dance, said to be mostly "see," will be the headliner on the new Hippodrome bill tomorrow. It will be done by Vivian Marshall, with her bevy of diving beauties.

Evans and Durans, two pretty girls, in song and dance numbers; Lester Raymond, novelty juggler; the Strattons, in "A Nobble of Scotch;" Ora and Ives, the Chinaman and the dude; the Morris Baboons, and Francisca Redding and her company in "On the Links," will complete the bill.

Republic.

Bert Levey's new policy of continuous vaudeville, with twelve acts at each performance, will be ushered in at the Republic tomorrow afternoon.

The first bill promises well.

Dr. Henry G. Lorenz will head the list. He is a scientific hypnotist and his act promises something new each night. The sensation of his turn is a semi-nude hypnotic dance done by a subject chosen from the audience.

Others will be O'Dell, Hart and Hall, introducing the smallest man in the world; the two Ben Abdies, acrobats; Burill Kaye and La France, in song and patter; Dale and Long, in comedy; Rye and Norman, in a Herculean novelty; Cole and Girard, in musical numbers; Bedford and Gardner, in some new ballroom dances; Adams and Peters, in comedy; Walter McKay, in an instrumental act; George Hunter, singing and dancing monologist, and Ed C. Durkee, comedian.

Century.

A practically new company will come to the Century tomorrow, in two new and spectacular burlesques, "Around the Town" and "The Big Chief."

Five vaudeville acts and a series of living pictures will accompany the burlesques.

Franker Wood and Bunee Wyde. Orpheum.

Damon and Pythias. Mason.

Wm. R. Abram. Pantages.

Elaine Durand. Hippodrome.

George Osborne, "Mission Play."

Dr. Henry G. Lorenz. Hypnotist. Republic.

Jane Cowl and George Le Guere in "The Songbird," Burbank.

Inez McCauley Empress.

THE RESURRECTION LILY.

A drop of blood from a martyred head,
Stained red Golgotha's weird charnel bed.
That globe contained all of mankind's sin,
All that then was and has evermore been.

In the Holy dusk of an Eastern morn,
From this sacred drop was a lily born;
Folded in cerements of glowing white,
Vision inviolate, in dawn's first light.

Her paling buds, like shrouded nuns, bend low
Over beaded dew drops, row upon row;
A rosary of pure distilled dew,
That shimmers with an amaranthine hue.

A spirit ichor seems to fill her veins,
Sweeping away all of sin's murky stains.
"He is risen" is the glad song she hears,
Echoed and re-echoed through all the spheres.

Her chaliced cup, pale, luminous, frail,
Dyed ruby red, as the Holy Grail,
She lifts on high, to the day new born,
Glorified in the Resurrection Morn.

WILL JANE COWL RECOGNIZE HERSELF BY THIS ANALYSIS?

"The Times" Critic Makes a Study of Her Attainments and Possibilities, with Much Left for the Future to Answer—"Experience" is also Brought up for Discussion and Floral Art Theater Idea is Presented.

BY HENRY CHRISTEEN WARNACK.

LET us consider briefly and prayerfully the case of Jane Cowl—briefly, because it is more than possible that the limited facts before us by no means exhaust the subject; prayerfully, inasmuch as this willful girl, with her strange commingling of ennui and enthusiasm, so nearly approximates the artist as to guarantee a precious talent and as to threaten genius.

In a whole evening of good work on the stage one is given only five minutes to mark the dividing line between the merely competent actor or actress and the splendid, blazing spiritual vitality of the consummate artist and the supreme genius.

One may be very great as the former and never measure to the latter. An actress may be clever and talented and only be doing what she is told to do. Genius is where consciousness possesses a man or a woman, and where the body is held subservient to the light that burns upon the altar of the heart.

I do not think Jane Cowl has seen that light, but she is a fine temple and I cannot say but that out of the mysteries this thing will not come upon her.

She does not know now. Her dainty shoulders will doubtless shrug in that inimitable, competent little way of hers when she reads these lines, if ever she does. Lips that are superbly sensuous—lips like the pomegranate bursting with ripeness—will curve upward in their red scorn. Eyes as dark as sloes and lit by the light of the whitest stars, will flash with a second of resentment. One of the most perfect and decorative of noses that ever placed the last stamp of beauty on a face made for worship will quiver with its swift dissension. Yet I do not recant.

Jane Cowl has come a long ways, passing the thousands and the tens of thousands, yet the road ahead is very far and strewn with bitter barriers.

Will she transcend? Will she step from height to height? Will she stand one day serene and ultimate, at the summit of a matchless art? Time may answer, but I cannot.

I will venture to say that right now Miss Cowl could not even tell you if she desires all this. She is so essentially a woman, with all of a woman's whims, fancies and willfulness, that she is about the last person in the world I would call upon as a competent witness in her case.

You see, the average actress must be measured first by her ability to look the part she is given.

So long as a role is within reason, Jane Cowl will always measure to this demand with superb adequacy. Nothing could be too dainty or difficult for her beauty and capacity.

She can be the goddess, in so far as looks go, and she can be the gamin. Bless her loveliness! It is equal to the last test. So, I think, is her versatility. She is a remarkable creature, capable of the utmost elasticity—fluid for any mould, metal for any situation.

The second qualification of the actress is an aptitude for saying what she is told to say in the way she is directed to say it. Jane Cowl can do this with an emphasis so nice as to bring any audience under an instant

WHIMSICAL SUITE PROVES SUCCESS.

UNIQUE AMERICAN WORK GIVEN AT CHICAGO.

Carpenter's Clever Musical Composition Portrays Child Moods. Julia Culp in Recital Here this Week—Last Brahms Quintette Concert for this Season.

BY EDWIN F. SCHALLERT.

Quite a striking success was achieved recently in the presentation of John Alden Carpenter's clever and whimsical suite, "Adventures in a Perambulator," at a concert of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. The work abounds with original and interesting ideas, for which the composer, who is one of America's foremost musical geniuses, is noted.

The suite seeks to portray the various first impressions and moods conjured up in a baby's brain by his first acquaintance with such personages and things as the policemen, the hurdy-gurdy, dogs and the lake. Carpenter, with his peculiar faculty of penetration, gets remarkable effects in his delineation of this child fantasy.

Carpenter has already carved quite a unique niche for himself in the hallway of American music. He has felt the influences of the modern European composers' music, but has molded these in his own crucible, and achieved beside some very different and definite effects and nuances.

Julia Culp Recitals.

Coincidently, two of Carpenter's songs, settings of prose poems of Rabindranath Tagore's "Gitanjali," form a part of one of the programmes to be rendered by Julia Culp this week. Both songs have the thought of children about them, and they may give just a brief vision in miniature of the mood which underlies the work performed in Chicago.

Schubert, Schumann, Brahms and Wolf are idols of Julia Culp, the great lieder singer, as they should be with every great lieder singer. She is to appear Thursday evening and Saturday matinee at Trinity. She has a group of Schubert and a group of Brahms songs on her first programme. The names of Beethoven, Schumann and Wolf appear on the matinee programme.

This is Miss Culp's third season in America, but the coming recitals will be her first in Los Angeles. Her programmes contain many interesting numbers. They are announced as follows:

For Thursday evening:

IV.

(d) Morgen	Richard Strauss
(e) Heimliche Aufforderung	Richard Strauss

Coenraad V. Bos, who is already known to local audiences from his having appeared with Ludwig Wuellner in concerts several seasons ago, will be Miss Culp's accompanist. His wonderfully sympathetic and dramatic renditions of accompaniments always lend a great deal to the renditions of the greater lieder songs, in most of which the pianoforte's function is almost as important as that of the voice.

Unnecessary Inharmony.

Speaking of the importance of the piano in modern song-writing reminds one of the importance of proper voicing and tuning of pianos before concerts. On several occasions recently the effectiveness of renditions has been marred by improper or inefficient tuning of the instrument, or by its inadequacy.

Why a small salon grand piano should be chosen as the proper instrument on which to render a concerto with an orchestra, which actually occurred at a recent concert, is a mystery. The effect of much of the music, especially in the louder portions, was lost simply because the tone would not carry.

And the piano, whether large or small, should be properly tuned. There is no need for adding to the inharmonies in some modern music.

Music Festival.

Preparations go merrily on for the music festival which opens the latter part of June. This week saw the arrival of several of the scores of compositions which are to be performed at that time. The 1915 prize symphony in C Minor is due to arrive shortly, and rehearsals of the work by the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra will be started. Just to give the local musicians an idea what his work is like the composer sent on a copy of his "Paolo and Francesca" suite.

Adolph M. Foerster's trio for strings and piano, Opus 61, in score has already reached here, and members of the Brahms Quintette will soon begin to practice it. The composer himself will play the piano part.

Chadwick's symphonic sketches which are also to have a hearing have been received, and will shortly be rehearsed by the Symphony.

"Fairyland" Chorus.

The "Fairyland" chorus under the direction of L. F. Gottschalk is making headway in the work of rehearsing the difficult choral passages in which the opera abounds. Rehearsals are being held at the Normal auditorium.

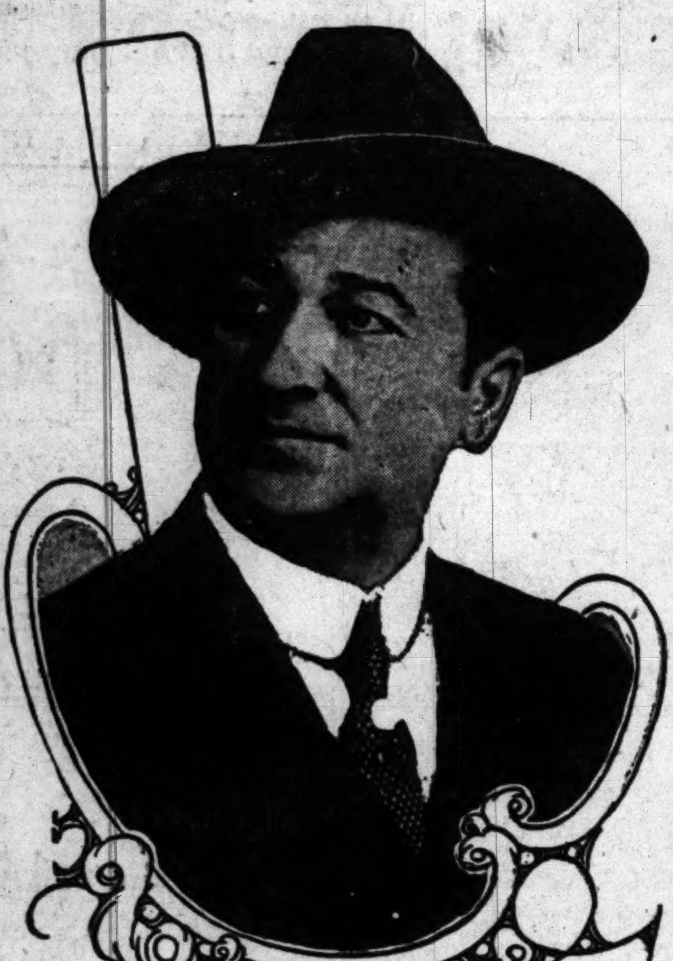
Mr. Gottschalk reports a sufficient number of women, but is still short of good male voices. He expects to get the chorus saturated with "Fairyland" and through most of the drudgery before the arrival of Alfred Hertz to superintend the final rehearsals.

All the principals will be of international fame, secured mainly from the Metropolitan Operahouse ranks.

School Programme.

Quite a definite outline of the programme for the school children's day has already been arrived at. There will be musical numbers in the morning of June 25 illustrating the intermediate high school work. This will be preceded by a talk by Supt. J. H. Francis.

A musical pageant of the seasons will be presented by the elementary grades in the afternoon. The progress of the orchestral department of the grade schools will also be illustrated at this time.



Florencio Constantino,

Well-known operatic tenor, who will give a farewell concert here next Sunday at Clune's Auditorium.

The day will close with an evening concert given by high schools of the city. Los Angeles claims to have the most extensive and best developed high school music course in the country, and the concert planned will show the various solo and ensemble achievements, representing actual work carried on throughout the year.

The public school programmes will not only be of interest to those actively engaged in such work, but to musicians generally who will visit the Coast during the convention.

Brahms Quintette Concert.

Two piano quintettes of unusual merit will feature the last concert of the Brahms quintette next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening. The Saint-Saens Piano Quintette in A Minor, one of the early works of the French composer, will be one of these; the other will be Philip Scharwenka's Piano Quintette (Opus 118.) The Saint-Saens quintette is a very melodious work. There are many delightful Frenchy touches in the working out of the themes. The treatment in a way suggests a piano concerto, there being a great deal of exacting work for that instrument. There is an interesting chorale at the opening of the second movement, and some very brilliant piano passages in the third, as well as quite a striking fugue for strings opening the fourth movement.

The Scharwenka quintette, while not ultra-modern in its tendencies, is still in the modern vein and is a very interesting composition. Its movements are as follows: Allegro non tanto, Adagio sentimento. Moderato and finale—allegro.

Soloist for the concert will be Roland Paul, the well-known local tenor, who will sing the following numbers: Aria, "O mia piccola tavola" ("Zaza,") (Leoncavallo;) "Si j'etait rayon" (Vidal;) "Caecilie" (Richard Strauss.)

By Local Composer.

Compositions of Gertrude Ross will feature the musical division of the programme to be presented by the College Woman's Club at its third annual creative evening next Friday at the Gamut Club. The songs are "At Twilight," "The Open Road" and an interesting war trilogy—"War," "A Babe's First Cry" and "Peace," with the text by Mrs. Arthur B. Dodge. They will be sung by Mrs. Grace Widney-Mabee. The creative evening is under the management of the drama and creative section, with Miss Bessie Lea French, chairman, assisted by Miss Louise Gatch, Miss Margaret Phillipson and Miss Anne Mumford.

Present Talented Pianist.

The college of music of the University of Southern California will present Wesley F. P. Kuhnle, a talented young pianist, in recital tomorrow evening at Symphony Hall. He is a pupil of Dean W. F. Skeele in piano and organ and of C. E. Pemberton in theoretical work.

Although only 16 years of age, he will graduate in June in piano and theory. He is also an accomplished organist, having played the large instrument at the First M. E. Church on several occasions. He is a nephew of Henry Edward Krehbiel, well-known musical critic of the New York Tribune.

His programme includes the Beethoven sonata, Opus 31, No. 3; Mendelssohn Presto in E and the Rondo Capriccioso, the Grieg Holberg Suite, Chopin Nocturne in F and prelude in A flat, Bach "Preambule" (from sixth violin sonata) and "Rondolinette" ("Barcarolle") by C. E. Pemberton.

The pianist will be assisted by Miss Marie Deets, soprano, pupil of Mrs. N. R. Robbins of the college.

Sessions Organ Recital.

Wagner, Rachmaninoff and Guilmant are among the names appearing on the programme to be offered by Archibald Sessions at his last organ recital for this season next Wednesday afternoon at 4:30 at Christ Church. Wagner will be represented by the march and chorus from "Tannhaeuser," Rachmaninoff by the Prelude in C Sharp Minor and Guilmant by "Marche Nuptials." Other numbers will be as follows: "Harmonies of Evening" (Karg-Elert,) "Minuet" (Boccherini,) "Nocturne" (Dethier,) "Alleluia" (Dubois.) The soloist will be Herr Reinhold Geschler, tenor, who will sing the "Geistliches Lied" ("Der Evangelenmann") (Kienzl,) "Fahr wohl, ich hatte Dich so lieb. Scheone, and "Che Gelida Manina," "La Boheme" (Puccini.) This will be the one hundred fifteenth recital played by Mr. Sessions, in Christ Church.

Constantino Next Sunday.

There is every promise of a very large attendance at the coming concert of the well-known operatic tenor, Florencio Constantino, to be given next Sunday at Clune's Auditorium. The event will afford an opportunity to get acquainted with the remarkable artist's personality at closer range, than on the operatic stage. His programme will contain a delightful series of pleasing and familiar numbers, well calculated to show off the lyric beauties of his superb voice.

Orchestral Concert.

The next concert of the First Congregational Church Orchestra, under the baton of William H. Mead, will be given next Friday evening in the church auditorium, No. 841 South Hope street.

The soloist for this concert will be Molly Byerly Wilson, popular dramatic controlto, who, accompanied by the orchestra, will be heard in the following numbers:

"My Heart is Weary" ("Nadeschda" aria,) (Goring Thomas;) "O, Golden Sun" (Grace Adele Freebey;) "Lungi dal Caro Bene" (Secchi.)

The First Congregational Church orchestra, composed of fifty young ladies and gentlemen, is now in its twentieth season, and the present entertainment, which is the second of a series of three for this season, will be the fifty-first concert given by the orchestra.

The programme to be presented next Friday evening will include the following orchestral numbers:

G Minor Symphony (Mozart,) Rosa Munde Overture (Schubert,) Concert selection from opera "Herodiade" (Massenet,) "Valse Brillante" (Chopin,) Andante from Second Violin Concerto (Wieniawski.)

This evening's entertainment is open to the public with complimentary admission, a silver offering to be taken to defray expenses.

Demorest Organ Recital.

A recital will be given by Charles H. Demorest, organist, this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Broadway Christian Church (North Broadway.) The following is the programme:

Offertorie in D (Batiste;) "Spring Song" (Mendelssohn;) "An Autumn Sketch" (Brewer;) variations on "Jerusalem the Golden" (Spark;) "By the Sea" (Schubert;) Novelette (Marquis;) Meditation from "Thais" (Massenet;) Minuet in G (Beethoven;) Andantino in D Flat (Lemare;) "To a Wild Rose" (Macdowell;) "Hallelujah Chorus" from "Messiah" (Handel.)

Beverly Programme.

The following Easter programme of nature songs will be presented this evening at the Beverly Hills Hotel by Estelle Hearte Dreyfus, contralto, assisted by Mr. Glenn Knight, accompanist, and the Beverly Trio:

Elements, "O Sunshine" (Neidlinger;) "The Snowflakes" (Cowen;) "The Wind" (Spross.)

Seasons, "The Autumnal Gale," (Grieg,) Mrs. Dreyfus; "Woodland Whispers" (Czibuka,) the Beverly Trio.

Blossoms, "I Heard a Rose Complain" (Rubinstein,) "Lilacs" (Rachmanoff,) "Lotus Blume" (Schumann,) "Daisies" (Manney,) "Cherry Bloom" (in Japanese,) (Arr. Knight,) Mrs. Dreyfus; "To a Wild Rose" (McDowell,) the Beverly Trio.

Birds, "The Skylark" (Rubinstein,) "The Swan" (Grieg,) "When the Birds go North" (Willeby,) Mrs. Dreyfus.

On Benefit Programme.

A number of well-known local musical artists will appear on the programme to be given for the benefit of the Children's Home Society of California and the Trinity M. E. Church building fund next Tuesday evening at Trinity Auditorium. G. Allan Hancock, prominent in local musical circles, will play 'cello numbers; May MacDonald, artistic pupil of Carreno, will give piano selections. Other charming numbers are promised by Prof. Frederick A. Herrmann, organist; R. M. Staples, violin virtuoso, and Miss Irene Wadley, soprano. The Los Angeles Oratorio Society and the Orpheus male quartette will also appear. There are also several whistling and other features on the programme.

Morning Musicale.

The next morning musicale, given by Miss Bessie Irene Chapin, violiniste, will take place Tuesday at the residence of Mrs. G. Allan Hancock, No. 3189 Wilshire boulevard. It will be devoted to "the music of France and Belgium."

The programme is the third and last for this season. All of this year's have dealt with the European war, the first being concerned with the music of the Slavs and the second with the music of Germany and Austria.

Miss Chapin will be assisted by Mrs. Catherine Collette-Shank, soprano; Mr. Sollie Heilbronner, pianist, and Mr. Robert Durand, 'cellist. Allan Hancock is to play some Debussy numbers on the organ. Mrs. Collette will sing "Il est Douce, il est Bon," from Massenet's "Herodiade," and a group of Belgian and French folk songs.

The Bessie Chapin trio has been organized for four years.

Next Popular Concert.

The next popular concert of the Woman's Orchestra will be given April 18 at Clune's Auditorium. The complete programme will be announced later. Other events have interfered with the securing of the auditorium for today and next Sunday.

The attendance at the second popular concert showed quite an increase over the preceding one. Three more will be given in the present series and others may follow later.

MUSIC NOTES.

Special attention is called to the change in date of the Jaime Overton violin recital. Mr. Overton will be heard at Trinity Wednesday evening, April 14.

Players of the wood wind instruments are looking forward to the forthcoming concert of the Barrere Wood Wind Ensemble, the evening of April 20, at Trinity. This clever orchestra in miniature has been attracting widespread attention on this, their second American tour. They are under the direction of George Barrere, the distinguished French flautist.

BIG FEATURES AT MAJESTIC.

Pretty Mrs. Smith to Visit Tally's Broadway.

"Valley of the Missing" to be Miller Thriller.

Charlie Chaplin is Holding Forth at Optic.

A change in the local theatrical situation goes into effect at 11 o'clock this morning, when the Majestic Theater, one of the best-known playhouses west of the Mississippi, forsakes the "legit" and becomes a motion-picture house. This change is a striking tribute to the ever-increasing popularity of the silent drama, an important addition to the ranks of screendom.

The Majestic boasts one of the largest seating capacities on the Coast, and with the alterations made during the past week in the seating arrangements, whereby the picture screen will be set back some fifty feet beyond the orchestra pit, even the front rows and boxes will be desirable locations.

Regarding the films, the policy will be to present not merely one big feature, as is the established custom, but two of the best film plays which can be secured.

"The Fight," a filmization of Bayard Veiller's play, produced by George Leder, and George Kleine's "The Woman Who Dared," a thrilling tale of the continental spy system, featuring Francesca Bertini, said to be the most beautiful woman in pictures, are the first two offerings.

The screen on which these pictures will be shown will be the largest on the Coast, and it will be set in a beautiful floral and scenic display.

A women's orchestra is another feature of the entertainment.

Tally's Broadway.

"Pretty Mrs. Smith," featuring Fritzi Scheff, is the attraction for Tally's Broadway for the present week, beginning tomorrow.

Myrtle Stedman in Hypocrites, Quinn's Superba.

The Harris-Morosco play was first produced at the Burbank Theater here, when it was a big success. It is said that the play on the film has lost nothing of its delightful comedy character.

Miss Scheff wears a flock of lovely gowns in the photoplay.

Several Burbank favorites, including Louis Bennison and Forrest Stanley, appear in the cast, as well as Owen Moore and Myrtle Stedman of the Bosworth studio.

Quinn's Superba.

"Hypocrites," featuring the lovely Margaret Edwards as "Truth," has been breaking records at Quinn's Superba, and will enter on its third week tomorrow.

Quinn's Garrick.

"Three Weeks," the film adaptation of Elinor Glyn's novel, will be shown at Quinn's Garrick for one week, commencing tomorrow. The photoplay ran for several weeks at the Superba. The film drama cost $100,000 to produce, and is sumptuously mounted and well played.

Miller's.

"From the Valley of the Missing," by Grace Miller White, author of "Tess of the Storm Country," is to be the attraction at Miller's during this week, starting tomorrow. It is a Fox feature, and promises to be one of the best which the Miller has shown. The piece is staged in Georgia and 1000 people were used in its production.

Jane Miller, late leading lady of "Life," which ran all season in New York; Clifford Bruce and other well-known Broadway favorites, take part.

Another installment of the thrilling "Exploits of Elaine" is the added attraction.

Clune's Auditorium.

"The Clansman" enters on its last week at Clune's Auditorium tomorrow. The photodrama is playing to $2 prices in New York, where throngs crowd the Liberty Theater.

Clune's Broadway.

Charlie Chaplin in his latest comedy is pleasing big crowds at Clune's Broadway, and for this reason will be held over for the first part of the week.

The last four days of the week "The Siren's "Reign," featuring Alice Hollister, will be shown.

Alhambra.

Orrin Johnson will make his first film appearance at the Alhambra during the present week in "Satan Sanderson."

The photoplay is based on the novel and play of the same name, and is

"Mr. Barnes of New York," featuring Maurice Costello, is to be the attraction at the Arrow this week. The play is based on the novel of the same name, by Archibald Clavering Gunter, and abounds in thrilling climaxes and exciting situations.

Woodley.

So successful was the Mary Pickford revue, staged by Manager Seth D. Perkins of the Woodley Theater a few weeks ago, that that enterprising young executive has decided to produce a second one of the series. It will show "the darling of the movies," as she is called, in an entirely different set of characters from those of the former production.

Associated with Miss Pickford in the bill are a number of famous stars, including Mack Sennett, now head of the Keystone Film Company; Blanche Sweet, Henry Walthal, Arthur Johnson and others.

Lew Fields, the world famous comedian, will be seen in the five-reel version of "Old Dutch," his greatest stage success, for today and tonight only.

Optic.

Charlie Chaplin comedies have come to be a permanent feature at the Optic Theater, as Manager Seth D. Perkins finds they are prime drawing cards, and have a strong appeal to the fun-loving populace. "In the Park," one of his latest Essanay features, will be shown today and tonight only.

On Thursday of this week Charlie will be seen in "A Jitney Elopement," dealing with the much-discussed problem of the "jitney" busses. A number of interesting single-reel comedy features will be shown for the first half of the coming week.

Warnack's Gossip.

conviction. She never fails to communicate intelligence. Her voice makes the right impression, and so do her manners. Her presence is an authority. Her words ring true. She is one of the few women I ever knew who could read something as if it were being said for the first time, said exactly as if she meant it and never said too well.

These two demands which I have outlined in the foregoing, when adequately met, make the ideal actress. Meeting them is usually beyond the average actress; it is as far as she goes at the outside. Jane Cowl makes the whole distance without a sign of distress. She does it without hesitance and without effort. Looking well and speaking well are the same as second nature with her. Yes, I think they are first nature with her.

Up to that point she is not dissembling. She is only her own lovely self, beautifully expressed. In so far as conventional acting goes, she is already a divine success. What I am afraid of, is that this will satisfy her, but it does not satisfy me and it will not satisfy art.

For a woman to be able to do this much and not insist on doing more would be downright laziness of soul. I don't want a lazy Jane Cowl. I don't want a blase Jane Cowl. I want a woman of awakened mind, of powerful emotions, of great capacity for suffering. Eyes like hers should reflect the sorrow and striving of the whole world. A face like hers should mirror the struggle of her kind. She has never been a mother. She hasn't had time. She should take time. I am not thinking about a child when I say this, but only the final making of the mother. For a woman like Jane Cowl spreads the soft mantle of her motherhood over the multitude. The grown-up children of the world are succored by her. Her new-found tenderness touches the heart of the world. Any great love, any great storm would be sufficient to bring that consciousness out of which the great message descends.

I am not quarreling with Miss Cowl, not even criticising her. I am only suggesting that a woman of so much beauty and capacity may go anywhere, provided she has aspiration for her hand-maiden and love for her guide. I do not mean a personal love, for she is too big a woman not to have found that already. I mean that affection, which pays the world back for the priceless gift of love by putting its white arms around the world and pressing all the creatures of the earth against her yearning breast.

You see, I am demanding much. I see how the supreme artist never arrives, short of a cosmic travail.

Miss Cowl is only 26 years of age. She thinks of that as being very old. She tried to weep her eyes out when she was 25, because she thought that was the turning point, leading straight to old age. The rest of us know that she will not mature until she is 35, and that she will then have ahead of her ten years of her best work and greatest power.

She is beautiful now, she satisfies as few actresses on the American stage, but if she stops where she is, it will not be enough, and there will be no reason for this insufficiency, this soul-incompleteness and this sad waste of a divine investment.

She went on the stage at 19, going straightway under the direction of David Belasco. At 21, she was given the lead in the play, "Is Matrimony a Failure?" A little later she had the lead in "The Gamblers." For three years she never stopped work for a day, playing summer stock at Union Hill, N. J., and through the winter on Broadway.

This is enough to guarantee the faithfulness of her apprenticeship. She has had the energy and the patience of good schooling. The rest is up to her. The outside work is done.

From now on her accomplishment must be from within. Henceforth everything will depend upon the evolution of her own soul. Her mental and spiritual growth, which must be accomplished by herself and within herself, will decide on just how far she will go. Another year will be the beginning of the end. At 27 she will start forward on the second breath, which carries great souls into illimitable realms, or she will stop where she is, a proficient actress, but not a towering genius.

Pray for the soul of Jane Cowl.

On my desk is one of the first copies of "Experience" as a published play.

Do not accept this as literal. I have no desk, never had one and never want one.

As a matter of truth, the book is on my stenographer's desk, having been rescued an hour ago from an old willow rocking-chair that stays night and day under a banana tree, with an immense bush of bridal wreath to its back, and when the play was being read to me, I was not listening so much to it, as watching an oriel weave the silken fiber for a nest he was sewing beneath the great leaf of a twenty-five-foot palm. I heard the mocking birds in the orange trees for one bar of out-of-door music and thought as much about that as I did about "Experience."

Any kind of a book ought to read well under those circumstances. This one did. "Experience" was written by George V. Hobart and has been played with great success at the Casino Theater, New York, for the past sixth months.

It is a very much better play than "Everywoman" and something on the same order. It is written and acted in ten episodes. The first five are rather tame. The next three are tremendous. Indeed, the interest begins with the Corridors of Chance, which is the fourth episode, and from that time forward, the action of the play increases steadily. The ninth and tenth episodes are rather lame, being an effort to reconcile the audience with the ways of life and to corral youth into some sort of estate of decency.

"In the House of Last Resort," "The Street of Remorse" and "The House of Lost Souls" we reach the summit of the play's dramatic possibilities. Up to the first of these, we must simply be patient, for we are in a process of preparation. And in the last two episodes, "The Street of Forgotten Days" and in "The Land Where the Dreamer Awakens" we are merely being let down easy.

I hate a morality play on general principles, but this one is exceedingly good of its kind. I much prefer, to have living men proving character and demonstrating principles than to have attributes and principles dressed up as men. The success of this drama is not due to the fact that it is a morality play, but begins where the action becomes so human that the morality feature is lost sight of. In other words, the three big episodes make a big play that the dressed up and trumped up episodes are unable to spoil.

This week a man came to me with an idea. He had two ideas, in fact, but one of them outshines the other. The man is Dr. N. F. W. Hazeldine. His main idea was a plan to build a floral art theater. It might be of any size sinze an out-of-door theater is capable of the greatest flexibility. It would be built in any amphitheater like the splendid site in Griffith Park. It would have no roof. The rafters would be covered with blossoming vines, such as clematis, wistaria or climbing roses and honeysuckle. Electric lights amidst this foliage and among the flowers would give a superb effect. The wing columns would be hollow, operating like sliding doors. The entrance would be from either side, the stage would be the full width of the theater. The entire background would be covered with native flowers and vines. The seats would be Roman and there would be a wooden floor. The idea is splendid and inexpensive.

The second idea is that of a sacred music drama, which would place a modern symbolic interpretation upon Jacob's dream. Hazeldine calls it "The Birth of Music and Song." He says that Jacob, or Saul, the supplanter, selects his first camping ground at Luz or the camp of the almond tree, where he falls asleep and dreams that he sees a ladder set upon the earth, the top of which reaches unto heaven. This ladder is the immortal symbol of the base and treble lines or staves of music which forever have their bass staff set upon earth with heaven as their treble staff.

The wings of the ladder are the bars and upon this ladder the angels or the notes ascend and descend, according to the direction of the scale. Then Jacob, the supplanter of the silence, awoke from his sleep and he said, "The spirit of music and of song are within me. I have heard their voices; even I, Jacob, the supplanter, have broken the silence of the ages. Surely this consciousness is the Lord's place, which I have known not. Verily, music is the House of God and song is the gate of Heaven."

Perhaps we owe something of the enjoyable performance of "Potash and Permutter" to Manager Friedlander of the Majestic. It was Friedlander who many years ago picked up Barney Bernard on the streets of New York and brought him to California to try him out in stock. Bernard worked here for seven years and thinks of this as home. Friedlander also was the original discoverer of Kolb and Dill and brought them to California at a very tender age. He did a good job in both cases.

"Hypocrites"

THE FAMOUS FILM THAT HAS STARTLED THE WORLD?

3rd Big Week Starts Tomorrow

READ THESE CRITICISMS:

"If it is immoral, the most noted paintings would have to be sequestrated. The fact that hypocrisy is exposed and made obnoxious to the spectator, can hardly be denied by any viewers of the picture."—Otheman Stevens in the Examiner.

"The manner in which the naked character is injected into the story is such that it gives no offense and suggests no vulgarity. The picture, we confess willingly, is out of the ordinary, even startlingly frank in its dealings with society, but hardly suggestive of evil."—Guy Price, in the Evening Herald.

"There is absolutely nothing shocking in the young lady's appearance and the show was over before it dawned on me that the management or anybody else had expected me to be shocked."—Henry Christeen Warnack, in The Times.

"A photoplay called 'Hypocrites' is being exhibited in our city at the present time. It contains some very strong lessons for the hypocrites of Los Angeles. If we could get all the hypocrites of our city to go see the picture I am sure they would be benefited."—Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher, Pastor of Temple Baptist Church, in his sermon last Sunday evening.

A DEBUTANTE'S LETTER.

REDLANDS, April 2.

Mater, darling: I'm so glad you let me come to Redlands with the pater because he is much too absorbed in golf to look after me and I am having a perfectly scrumptious time.

You know they seem to think I am quite nice up here and they can't see any of my faults. What is regarded as insufferable impudence at home is just youthful exuberance here, and you know how I love exuberating. As for looks, Redlands is so chuck full of pretty girls that they find my homeliness quite an interesting change. Consequently I have two flirtations on my hands—and I never could manage more than one at a time with any finesse.

Redlands is all excited about Mrs. Henry Fisher's calico ball, which comes off on Monday. She's the social queen, supreme and unquestioned here, and when she erupts parties they are ultra and super and hyper and very quiet, and it's awful to be left out. I don't think anyone is going to be left out this time, though—queens can afford to be democratic. It's to meet some eastern relatives of Mr. Fisher's—the J. Arter Fishers—and the invitations were decorated with a pattern of black calico with pink roses, as a hint that nothing more sumptuous than that in the way of gowns will meet an approving eye. Their lovely home is called "Casa Morisca" and is a fairy palace.

There are so many lovely homes here, hidden among wonder gardens; one belonging to Mrs. Kimberly is specially beautiful—"Kimberly Crest," they call it. She is going to be one of the patronesses at the forthcoming horticultural show, which is one of the exclusive society functions of the year here. It's due April 9 and 10, and they are planning some gay festivities. Sixteen of the prettiest pretty Redlands girls are going to do a flower dance, a la Maud Allan classics. Mrs. Jennie Davis, who has two or three pretty daughters, mostly married, is the patroness-in-chief; she is one of those charming, plump, comfortable, dimpled mamas who easily cut out their daughters.

And there is a concerted movement on the part of Redlands to marry off Fred E. Hornby, the 6-foot 3-inch brother of Raymond. They seem to think Dorothy Davis would be the ideal bride. But I don't know, for Dorothy is rather sweet and the Hornby giant has a celebrated temper, which would be a very tall order for any trusting maiden to undertake.

I must tell you a joke on George W. Wilder. He donated the cup for that horticultural show, which is open to talented amateur gardeners only. And he has a very attractive wife, who has the loveliest bejeweled fingers for playing bridge with that I have seen. Well, he feels very emotional about certain people in connection with the show and he wants the local papers to print things. But they believe that sweetness and tolerance are their long suits. I expect, anyway, he is credited with an intention to start a local paper of his own so that he can say what he likes about people. So everybody has been composing scurrilous editorials for him, and feature stories, and he is simply overwhelmed with journalistic talent, all offered free.

Among some of the charming hostesses here is Mrs. A. C. Cameron, who is highly popular. She has white hair, but such a young face and figure. But she has two big sons and a golfing husband, so no wonder her hair is white. That Dr. A. D. Cameron is the brother who lives at Riverside—they have all girls over there. And there is a long-standing golf feud between the brothers that causes no end of fun.

Then there is Mrs. Leffets and her tall husband. She has such a sweet voice and is tall and fair as a lily. Mrs. H. H. Garstin is giving a card party at the Country Club one evening next week to the British Society, which is going to be a very special affair. They have a big ranch and a fascinating home, and are very popular here.

An attractive widow is Mrs. A. D. Robinson, in the interesting thirties, dresses awfully well, pretty in a brunette style and always pronounced very charming. Have you noticed how every community manages to maintain at least one merry widow? I seem to be telling you about all nice people, but really one doesn't meet any horrid ones. What they would regard as really horrid in Redlands we should think merely "not quite so nice as some."

Mrs. Percy Harley has a wee baby a week old, and Percy—who is 6 feet 4 inches, and has to be introduced to one in sections—was trying hard not to look flamboyantly proud up at the club. He and E. S. Graham are the crack amateur actors up here. They are putting on "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" soon with all amateur talent, and Graham is to play Blackie. They had a minstrel show a little while ago and these two were "end" men. And if you are not spry every single Redlands resident will corner you and let off those jokes.

Such a lot of charming dames at the Country Club yesterday, and that dear bachelor-poet, Ben Aymar, mothers them all. He poured tea with matronly dignity and handed a soft compliment with each cup. Mrs. C. F. Smith, an extra pretty young woman, was there; likewise that jolly athletic girl, Katherine Williams, and little Mrs. Morris Phillips, who comes about up to her tall husband's watch chain.

They are quite rich in nice bachelors up here, too—I wonder whether the pretty girls are a cause or an effect. Anyway, mater dear, if ever I have to be banished, I hope I'll be banished to Redlands—it's a perfectly ducky little town and quite guiltless of the vulgarity of "progress." Every now and then some alien soul tries to "boost" Redlands, but he can't get any support and generally emigrates to Los Angeles or Long Beach, where his special talents find more appreciation. And Redlands subsides into decorous tranquillity with a sigh of relief.

I'm trying to take care of father for you, dear, but he is a great responsibility. I saw him off to bed at 10 o'clock last night, as he said he had a very early match tuis morning. But I overheard some men who did not know I belonged saying something about him winning $400 at banco. He looked very sheepish when I challenged him and said something about me running downtown and getting myself a new hat. They certainly have some ducky millinery shops here, and my new banco sailor is a pet.

Well, good-by, lovey mother—we'll be home again pretty soon.

THE WEEK.

PARTIES, RECEPTIONS, DINNERS, WEDDINGS AND THE LIKE.

"Oh! day of days! shall hearts set free
No 'minstrel rapture' find for thee?
Thou art the sun of other days,
They shine by giving back thy rays:
Enthroned in the sovereign sphere,
Thou shedd'st thy light on all the year;
Sundays by thee more glorious break
An Easter Day in every week."

Again is the festive Easter-tide upon us. No more is the somber gray of penitential Lent to clothe us. The chrysalis is past, and today the butterfly with its gala dress of rainbow hue emerges, ready to start unhampered on its winged passage among the flowers, sipping here and there along its blithe path.

Easter, with its gayety, its debutantes, its brides and flowers, is here! Easter, whose symbol is the exquisite hyacinth or the chaste and lovely lily!

Truly in our child lilies do we find the real message of Easter.

"You may play at being Narcissus or Daphne, and you may get so near to nature that the daffodil-rimmed water may touch your feet and bay leaves seem to spring from your fingers, but between you and nature is the shadow of the resurrection. The culmination of the great synthesis has sealed the union between the divine and human." And the nearest, the dearest tie in all humanity is our beautiful children.

Today from our garden of flower children have been transplanted four sweet buds to our page, for your delight. We could have had hundreds of attractive, beautiful specimens—it is so hard to stop when "one goes a-Maying." And it's always May in California.

We fortunate Californians!

The East talks of the promise of spring in the air—an element never missing with us. Always are flowers blossoming out in the open.

The waning days of Lent have found devotees of fashionable eastern society en transit to our own land of sunshine. For the most part they are coming in private cars or luxuriously-furnished yachts, and their arrival will spell elaborate entertaining by their friends on the Western Coast.

Travel to foreign places having been rendered unavailable by war turbulence on the other side the past six months has stimulated these fashionables, who before have boarded one of the big liners to foreign centers, but who now of necessity are depending upon their own country for diversion. For the first time they remain in closer touch with things American and are discovering and surveying native beauties that really amaze them. The lure of the two California expositions is, of course, largely responsible for their decision of the routes. They come, see and are conquered. Our population is mightily pleased—yea, gratified—to learn that our social aristocracy at last approves of its own Fatherland.

Many of New York's "400" and Washington's elite are to visit us within the next weeks. Some are to be ensconced in houses for a month or so, others have engaged drawing-room suites at palatial hotels,. while still others are to occupy their private cars or yachts.

Mrs. Ira Davenport, a leader in New York's select set, starts for California on the 8th inst., to remain until June.

Mrs. E. N. Breitung, wife of the owner of the much-talked-of Dacia, now before the prize court, has been in San Francisco with a party of friends, including Miss Mathilda Pillot, E. Coster Wilmerding, Moncure Robinson and Campbell W. Steward, and stopped in Los Angeles on Tuesday. They have spent the entire week here, en route to San Diego.

Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, widow of the former American Ambassador to England, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. John Ward of London, and who arrived in New York as late as March 22, is a recent arrival in Southern California, with headquarters at the Green. Lady Evelyn Ward, a noted English beauty, came over with Mrs. Reid. During her four months in England Mrs. Reid was prominent in war relief committee work, as was Lady Evelyn.

Mrs. J. B. Montgomery, whose many years of residence abroad and prominence in public life have made her a well-known figure (having served on a special commission to the St. Louis Fair) and who more recently has lived in the Puget Sound country, with Portland (Or.) headquarters, has been in Los Angeles the past week. With her were Mrs. Charles B. Wood of Washington, D. C., and Miss Morgan of New York. The ladies were the recipients of a handsomely-appointed luncheon given by Mrs. Joseph K. Clark yesterday. Mrs. Clark had planned a larger affair, but was forced to substitute a smaller and more informal luncheon, inasmuch as their visit was curtailed. Covers were laid for the three honorees and Mrs. Marcus Daly of New York, Mrs. William Ennis, Mrs. E. P. Clark, Mrs. J. Ross Clark and the hostess. Later the visitors were motored about the city and given a glimpse of the beauties of Southern California, visiting the beaches and stopping at the Country Club for tea. They came through the Panama Canal to San Diego, where they were met by Mrs. Wood's chauffeur and car, and will tour the State before returning to the East. They left yesterday.

It will be remembered by many of Mrs. Montgomery's friends that her daughter, an author, last year married Capt. Zugbaum of London, who is in the navy, and son of the artist Zugbaum.

Never before has the desirability of a country place within easy motoring distance from town been more to the front.

The Willis J. Holes, who have that delightful La Sierra Rancho, near Riverside for week-end parties, are to have a beach home as well, and their plans are just about ready for the erection of a roomy house at Balboa, up East Newport way, where they mean to do much entertaining of an informal nature.

The San Gabriel home of Mr. and Mrs. Erasmus Wilson is to center some delightful social features the coming months. Nearly every week-end they take a few friends out for rustic peace and enjoyment.

The Krebbs of Sierra Madre have just completed a Holland Dutch room to their lovely place, where all sorts of dances and suppers are to be given. One meets nearly every celebrity at the Krebbs. They have really established a salon for frequent notable gatherings. Every artist to Southern California, writers, musicians and literati find this home one of welcoming hospitality. Just now Mrs. Krebbs, Sydney F. Hoben and others are busy with plans for a vaudeville to be given at the Sierra Madre Club, Thursday. Several dinners will precede the main high jinks.

The Harry Lombards, who are not waiting for their much-anticipated country home, in which to entertain visitors, but put them up delightfully in the quaint lodge, frequently motor out Beverly way with a charmed number to enjoy rusticity to their utter delight.

Our wonderful country clubs are held in high favor. Only last Saturday the J. F. Sartoris and Sumner P. Hunts chaperoned a charming coterie of the younger set to the Los Angeles Country Club for Saturday and Sunday, when a thoroughly informal good time was had. The Princeton friends of Wells Morris, Messrs. Arthur Trowbridge and Dixon, were valuable additions to the party, numbering Miss Louise Hunt, Miss Juliet Boileau, Miss Rose Sartori, Miss Dorothy Lindley, Miss Helen Duque, Miss Mary Hughes, Miss Florence Johnston, Miss Marjorie Tufts and Messrs. Frank Simpson, Jr., Wells Morris, Paul Herron, Claire Woolwine, Beverly Woolwine, N. L. Wolf, George Wallace, Hamilton Rollins and Jerry Powell.

The country has claimed many persons of prominence the past week. Mrs. Allan Balch of the Alexandria, who went up to the beautiful Crags Country Club early in the week with three of her specially favored little folk friends, returned yesterday. The Turners, Cheneys and Bryants are there for the week-end. And there is an exodus to Riverside for the Mount Roubidoux Easter pilgrimage.

What, with one's best friends up to their eyes in plans for the wondrous fashion show, which is coming off at the Alexandria on Friday and Saturday, and the lessening of social activities incidental to Holy Week, it seemed the "phychological" time to hie one's self off for a few days' rest and relaxation. According to the features scheduled for this month, it is just as well to re-enforce one's strength. Never were there so many calendared events to anticipate. Only behold the coming events:

Among those who will enjoy the delightful affair are: "Rowland Bishop, Burton Green, Harold Woolwine and the Misses Kate Frost, Helen Maine, Lilliora Green and Dolly Green.

Recital Tea.

One of the most pleasant Eastertide functions engrossing society was the recital tea given by Mrs. Mae Shumway Enderly at the Huntley Wednesday afternoon. Pink and lavender flowers were employed decoratively, including lilies, lupins, carnations and Cherokee roses. A canopy of date palms formed an effective background for the artists who appeared in concert. The hostess was attired in a pink and lavender petal gown, and was assisted in receiving by Mmes. Allison Barlow, George O. Shumway, Harrison Purdon, William H. Smith, Lucien West Wilder, J. T. Green, George W. Mills, C. F. Vaultner, W. E. O'Brien and T. C. Oldsdorf, while serving tea were Misses Madeline Purdon, Mariam Ryon, Hazel Marie Stark, Gertrude Beryl, May O'Brian and Mary Manning. Throughout the hours of receiving Mrs. Charles Oden, accompanied by Miss Grace Andrews, sang several numbers very sweetly, responding to insistent encores. Mrs. Roy H. Davis played "Tarantella," the Italian spider dance, with such artistic grace and finish that the brilliant assemblage of 150 women compelled her to repeat the number. Mrs. Enderly gave readings from Sheldon's "Romance," Maeterlinck's "Blue Bird" and "Love in a Dutch Garden." In the latter selection she accompanied herself with occasional music, which she improvised on an Italian harp. As a closing number she gave an Irish monologue and song en costume, with harp accompaniment. Mrs. Enderly is a clever artist. Her work shows finish and versatility, which, coupled with prepossessing personality and a voice of dramatic power, delighted her hearers. Encores were responded to by impersonations and pianologues. Under the Chautauqua Managers' Association of Chicago Mrs. Enderly will tour the Middle West the coming summer. But in the interim she will be a valuable acquisition to artistic circles of Los Angeles.

Notable Visitors.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hardy of Richmond, Va., are among the prominent visitors to Los Angeles the past week. They are making a tour of the Western States and will spend the summer months in California. Last evening Mrs. Hardy entertained with a large dinner-dance at the Merritt-Jones Hotel, Ocean Park, to which about fifty friends from Los Angeles were included. Mr. Hardy has made seven tours of the world and bears the distinction of having been entertained by the King and Queen of England at the royal palace.

Party of Thirty.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin T. Apfelt of New York City entertained with an elaborate dinner party of thirty covers last evening preceding the dinner-dance at the Beverly Hills Hotel. The guests included a number of Los Angeles and Pasadena friends, who motored out to the hotel to spend the night and attend the concert this morning given by the choir of St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral. The dining tables were daintily decorated with Easter lilies, and favors were miniature fluffy chickens and rabbits.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Weed of Canada, who are on their way to Australia on business for the British government. They will remain in California some time, visiting the fairs and their many friends.

The Awakening of Spring Suggests the Beautifying of the Home

WITH the passing of Easter—heralding the awakening of spring—when all nature takes on new life and beauty, comes the logical thought of refreshing and beautifying the home in tune with the new season.

To meet the ideals of those home lovers who recognize that correct home furnishing is a real art and not a mere commercial transaction—the "California" has searched the marts of America and brought together the best there is in the world of home furnishings.

—worthy furniture, superior carpets and rugs, exclusive draperies and curtains and upholstery fabrics—and artistic wall papers.

To be able to have such a remarkable selection of home furnishings from which to draw—and gather suggestions—is really an opportunity and privilege for the home people of this community. The invitation to come is extended alike to those whose homes are modest and those whose homes are palatial—for the "California" offers unexcelled selections for both—and values that will bear the most critical comparison.

Our window displays specially prepared for Easter week are really worth your while coming to see.

Correct Corseting
Means Perfect Gowning

The art of perfect gowning, which seems to belong only to the favored few is really at the command of every woman who knows the secret. Time was when a most expensive modiste was the key. Today, almost irrespective of the cost of the gown, the perfect costume is within the reach of all, providing the foundation, the corset, is chosen with care.

The Blackstone Corsets are so perfectly modeled that, not to have a gown of modish effect with such a foundation, is next to impossible. Every line that should be brought out is in evidence.

Your model in a "Blackstone" awaits you at our Corset Salon. Let our experienced corsetieres assist you in selecting it.

$5.00 Blackstone Corsets extra value at $4.00.
Five styles to choose from. One for every figure.
And ask to see our $2.00 models in the following makes:
Warner's, R. & G., C. B. and Blackstone's.
Even those at $1.00 will most agreeably surprise those who know values.

With Mrs. G. Allan Hancock.

The exquisite French music-salon of Mrs. G. Allan Hancock's residence is to be the scene of a brilliant social affair next Tuesday morning, when Miss Bessie Chapin is to give the third and last of her series of morning musicales. Mrs. Hancock will be assisted in receiving the 175 invited guests by Mrs. Erasmus Wilson, Mrs. C. Q. Stanton and Mrs. J. T. Fitzgerald. The programme is to be given by the Bessie Chapin trio, and by Mrs. E. S. Shank, soprano. Miss Chapin is to preface the musical numbers with a short talk on the folk-music of France and Belgium.

This is the fourth consecutive season of morning musicales given under Miss Chapin's direction and they have attracted wide interest in social circles. They are exclusive and mean much to the music-lovers of Los Angeles.

Lenten Musing.

Vista del Mar, the beautiful A. G. Bartlett place in Hollywood, was the scene of one of the most delightful social functions of Lent, when on Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Bessie Bartlett-Frankel was hostess at a Lenten musing—the fourth year she has contributed to such a pleasing affair. Mrs. Frankel gave a dramatic interpretation of "The Passover," by Clifford Howard, with recitative accompaniment by Archibald Sessions at the organ. The religious motif of the literary gem was accentuated by the decorations, which were in grays and lavenders, with bowls of pansies. Assisting were Mmes. Bartlett, Oliver C. Bryant, Frank Garrett, Leland Gillespie, E. G. Waldron and Willits J. Hole, and the Misses Florence Bartlett and Helen Thresher. About 100 friends of artistic trend were invited. The wedding service was celebrated at twilight, at the West Adams Methodist Episcopal Church, Rev. Dr. Charles Edward Locke being officiant. The bride is a Los Angeles young lady whose many friends are felicitating with her upon the happy event. They are to be at home in this city.

Thursday, Miss Weaver was the motif for a pretty tea extended by Mrs. Malcolm McNaughton of Ardmore avenue. Another hostess was Mrs. W. H. B. He is a singer and added to the evening's enjoyment with several solos.

Informal Dinner

At their spacious home on West Sixth street Mr. and Mrs. Willits J. Hole contributed a handsomely-laid dinner of eight covers Monday evening. Pink Cherokee roses extended down the table's length, with gorgeous bows of pink tulle veiling the flowers. Cards were a pleasant after-dinner feature. Enjoying the hospitality of the Holes were Mr. and Mrs. George Bayly, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Clark Carlisle, Mr. and Mrs. Allison Barlow and the Samuel K. Rindges, who have recently come in from their country place, La Sierro Rancho, near Riverside.

Out-of-Town Society.

Pasadena.

AFTER weeks spent in sack cloth and ashes, society buds and their mammas will appear in all their radiant beauty and joyousness at the numerous post-Lenten functions, which promise to keep them busy for many weeks.

Hotel society, however, has not shown much evidence of somberness, although every affair of importance has been given in the name of some charity—which fully justified their gaiety.

But now that there is no reason for the smart set wearing such a pious face, it is quite probable that many of the larger functions will be given for the sake of pleasure and nothing else.

One of the most notable functions of the week was given recently by Mrs. George A. Gibbs, in compliment to her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Elliot Gibbs.

Spring blossoms arranged with ferns formed a bower of loveliness. The color scheme mostly carried out was in old rose with a mingling of white and purple hyacinths. The small tables laid for the fifty guests were centered with golden baskets of forget-me-nots, pale pink sweet peas and gypsophillium. The favors were small baskets of bonbons tied with tulle. Those assisting Mrs. Gibbs were Mrs. John E. Scott, Miss Stevers, Mrs. Roy C. Davis, Mrs. Alexander Nottmeyer, Mrs. Harry Collyer, Mrs. Austin Parker and Mrs. Ralph McCollom. Out-of-town guests included Mrs. Miller of Hagerstown, Mo.; Mrs. G. S. Parker of Sioux City, Iowa; Mrs. Webster and Mrs. Fred Scott of Chicago, Mrs. John C. Teeine and Miss Perry of Yonkers, N. Y.; Mrs. Russell of Clinton, Mass., and Mrs. Elder of Toronto, Can.

Mrs. F. S. Churchill of Oaklawn entertained a number of friends at luncheon at the Altadena Country Club recently. Golden poppies were used about the rooms, and suspended by garlands of poppies and golden ribbons was an Easter bonnet of flowers. The almonds were served from poppy baskets. Covers were laid for Mmes. W. C. Brown, Coombs, Frank Cattern, McDowel, Lawrence Stimson, Henry Meier, House, G. W. Stimson, Joseph Caunt, W. H. Smith, A. Stephen Vavra, Albert Sherman Hoyt, William Hammond and the hostess.

MRS. EDWARD PROCTER was the charming hostess to the Blue Hen Whist Club Thursday evening at the League Clubhouse. The rooms were attractively embellished with a profusion of red carnations and greenery and a carnation was given each guest upon their arrival. The high score was won by Mrs. Lawrence Hollman, who was awarded an imported gold tapestry sofa pillow. Mrs. Ned Dill and Lawrence Hollman were presented a tiny doll and a lemon for their successful winning of the consolation prizes.

The beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Kent, No. 402 Tamarind street, was the scene of a happy gathering of relatives in celebration of the host's natal day. Yellow was the color motif in the decorations and menu. The spacious rooms were decorated in a distinctively California style with quantities of the dainty wild mustard blossoms and rich yellow poppies. Mr. Kent was the recipient of many favors in the way of remembrances and homage from the guests, who gathered with him around the festive board where a four-course chicken dinner was served at 4 o'clock. Two birthday cakes, without the sixty-eight candles required, was the important part of the feast, and those at the table with the host and hostess and daughter, Miss Helen Kent, were Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Gallup, Mrs. Albert Kendrick and Miss Eleanor Kendrick of Los Angeles, Mrs. A. Young of Wilmington.

Mr. and Mrs. Orbrey Kallmeyer and Frank Kallmeyer of Glasgow, Mo., reached Los Angeles Friday, and were entertained Tuesday afternoon and evening at the home of their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Kallmeyer, No. 326 East Laurel street. Miss Stella Kallmeyer of Los Angeles was the other guest, and all were served a good old family dinner in family style. Pansies were gathered from the large bed of blooming beauties by the young easterner, Frank Kallmeyer, and were used to make the table attractive.

Mr. and Mrs. P. R. Mercer entertained with a dinner party at their home, No. 320 East Maine street, on Wednesday evening. The table was prettily decorated with pink roses and greenery and a course dinner served at 7 o'clock, where covers were laid for ten. The guests who enjoyed the hospitality of the host and hostess were Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lee Shepard, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Waite, C. S. Hazeltine and Miss Gertrude Mercer.

Mrs. W. L. Tuck, Mrs. Ned Dill and Mrs. Rice Turner were the hostesses at the Embroidery Circle Club Tuesday afternoon at the League Clubhouse, with a full attendance of its seventeen members. A pleasant social time and a musical programme along with the ceaseless tread of needles in and out of dainty linen, interspersed with the serving of delicious refreshments, made the time speed all too quickly.

MRS. G. W. NEELY was hostess at a surprise party Saturday evening in honor of her daughter, Mrs. A. G. Ellis, who lives with her partnets, and her son, G. G. Neely of Graham, at her home, No. 817 Grape street. Mrs. Ellis and Mr. Neely were born on the same day of the same year and this fact was the occasion of the double celebration which resulted in a complete and overwhelming surprise to each of them.

Prof. and Mrs. B. J. Bechtel royally entertained with a musical evening Thursday in honor of Mrs. Bechtel's birthday anniversary at their home, No. 809 Rosella avenue. The event was in the nature of a surprise for Mrs. Bechtel, who had as house guests friends from out of town, but who was quite unaware of the many invitations issued by her husband until the continual arrival of guests during the evening.

All the happiness of early spring amid a setting of buds and blossoms, bird songs and nestings, will be the order of things socially from now on as the days of fasting are closed and with it many pleasant functions as was demonstrated last Thursday evening when Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Edwards entertained with cards as a farewell for Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Severance of Kent and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wallace of Graham, at their home, No. 744 East Shorb avenue.

Miss Rosetta Murphy was the charming hostess to a coterie of friends Saturday evening complimentary for her sister, Miss Delilah Murphy, whose birthday occasioned the event. Roses and callas and greenery adorned the rooms of their home in Juniper street. The evening was spent with musical numbers presented by Miss Ruby Granade, J. C. Smith, Chester Kidder and Roy Granade, and at the conclusion of the programme, all joined in singing several popular selections.

Another merry birthday celebration was that where Nellie Torres was the central figure, her mother, Mrs. T. Torres, entertaining with a juvenile party in honor of her 10th birthday. The children had a jolly time with out-of-door games, later trooping into the dining-room where the ever-present birthday cake was the principal attraction of an inviting array of goodies spread upon a prettily decorated table. Miss Nellie's friends showered her with gifts and were eager for her to have more birthdays and birthday parties.

MISS JANE ROUSE presided at a pleasant informal dinner party Thursday evening, one of her guests being Mrs. H. B. Thorpe of Los Angeles.

The birthday anniversary of Judge B. B. de Nure was the occasion of a delightful dinner party, given by Mrs. de Nure. Violets were used in the table decorations, and after the dinner the ten guests spent a merry evening at cards.

About thirty-five of the younger social set motored to Sulphur Mountain Springs Saturday of last week and enjoyed one of the most delightful dancing parties of the year, many of the guests remaining for the week-end at the various cottages, to enjoy a day of tramping over the hills, swimming and wildflower-gathering.

Mrs. F. F. Harvey was hostess to the Embroidery Club, needlework, refreshments and conversation contributing to a pleasant afternoon.

Delicately shaded pink and white roses were used in beautifying the Clark home for the dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Clark, complimentary to Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Hardison, who are planning to leave in the near future for their home in Maine. Mr. Hardison is State Highway Commissioner in his home State. During an extended visit with relatives here, many social events and informal good times have been enjoyed by the visitors and their many friends.

Miss Merle Porter and John W. Richardson were married in Los Angeles Monday, the event coming as a surprise to all but the relatives of the young couple here. The bride is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Porter, and the groom the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Richardson.

Mrs. Percy Bunting and Mrs. A. F. Harms were hostesses at a delightful afternoon reception at the home of —Here are the details: Cream and gold shadow lace, over flesh chiffon, long and short-sleeve styles, low collars chiefly, trimmed with touches of satin or chiffon—they're exquisite and wonderfully underprice at $2.95.

Probably the most interesting recent event here was the dance given Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Anna Headley, No. 1938 Greenwood street. Tustin.

MISS ANNA WALKER of Santa Ana, who is to be one of the charming April brides, her fiance being Clyde Walker of the famous Irvine ranch, was the honored guest of one of the prettiest courtesies of the season at the beautiful Tustin bungalow home of Mrs. Clyde Deardorff, herself a recent bride. The other hostess for the pretty affair was Miss Helene McNeil, and the bride-to-be was the recipient of a shower of the daintiest of gifts. The rooms were bright with trimmings of scarlet geraniums and ferns, and a prettily-decorated table was used for the opening of the interesting parcels, a merry ceremony conducted by Miss Walker amid a chorus of admiration from the group of matrons and maids gathered about her. The group of friends besides the hostesses who joined in honoring Miss Walker included Mmes. Frank Thomas J. H. Walker, Will Adams Harvey Bennett, Oscar Leichy, Miss Marry Walker, Miss Lillian Walker, Miss Buelah Thomas, Miss Gladys Thomas, Miss Mabel Riehl, Miss Macie Deardorff and Miss Margaret Wallace, and places were marked for these at a daintily-appointed supper served at a late hour in the afternoon.

A number of ladies of the Cincinnati Club, which comprises members in several Southern California cities, were entertained recently at the Tustin home of Mrs. Fred Beckman, with Mrs. Beckman and Mrs. Harry Peiper as hostesses. A wealth of roses and lovely wistaria blossoms filled the rooms with ineffable perfume and made the home a bower of floral beauty. Club members from Los Angeles, Alhambra and Pasadena arrived in the early forenoon by automobile, and were delighted with the romantic beauties of tree-shaded and flower-embowered Tustin. A bank of wistaria centered the beautifully-appointed luncheon table, around which the guests assembled shortly after noon, and where there were covers for Mrs. M. Schroeder and Mrs. H. Deinbenkorn of Alhambra, Mrs. E. Stallard and Miss Katie Schenkel of Los Angeles, Mrs. E. J. Keiffer, Mrs. M. E. Diebold and daughter, Miss June Diebold, of Pasadena, Mrs. C. E. Utt, Mrs. H. Romer, Miss Minnie Childs, Miss Gertrude Utt of Tustin and the hostesses. Fancywork and conversation sped the afternoon much too swiftly, and a dainty tea was served to the ladies from the outside cities before they started on their return trip.

Garden Grove.

MR. AND MRS. RAY C. LANGENDORFER of Garden Grove and Mrs. Langendorfer's sister, Miss Grace Gebhardt, of Santa Ana, successfully planned a happy surprise for Mr. and Mrs. Gebbardt, parents of the two ladies, to celebrate the twenty-seventh anniversary of the wedding of the Gebhardts. Others aiding in the affair were Ada Belle Seebre and Roy Sebree. The honored couple had spent the anniversary day at Laguna Beach and on their return to their North Bush street home, Santa Ana, they were greeted by a merry company of friends and relatives who showered them with beautiful gifts and the heartiest of congratulations. The daughters had charmingly decorated the home with spreading bouquets of bridal wreath and the same fairy-like flowers were artistically arranged in a pretty basket that centered the table where an elaborate wedding dinner was served. Those at the table were Mr. and Mrs. Gebhardt, Miss Grace Gebhardt, Mr. and Mrs. Roy C. Langenderfer and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Andres of Garden Grove, Mr. and Mrs. H. Hamilton and Mr. and Mrs. Benton Ballou of Ontario, Mrs. Sanford Ballou and son, Earnest, of Pasadena, Mr. and Mrs. John Hinzega of Iowa, Ada Belle and Roy Sebree.

Homer Anderson was the genial young host to the members of the Sunday-school class of the First Presbyterian Church of Santa Ana, with Jasper Osborne as teacher, on a recent Saturday evening at the beautiful ranch home of his mother, Mrs. Della Anderson, near the city limits of East Garden Grove. The young men made the trip from Santa Ana in automobiles, and such fun as they had after their arrival at the Anderson home. Out of door sports such as baseball, football and vaulting stunts, were varied with the exploration of the finely cultivated ranch. It may well be imagined that masculine appetites were keen to the last degree after such strenuous diversions. Mrs. Anderson, alive to the possibilities of such stimulating exercise, had an appetizing supper awaiting for them when they returned from the exploration of the ranch. Mr. Osborne arrived just in time to join the young men in the bounteous spread which was set on long tables under a giant sycamore tree. Quantities of mustard blossoms and garlands of smilax adorned the board and made the al fresco feast even more enjoyable. Mrs. Anderson is never more happy than when hostess to the young friends of her sons, who fully appreciate the privilege of being entertained at the Anderson home.

Saticoy.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN IRWIN MARSHALL, their daughter, Miss Valencia Rafferty, son and maid, from Highland Park, Ill., have been spending the past two weeks at Aliso Ranch, in Ventura county, the attractive home of Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Fitzpatrick. Their daughter, Countess Hans Larisch of Schlesien, Austria, was married three years ago at the home of her cousin, Princess of Pless, in Germany. A number of riding parties and barbecues were planned for Mr. and Mrs. Marshall and Miss Rafferty's entertainment while in the county. Mr. Marshall was so enthusiastic over Ventura county that he contemplates buying a ranch in the near future.

Orange.

AFTER being a dinner guest at the home of her grandparents on Friday evening, Miss Bessie Mapson was joyously surprised on returning to her paternal home on East Chapman avenue to find the house brilliantly illuminated and occupied by a company of gay girl friends who had gathered there to surprise her in honor of her eighteenth birthday. The absence of Miss Mapson in the afternoon had given her mother and sister an opportunity to decorate the house with lovely flowers that united in a pink and white color scheme. A round of merry games had been planned for the evening and the hours flew by merrily. Felicitations, gifts and the serving of delicious refreshments in the prettily decorated dining room were other pleasant features of the happy occasion and those honoring Miss Mapson by their presence and good wishes included Miss Lela Cutler, Miss Emma Brubaker, Miss Bessie Hodson, Miss Bertha Kelly, Miss Lois Durham, Miss Pearl Wilkins, Miss Mary Meyers, Miss Ola Stone, Miss Elsie Goodwin, Miss Luella Pruden and the Misses Orpha and Elsie Christ. Mr. and Mrs. R. Mapson assisted in entertaining the young women.

Miss Bertha Youngs was hostess on Saturday afternoon to the ladies of the embroidery club of which she is a popular member. In honor of the coming of her guests, Miss Youngs had very artistically adorned the rooms where they were entertained, with a profusion of white Cherokee roses and greenery. In this attractive environment the afternoon hours were happily spent with animated conversation that in nowise interfered with the progress of the dainty fancy work which is the motif for the existence of the club. Alhambra.

ALL the artifices of a lavish hand has nature used in the glad welcome of early spring to the glorious Eastertide. Rose bedecked, the world in its brilliant garments of green is whispering of the happinesses in store to the merry revelers of springtime gladness. One of the most important events of the week was the charity concert given at the High School auditorium on Monday evening when a number of brilliant artists gave one of the most artistic treats of the year for the benefit of the Associated Charities. Of the rare ability of Mrs. Sydney Webb, violinist; Arthur Babcock, baritone, and Oscar Nisson, pianist, all of Los Angeles, there is nothing further to add to the unusual appreciation of their talents given by the smart assemblage that was present at Monday's concert. The auditorium was filled with enthusiastic music lovers and the affair was one of the most notable successes of the season.

Many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Carey Jones, who left the first of the week to make their future home in Granville, O., bade them a reluctant adieu on the occasion of their departure. Later the young people left on their wedding trip, the itinerary of which is known only to the two happy young people.

Appetite Follows Good Digestion

Nearly everyone indulges their appetite and the digestive organs are abused, resulting in a congestion of poisonous waste that clogs the bowels and causes much misery and distress.

The most effective remedy to correct this condition is the combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This is a natural, pleasant-tasting remedy, gentle, yet positive in action, and quickly relieves indigestion, constipation, sick headache, belching, etc. Drug stores sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, and in thousands of homes it is the indispensable family remedy. For a free trial bottle write Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 452 Washington St., Monticello, Ills.

SPECIAL TRAINING FOR SPECIAL CHILDREN.

Help for Those Who do not Develop Normally.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

The belief is growing that every child born into the world has a right to the best we can give him in the way of food, clothing, shelter and education. Among thoughtful people he is no longer considered an asset of the family, but an asset of society in terms of citizenship, a human being enjoying life himself, and contributing to the enjoyment and well-being of others.

As this idea has developed, the conviction has also grown that, during the habit-forming period of a child's life, each one needs a training, or opportunity for development, suited to his special capacity. The public school system, being required to provide a curriculum of study suitable only to the normal children, must provide also for the abnormal children and so fit the system of education to the mental capacity and environment of the exceptional pupil.

This study of the child from the point of view of his own needs instead of the convenience of his elders has led to the discovery that there is a large number of children who do not develop normally. A normal child will "pick up" a fair education under almost any conditions. We have thousands of examples of this in every walk of life. But there are children in every class of the public schools who are unable to "keep up." The teacher is forced to give an undue amount of the time that belongs to the whole class of these individuals, to the detriment of the rest, and with very meager results as to the abnormals. They spend two or three years in each grade, unhappy, humiliated, and finally they go out to meet life in the world wholly unfitted to perform their part in it.

Why should we let this waste go on? It is a waste of human energy and a waste of public money. The money that is spent on these children in the grades would give them, in special classes, the sort of training that would fit them for the work they are able to do. We have scientific tests which determine in a general way a child's mental ability, and if we find that he is not capable of learning much more from books than the three R's, why not find out what he can do and teach him that?

In New Jersey it is a State law that wherever as many as ten children are found in any school district who are more than three years backward a special class shall be formed and a specially-trained teacher employed for them. Other States are following New Jersey's example. These children are taught as much of the so-called grade work as they can use, but emphasis is laid upon manual training. Many of them are able to become self-supporting in this way, doing simple manual labor in factories, or homes, or on farms, who would otherwise become public charges.

They can never take the initiative in any direction, and many of them should graduate into municipal or State training schools after leaving the public schools. For there is a large number who never develop beyond the mental level of a child of 8, 10 or 12. By knocking about the world, changing occupations frequently and meeting all sorts of people, they acquire a knowledge of conditions and an appearance of cleverness which they do not really possess. Let them be confronted suddenly with the necessity for judgment, for self-control, and the power is not theirs. Then you have a failure, an accident, perhaps a criminal act, and the State must provide for an investigation or a trial, with a place in the hospital, the almshouse or the prison, or there is another job for the executioner.

In cities where tests are systematically given, it is found that quite 50 per cent. of offenders of all sorts, from the Juvenile Court onward, are mentally defective. Would it not be cheaper, as well as safer for society, and more humane for the unfortunate ones, to care for these children before they have become paupers or criminals? One needs to spend only a short time in an institution such as the Training School at Vineland to be convinced of the value of such a course. About 400 children of all ages and grades of mental development are cared for there. All of them who are trainable are busy, useful and therefore happy and well behaved. They not only do the work connected with the daily routine, waiting at table, house-cleaning, bed-making, dish-washing and laundry work; they raise the necessary vegetables, care for the fruit trees, and pick and market the fruit. Many of them make salable articles. The girls make dresses and underwear, embroider towels, napkins and clothing, knit and crochet shawls, sweaters and slippers; while boys and girls alike make baskets, hammocks, rugs and brushes. If such institutions are properly managed all the inmates lead happy and innocent lives.

For those children who are capable of somewhat higher development, the city might well have a municipal training school, with courses in the simpler lines of manual labor—dairying, poultry-raising, laundry work—any routine work that can be done under more or less supervision. Both the municipal and the State institutions should be partly self-supporting, and graduates from the former would be able to make a fair living under favorable circumstances, something which is now a matter of chance, and rarely possible.

Such training is the right of defective children, and would be not only an economy, but the salvation of the State. As the result of our past neglect, there are now thousands of feeble-minded who have the franchise, whose votes, counting as much as yours, are cast at the bidding of political bosses, of landlords of employers, of anyone who has an ax to grind. They are the tools of crooks of every sort. They swell the ranks of incompetent laborers, whose blunders cost us dear in money and lives.

Why not make them as competent as possible in some one line of those many grades of labor that must be done in our modern world? As Dr. Goddard has said, "A mentally defective person is not one who lacks intelligence, but one who lacks a particular degree of intelligence. That degree is not fixed arbitrarily, but by social necessity. The degree of intelligence whch marks the line between the subnormal and the normal person has been defined as that degree below which the possessor can not manage himself or his affairs with ordinary prudence. Now it is the environment that determines how he must manage himself, and what affairs it is necessary for him to control. In consequence of this a man may be intelligent in one environment, and not in another."

Why, then, for individuals whose degree of intelligence falls below that required in the complicated environment of modern society, do we not provide a simpler environment, where they can manage their affairs with a measure of success? There would still be a large number to be cared for in institutions, but that number would be greatly reduced, our juvenile and district courts would be relieved of a vast amount of work, our State institutions of all sorts would be reduced tremendously in numbers, and society would take a long stride toward the solution of its most hopeless problems.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

Capt. Granville R. Fortescue, who served as military aide at the White House during the administration of President Roosevelt, and who has been on duty for the past seven months as war correspondent for the London Daily Telegraph with the Belgian and French armies, has returned to his home in Washington, for a brief stay, with the opinion that the great war in Europe will result in what might be called a compromise or a "draw."

Gustav Lindenthal, who is building the Hell Gate bridge at New York, the greatest structure of the kind in the world, which will have a length of three and one-half miles, is an Austrian by birth. He received his technical education at Brunn and Vienna and before coming to this country in 1874 he had had considerable practical experience in railroad building. His first work in the United States was as an assistant engineer on the force constructing the Centennial Exhibition buildings. He became a citizen and took up railroad building. Some of the greatest bridges which he has built span the Alleghany and Monongahela rivers, though he has also spanned the Mississippi and other streams. Though famed as a bridge builder he prefers to be known as a man who has had more to do with laying out railroad routes.

John Fowler, who has been in the Consular service of this country in China for the past quarter of a century, will henceforth be stationed at Rimouski, Quebec. He is a native of New Hampshire, and entered the government service in 1879, serving in a clerical capacity. In 1890 he was appointed Consul at Ningpo. Promotions followed, and in turn he served at Chefoo and Foochow. For distinguished services he was thrice decorated by the Emperor of China, and from Japan he received the Order of the Sacred Treasure, as well as a nation's thanks for his services in the China-Japan war. He has written extensively on oriental subjects, and is a member of various scientific bodies.

Brig.-Gen. William Luther Sibert, whom the War Department has named as commanding officer of the Pacific Coast defense district, with headquarters at Fort Miley, San Francisco, was a conspicuous figure in the construction of the Panama Canal. He was a member of the Canal Commission, and as engineer of the Atlantic division had charge of the work of constructing the Colon breakwater, the channel excavation from Gatun to the Atlantic Ocean, and the construction of the Gatun dam and locks.

Rear-Admiral George Sidney Willits, inspector of engineering material for the Central Pennsylvania and Western New York districts, has just been retired for age. He entered the United States Naval Academy as a cadet engineer on October 1, 1873. He became an assistant engineer in 1877, passed assistant engineer in 1885, his rank being changed to that of lieutenant-commander in 1899, rear-admiral March 26, 1913.

OVER THE SEA.

Emperor Nicholas of Russia has the distinction of being the first ruler to establish a government department of sports. It bears the name of the Department of Physical Culture and is under the direction of a Cabinet Minister.

The Marchionness of Tweeddale, whose name is pronounced "Tweddle," is called the most beautiful woman in the British peerage. She is the daughter of a famous Greek family now Anglicized.

Baron Burian, Minister of Foreign Affairs for Austria-Hungary, has had a long and honorable career as a statesman and a diplomat. Educated at the Oriental Academy, Vienna, he served a term in the office of the Austrian Consul-general at Alexandria, and later went to Bucharest as vice-consul. After a period of three years he became attached to the Consulate at Belgrade. There his work attracted such attention that promotion overtook him, resulting in a term of brilliant consular life at Moscow.

Emperor Yoshihito of Japan is an enthusiastic militarist. He believes in a great army and navy and in levying the taxes necessary to procure those expensive luxuries. It is said to be his ambition to make Japan the equal of any power in the world and the superior of most.

King George of England is the first cousin of both the Kaiser and the Czar of Russia. The mother of the latter, the Empress Dagmar, is a sister of the Dowager Queen Alexandra, while the mother of the German Kaiser was a sister of the late King Edward, the father of King George.

Empress Augusta Victoria's breakfast consists of a cup of tea and one plain boiled egg. Lunch at midday consists of soup, a single serving of meat and some fruit. For dinner she has soup, a single dish, and a plate of vermicelli or macaroni.

Crown Prince Frederick William and his father, the Kaiser, have been, according to court gossip, on bad terms since September. The Emperor accused his son of encroaching on his authority and of issuing orders contrary to his wishes. The Crown Prince replied with a criticism of his father's military strategy.

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws his beams! So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

A new hospital, established by the [illegible] government at Compeigne, under the supervision of Dr. Alexis [illegible], is being equipped by the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research with complete apparatus for study of the new forms of infection incident to trench warfare, the institute announced recently.

It was announced also that the Rockefeller Foundation has voted an appropriation of $20,000 to be used under the direction of the institute in furthering medical research work under war conditions.

The purpose of the institute in equipping Dr. Carrel's hospital, it is said, is not only to make his research result of the greatest effectiveness at the moment, but also to make it permanently available to the world of science.

For the use of the patients under the care of Dr. Carrel and his assistants, according to the institute's announcement, the French government has requisitioned a hotel, which has been converted into a hospital, with accommodations for about one hundred patients.

In addition to the regular surgical staff of the hospital, Dr. Carrel will have a staff of bacteriologists, chemists and technicians, forming a laboratory unit.

James B. Brady of New York, commonly known as "Diamond Jim," was serving as a grand juror last week when Mrs. Martha Bruha appeared to tell how she had been robbed recently of all her money.

She had walked all the way from her home in Harlem because she had no car fare. A stenographer learned of her plight and gave her some money. She has two children.

When Mr. Brady learned of her plight he promptly threw a $100 bill on the stenographer's table. The other grand jurors followed this with $30 more and the woman went home happy.

More than $100,000 is bequeathed to New York City charitable institutions, hospitals and churches by the will of William Washington Cole, a noted circus man, once partner of P. T. As a result of an outbreak of [illegible] among the horses of Philadelphia last summer, the watering troughs of the city are having attached to them a number of bubbling fountains with separate branch connections, which keeps a fresh supply of water in them continually, and a drain system that will greatly mitigate the chance of infection to horses drinking from them.

Word was received by Mrs. Jennie [illegible] and Miss Bessie Gordon, sisters, of Chicago, that they had been bequeathed $50,000 by a young man, who, ill and hungry, knocked at their door four years ago and asked for food.

[illegible] Pepper, son of a Prague [illegible] art dealer, was the man whom they befriended. He told Mrs. [illegible] and her sister that he was too proud to let his people know of his condition. He was given clothing, food and medical attention. In [illegible] he returned to Bohemia, advising the sisters that when he died he would "remember them in his will." The sisters were notified of the bequest through Chicago attorneys communicated with by an attorney in Prague [illegible].

Plans for raising $1,000,000 by the General Lutheran Synod in the United States, in connection with the celebration of the four hundredth anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther, in 1917, were projected at a meeting of clergymen and laymen of the denomination in York, Pa., last week. It is proposed to divide the fund among the several missionary and [illegible] boards of the denomination.

Joseph Ballell of Middlebury, Vt., a [illegible]per, breeder of horses and lover of nature, who recently died, bequeathed 20,000 acres of the most beautiful Vermont forest land to Middlebury College, to be preserved as a forest park. His will also makes further bequests of large cash value to the college, and of land for parks and money for park maintenance to the town of Middlebury.

HARMONY

WHERE one does something so well that his actions become a model for others, or when one makes something so well that all its parts harmonize, and the taking away of a single part would be missed, our sense of beauty is aroused. We then distinguish between ordinary mechanical work (where several parts may be added or taken away without being missed) and skilled endeavor, which is art.

To summarize,—ordinary labor plus harmony is art. Or to put it still another way, harmony is the difference between the crude and the artistic. Teeth should harmonize in color and form with the temperament of the individual. We do painless dentistry and some of our patients say it is artistic.

Mme. Jeanne Perichon, the only Belgian woman whom King Albert has decorated with the military Order of Leopold for conspicuous valor, is now in this country. She served in the military hospital at Ostend until it was taken, and has also been in the thick of the fighting. During the siege of Antwerp she was at Fort Waelhem while it was under bombardment, and for two weeks she lived with the soldiers in the trenches east of Furnes. Her health broke down under the strain and she was obliged to go to England. She is the daughter of a Brussels stockbroker and is only 23 years of age.

EDUCATORS, CHURCHMEN.

Rev. Dr. Henry W. Temple, former Congressman from the Twenty-fourth District, is to be tendered the presidency of Westminster College to succeed Dr. R. M. Russell.

Dr. Anna J. McKeag, president of Wilson College, at Chambersburg, Pa., has tendered her resignation to the board of trustees, that she may accept another position in the educational field. Dr. McKeag is a graduate of Wilson College, class of 1895.

Rev. G. Truitt of Dallas, Tex., recently told the weekly conference of Baptist ministers that "it's a crime for a minister to be a little man—a pesky, small-souled little fellow. People trust their souls to us. We are morally responsible for their welfare and, as our own lives must serve as an example for our parishioners, you can understand that the ministry is no job for a fop."

Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president-emeritus of Harvard University, passed his 81st birthday quietly last week at his home in Cambridge, Mass. He has just recovered from a severe attack of the grip.

President J. C. R. Ewing of Forman Christian College, Lahore, India, has been honored in a manner quite unprecedented in the history of American missions under the British flag. On him the government recently bestowed the badge of "Companion of the Order of the Indian Empire," which has hitherto never been conferred on any person not of British birth. It is always given for distinguished services. He has been in India for thirty-five years, and for half that term has been president of Forman Christian College at Lahore. Several years ago, in recognition of his position as an educator, the British government named him vice-chancellor of the University of the Punjab, this university being not a teaching body but a corps of government officials who conduct examinations in all the institutions of higher learning throughout the Punjab province.

MEN AND EVENTS.

Gen. Alvaro Obregon, one of the latest leaders to "capture" and then desert Mexico City, was a farmer before he turned soldier. He is said to be only 33 years of age. In his early twenties he invented an agricultural machine which was patented in the United States and sold to an American concern. With the money he received for his invention he bought himself a small farm, to which he devoted most of his time.

Maurice E. Finn, a wealthy New York lawyer, four years in the United States diplomatic service as secretary to the Ambassadors to China and Japan, took the vows and was admitted to the Franciscan Order of Monks at St. Bonaventure's Monastery last week. This action severed forever his worldly affiliations and places beyond his reach a large fortune which his deceased father left him several years ago.

THE UNCHLOROFORMED.

Mrs. Julia Kingman, aged 94, of Everett, Mass., celebrated her birthday by winning the first prize at a whist party, this being the seventh she has won in the last year. A New, Harmless Way to Banish Hairy Growths

(Beauty Topics)

By following this suggestion any woman can, in the privacy of her own home, remove every trace of hair or fuzz from her face: With powdered delatone and water mix enough paste to cover the not-wanted hairs; apply and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off and wash the skin. This method is unfailing, harmless and quick in results, but care should be employed to get the genuine delatone.

In last Wednesday morning's Times "Olive Gray" in "Facts—Features and Fancies" said that many of her friends asked her, "where can I buy reliable silks and laces" — and then she went on to recommend Jacoby's silk and lace stores!

You'll find wonderfully complete departments of silks ---dress goods---laces---and wash weaves here!

Speaking of Jacoby's, "Olive Gray" said

Certain houses are noted for certain articles or lines in which they excel. I am often asked: "What shop carries the best laces?" Or, "Where would you advise me to go for reliable silks?" With these questions of my readers ever in mind, I constantly watch and compare, and sometimes it is almost startling to note the rapidity with which a shop may spring into perfection, or into pre-eminence. I thought of this the other day when my attention was called to the line of lace flouncings in a house which I had not heretofore thought of in connection with this specialty. So important is lace in the forthcoming summer wardrobe that I was much pleased to find there really good laces in flouncing, both wide and narrow, and at prices which are a genuine saving. I appreciated this, particularly, as I had recently gone the length of Broadway in the search for just such laces and without success. All the new patterns and the revivals of old patterns were there, and at amazingly small cost per yard. There were the Spanish and the French nets and even the orientals, heavily embroidered in silk and lovely floral patterns. Such laces are good as long as there is a bit left—which means for years and years, and then—when revivals of the mode bring them "in" again, they experience new life. It pays to buy lace. And at the prices found in that shop it pays doubly—for now and by and bye.

I found in that shop several other lines quite as satisfactory and at equal savings.

Independence Blue

While in that shop I was shown the new Independence blue, which has created such a furore in the East.

The story of the creating of this new color, one of the foremost events in the making of made-in-America modes, is told by the manufacturer, who says that he took the three colors of the American Flag, the red in the stripes, the blue in the field of stars and the white in the stars and stripes—each in its own proportion—mixed them together in the dye—and behold! Independence blue! And a wondrous blue it is! It has the strength of a free and independent country. The glory of the rich, red blood of health. The sheen of whiteness which lends luster to the petals of a flower. It is, moreover, a blue which brings out the best in any complexion. Need more be said to send every woman to looking at it, to trying its silken folds against the velvet of her own particular cheek? Once begin to study color as a means of bringing out your feminine charms and you will never cease. And I believe this new American blue is destined to assist many a woman to fine appearance, for it comes in many fabrics, each having its own particular tonal quality.

Washable (Washrite) Gloves?

I can hear you exclaim as I did: "Washable! Yes, 'washable,' but what then?"

Many a dollar have I squandered, as you doubtless have, upon gloves called "washable."

I smiled a quizzical smile when the man called my attention to them; and I'll confess that I listened but impatiently to the dissertation of the chief glove-lady when she began her tale. But, as she looked me fully in the eye and declared that she had washed a pair of those gloves daily, in ordinary water and soap, using no more care than in the laundering of a pocket handkerchief—had, in fact washed them out behind the counter and had hung them to dry right there, and that they had continued to wear and wash, even after all that, I began to think that either there must be something in what she said or she must be a post-graduate of the most crowded Ananias Club of the Pacific Coast branch. So fascinated did I become that I finally decided to try those gloves just to prove that she was right.

—We have devoted so much of our advertising and window space to the promotion of our ready-to-wear departments, that many people have not been impressed with the importance and completeness of our yard goods stores.

—When Olive Gray said to one of our department heads, the other day: "Why, I had no idea that you had such really, splendid departments of silks and laces and cottons"—it gave the writer cause to think that perhaps there were hundreds of other women in Los Angeles who had no idea that Jacoby's not only carries, but specializes on silks—on laces—on embroideries and on cotton weaves.

—And so we have prepared this big page advertisement to exploit our yard goods stores. We want you to know about the better kind of silks which we carry and the very low prices which we have attached to them. School Work.

We in Southern California know, of course, that the future is ours in art as in everything else. All the signs point in our direction. But we have a present as well as a future, and that present holds more accomplishment than we seem to realize. Looking backward, we see that we really have arrived at the first goal—there are many beyond—and that we may now take breath and count our gains.

The particular advantage we have lies in the field of art instruction. We have excellent schools, and the young aspirants who attend them need have no fear of being directed into blind alleys. The ways that are pointed out are as broad and safe as those of Paris and New York—and indeed, the same high-roads. The men and women who "personally conduct" the youthful adventurers bring them to the same founts from which they themselves have deeply drunk.

Assurance of our young people's in matters of art can be more than that which has been through the past week at gallery, where an exhibition of the work of the pupils of the School of Painting and Illustration was held. This school is conducted by John H. Rich and William V. Cahill and is hardly six months old. If school can accomplish so much in short months, what may it not in six years?

I might have been more astonished at the quality of the work shown had I not known the quality of the instructors of the school. The expected has happened. Both of them deeply and in earnest, highly and trained as artists, Rich and Cahill got from their pupils the they had the right to look for. The students merely responded to correct quick and hearty response produced at the end of a few months, of such merit that the week's exhibit at Royar's was a decided to the observer of the progress of art in Los Angeles. He found secured, his prophecies He noted articulate expression where mere lisping stammering would have met every expectation. For he knows that the art is only a beginner in a most language, and that his work not be considered anything "exercises."

these exercises in expression so interesting that I to mention a few of painting, there are some figures in oil by Mrs. Louis which are finely modeled and fresh in color, "The," a red-headed boy being especially attractive. Francisco has the honor of if I am not mistaken, a native At any rate, he is an old inhabitant. (I refer, of course, to his term not to his actual years, which are not particularly numerous.) And undoubtedly he has in Los Angeles, more than years for the favor of his mistress, Art.

Francisco painted the mountains valleys of Southern California long some of the very young painters had even thought of picking brush. He also painted the with skill, for he had an excellent European training, much of it from Munich. Of late years has claimed his entire attention, as it seems to do with most in Southern California, where of the out-of-doors is too to be resisted.

Portrait of Miss Teresa Cloud, by John H. Rich.

One of the most impressive of the larger canvases is "A Storm in the Sierras." The dark drama of the storm, played in the vast amphitheater of mountains painted deep purple and lapis lazuli, is enacted before pines that stand like austere and stately spectators watching the swift withdrawal of the sweeping curtains of rain.

Other interesting big pictures are "Forest on Tejon Ranch," "Mountain Stream at Matilija" and "Topanga." In the first we see patches of golden sunlight playing amid evergreens and making their dark foliage light and lovely with color. A soothing quiet broods over the scene. The same large peacefulness haunts "Mountain Stream," which has been painted in the cool of late afternoon. The creeping chill is found on the rocks and in the trees, and in the limpid jade-green of the stream that hurries down its rocky terraces. A tender afterglow rests on the distant mountains. In "Topanga" we have fields burnt to tawny gold by the summer sun. The hills above them show purple.

Among the smaller landscapes I liked especially "Sunset at Balboa," yellow streaks of light between level purple clouds over marshes: "Foothills," far-off mountains, light-blue and light-green, all at rest under a serene blue sky; "Corona del Mar," a vast stretch of gray sand with a hint of the blueness of the sea to the left, the peaceful sky being pearly and blue-gray.

Coming Events.

Coming events in art are casting vari-colored shadows before them. Every artist in town seems to be blossoming out into an exhibition.

Here is a roll of honor that should make your eyes glisten in anticipation of pleasure. Names old and new are found on it:

Helena Dunlap. Miss Dunlap needs no introduction. The virility and versatility of her talent as a painter is well known to all art lovers in Southern California. She will exhibit in the gallery at Exposition Park for about two weeks. The pictures are already installed—about a score of the latest and best from her brush.

J. Duncan Gleason. Mr. Gleason, who was born in California, who came to Los Angeles to live when he was a year old, but who has spent the last dozen years in New York, will hold an exhibit of twenty-five pictures in the Royar gallery, No. 744 South Hill street, beginning tomorrow. These are paintings, not illustrations, though Mr. Gleason has done some notable work in the line of illustration, especially in that embodying seacraft, among the books that have come to his hand being the autobiographies of Admiral Dewey and Admiral Schley.

George Henry Melcher. For the past five or six years Mr. Melcher has lived on his own mountain ranch, "Roseneath," in Topanga, where he farms and paints. A few years ago he married Miss Corbett, whose delightful cartoons, "Sunbonnet Babies," won her an international reputation. She now paints miniatures and takes care of her own sunbonnet babies, who are two in number. Mr. Melcher will show interesting landscapes from Topanga, his mediums being oil and water color. The exhibition takes place in the Kanst gallery, No. 854 South Hill street.

Edwin M. Dawes. Mr. Dawes came from Minneapolis some months ago, and he is now living in Glendale. He has been painting the landscape of Southern California ever since his arrival. These pictures will be shown, as well as pictures brought with him from Minneapolis, where he won the first gold medal issued by the Minnesota Art Society. He has been a frequent contributor to the exhibitions of the Chicago Art Institute, the Corcoran Gallery and the National Academy. His present exhibition, his first in the West, will be held at Kanst's, sharing honors with that of Melcher, both exhibitions beginning tomorrow and continuing for two weeks, when they will be followed by one of marines by Frank W. Cuprien.

Portraits of Women.

John H. Rich has always been particularly happy in his portraits of women. Two of the latest from his brush are those of Miss Lillian Coulter of Covina and Miss Teresa Cloud of Pasadena.

A certain old-fashioned charm and dignity characterizes the portrait of Miss Coulter, who is seated in a Windsor chair, and who is gowned in lavender silk, a Paisley shawl being adjusted over one shoulder. She holds a pink fan, partly opened. In the background stands a large blue jar that is resting on a polished table. The background is a dark warm green. Technically, the work is very dexterous, the textures of the various fabrics being skilfully rendered.

Miss Cloud, dressed in blue, and leaning against blue cushions, is seated in a sunlit garden under an amber-colored parasol. Beyond her is seen the vivid green of the lawn. As a portrait the canvas is admirable, as a picture it is equally successful, the feeling of sunlight and air being rendered with truth and subtlety.

Maynard Dixon.

Maynard Dixon, whose notable decorations for the home of Mrs. Anita Baldwin at Santa Anita, were exhibited last year in Los Angeles, was here a few days ago on his way from San Francisco to Arizona, where he expects to remain and paint for several years.

Dixon says that all minor art interests in San Francisco are now swallowed up in those of the great exposition, and that the decorative artist—like all the others—finds very little coming to his hand just now. Therefore he has declared for the desert and the tall timber.

The Garden Studio.

Throughout the summer, William V. Cahill will conduct an out-door class in painting in Hollywood. He has called his place the Garden Studio. It is situated in the old Whitley garden, Hollywood boulevard and Wilcox avenue.

The artist himself is intensely interested in the painting of the figure posed out of doors in sunlight, some of his late pictures in this field being very successful. He is a strong painter, with an admirably direct technique.

"The Old Warrior."

Detlef Sammann writes me from his studio, Wald-Eck, at Pebble Beach, Monterey county:

"It may interest you to know that my picture, 'Survival of the Fittest,' now called 'The Old Warrior,' which won the first prize last spring in Los Angeles, was accepted in the National Academy of New York and sold the first day of the exhibition. I think this reflects very nicely on the judgment of the jury in Los Angeles."

I remarked in Art and Artists, when the picture was first shown, that "Survival of the Fittest" was not a good title for the picture, and am pleased to know that it has been changed.

Architectural Exhibit.

The architectural exhibit opens today in Stickney Memorial School of Fine Arts, Pasadena, and will continue to April 11. On Sundays it is open from 2 to 6; on week-days, from 10 to 5. Yesterday the Art Committee of the Pasadena Music and Art Association tendered a reception in honor of C. P. Townsley, director of the school.

Art Club Meeting.

The California Art Club met last night at No. 422 Copp Building, the particular business of the evening being a discussion of ways and means for the coming annual exhibition, which will probably be held in June.

GROWING WEATHER.

BY NEETA MARQUIS.

"Mary, Mary, quite contrary,
How does your garden grow?
Silver bells and cockle shells,
And sweet maids all in a row."

That always seemed to me queer furniture for a garden. There must have been a paucity of geraniums in Mary's part of the country, if she had to cultivate cockle shells. They wouldn't even sprout oyster plant.

Now, our garden—well, it's very different. Instead of the "nine bean rows" the poetic Mr. Yeats is fond of writing about, we have—honest to goodness!—thirteen rows of celery, up and flourishing. Nor do we reside in the peat bogs, at that. I have never watched celery being brought up by hand before, and I am keenly interested to see whether it turns out green and stringy or white and crisp.

The lettuce is a bit late with us this season, because the birds ate every seed of the first planting. This second bed has had to be covered with newspapers held down by sticks and stones, and even at that Peter Mocking Bird pulled up the edges of the papers and peeked under to see what he could reach.

We have never seen the birds so bold and ravenous before. It inclines one to think that they, too, have suffered from the prevalent lack of employment. Now that the seeds are all started we have had to stake out palm branches, sticks and waving rags to ward off the desperate bandits.

Peter Mocking Bird grows fatter and saucier with each year he tenants our premises. He was gyrating clownishly about the lawn the other morning, when I whistled to him suddenly from the porch. He started as violently as if he had been shot, then came to a dead standstill. Again I whistled, and again the shock nearly knocked him off his pins. But that time he located me, and fixed me with an impudent eye as I went through my entire repertory of cajoling sounds to be made with the lips. But he wouldn't coax worth a smooth nickel. He merely sat motionless as a stuffed blue jay, his head sarcastically settled into his shoulders, as if he said, "You are a remarkably poor imitation of a mocking bird, if you don't mind my saying so!" He has been giving the call of a mountain quail at intervals lately, having taken lessons somewhere in the hills, in all probability, during his last vacation.

It begins to look as if a few of our mulberries had decided to mature according to contract, instead of quitting in the middle of things, as they did last year. The tree is beautifully full of leaf, and the blossoms are, some of them, actually forming into long green fruit. The figs, too, are nicely set, but the pear tree has only just begun to turn green at the tips. There is something very alluring about this pear tree's slim gray outlines against a blue morning sky. It is like music devoid of runs or trills or arpeggios—just pure full chords, suggesting a theme upon which lilting and elaborate harmonies are later to twine themselves, when the leafing-out occurs.

The plum tree must be a wild plum, we have decided, for it is a lovely mass of golden-green leaves, as it has been each spring, but not more than six blossoms have whitened upon it.

The hollyhocks are thriving vigorously, and in between them are phloxes chosen through a good range of colors. This will be such a quaint, old-fashioned bed that I can scarcely wait to see it in bloom.

Instead of sweet peas this year we are being very practical, and that space along the fence is allotted to green corn, which is already up in straight gleaming spears. Another patch is being prepared, so that the roasting ears will come in desirable succession. Then won't we be independent of the Mongolian vegetable merchant!

There are many more practical things in process of growth, such as chives—which are only a refined species of onion, as small and delicate as grass blades—real onions, Brussels sprouts, choice tomato plants and some old-fashioned black-eyed peas.

The esthetic side is not altogether given over, however, for the pansy bed is marked off into 120 neat little squares, into which the more hardy plants have been set out, and just across the walk from them is a bed of mignonette. The rose bushes, rigorously cut back last season, are teeming with buds, and volunteer nasturtiums, marigolds and California poppies are scattering sunshine all over the place, even on what our Scotch friend calls the "bloddy" days.

FOR WOMEN AND MEN.
Facts, Features and Fancies.

BY OLIVE GRAY.

EASTER, the symbol of resurrection!

Everything earthly and material is, if we will believe some of the greatest philosophers, symbolic of something high, eternal. Misinterpreted and not understood, the fleeting shadows of Now are projections from the Great Truth, fundamental in the Then and the Always.

The ideal of the Resurrection, personified in the great Christian symbol, is more widely the ideal of the bringing forth into renewed vitality, those forces of life and nature which have been resting in slumber during the darkness, the eclipse of the seeming death, or unbelief—according as the thought be physical or spiritual. This season of manifold significance has been celebrated throughout all recorded earthly time as the vernal festival which naturally took on a religious aspect in harmony with the spiritual beliefs of the regions inhabited by man.

There is, too, a personal aspect to the ideal of the Resurrection. As at Christmas time we take occasion to set ourselves right with the world from an altruistic point of view, bringing into action the gift bestowing spirit, so at Eastertide we should make an effort to resurrect our faith not only in the Almighty but in that humanity which is our nearest means of association with Him.

Free Thimbles.

For the home sewing woman there can never be too many thimbles in various parts of the house, where the hand may find one readily; and with this fact in mind, one of the popular stores on Broadway will give with every purchase, on Monday, a silver thimble, free. No excuse for rips, tears or buttons off, in any household with such an offer upon the market. Especially as there are bargains in every department of the free-thimble store, which will make it an economy to buy there.

For Your Kitchen.

If you have not already managed to equip your kitchen with a full quota of aluminum ware, your opportunity has arrived. History says that Dutch housewives prided themselves — and may yet — upon the amount of pewter ware which adorned the cupboards and dressers in their kitchens; but if they knew about aluminum ware this material is the one which they would covet. Most American housewives know about aluminum and are ever seeking to complete a full equipment of cooking tools in this shining, light and cleanly material. Aluminum is an ornament to any kitchen, and those who have used it will, henceforth, be satisfied with nothing less. Oh—yes—I came near forgetting to call your attention to a sale of aluminum for less—fully a seventh less—than usual prices on Broadway.

Seaside Curtain Rods.

If you are fitting up the seaside cottage you will hail the sale of nonrustable curtain rods, which a big Broadway store is offering. They are extension rods and the fact that they are nonrustable will mean curtain-saving as well as rod-saving in your beach home. It will mean, too, a saving of your temper.

A Simple Home Remedy.

The lady who always has a remedy to suggest—bless her kind heart!—says that common baking soda, stirred well into a bottle of pure vaseline and applied to rheumatic joints will greatly ease the pain and will limber the joints as well. Easy to try, easy to apply and of little expense, the afflicted will be sure to make the attempt with this simple home remedy.

Handy Button Molds.

New button molds so made that you may cover them with the fabric of your dress or coat and remove the material for washing—these are the latest convenience. Just now when there is such a craze for buttons and especially for those of self-material, what a boon are these!

An Easter Furniture Window.

One of the most interesting Easter exhibitions on Broadway is that in the window of a high-class furniture house, which shows a rare suite of bedroom furniture in American-Chinese lacquer. The shapes are those of the Queen Anne period, with the dark brown cane insets, and the finish is such as in the days of the extravagant Queen were sent to China to acquire. The appearance is that of finely-carved bronze in the effect of Chinese landscapes, emerging artistically from the rich brown tones of the wood. That the beautiful production is wholly American is a triumph for workmanship in our own country.

A rare Chinese hand-tufted rug forms the setting for this suite, and draperies appropriate to both are shown as a background.

For Easter Eatics.

For the many festivities to take place during the Easter vacation, there are some excellent suggestions in the way of table decorations at that large house-furnishing house on mid-Broadway.

An Easter Monday table for children is particularly attractive, with its doll girl in a portable swing as a centerpiece and the Easter eggs placed in all sorts of novel and interesting ways. The spirit of play exhibited in this table scheme is charming. There is a table set with more kinds of Dresden than you or I ever guessed to be in existence. This lovely ware always seems to bring the breath of flowers with its presence.

There is a table for the bridal shower, which is quite original. A big white umbrella forms the centerpiece and from its ribs are suspended the satin ribbon-tied cake boxes, while small umbrellas form the souvenirs of the feast.

In short, there is in that room of table decorations something for every occasion possible to come into requisition during the Eastertide.

Those Sidewalk Palms.

If anyone has a sure shot depilatory, there is a valuable advertising opportunity upon those tubbed palms, which litter the downtown sidewalks.

Spitters have discovered a use for the tubs, by the way. I don't see how they ever got along without them.

Awning Time.

These first warm days have brought to mind the necessity for awnings and that big store on lower Broadway has bethought itself in time and offers to send out the man to take measures of your windows where the sun is over-ardent in his overtures during the summer days. The man will make no charge for telling you just what it will cost for each window or porch and, moreover, will be able to assure you that it will cost less than you expected.

The Modes Decree.

Rose trimmings are in favor for garnishing quaint net and taffeta frocks.

White woolens will be as popular as white linens and cottons with smart women.

Stitched bands of black taffeta appear as trimming on checked cloth costumes.

Delightful silk petticoats show pompadour patterns on white and colored grounds.

Drop or pendant buttons appear on dresses and jackets as a purely decorative touch.

White serge collars, revers and belts are seen on some of the best navy serge suits.

No matter what the fashion may be, one's tea gown may be as individual as one pleases.

The fuller the skirt the shorter it must be if it is to have any pretensions to smartness.

Cornered hats are as much liked as ever. In some of them the brim is laid in box pleats or folds.

The woman who is not willing to wear the smartest of smart footwear must choose the longer skirts.

Quaint mantle coats of taffeta gathered at the waist will be worn over the light summer toilettes.

Shiny leather belts are considerably used for suits, and leather generally is reckoned a good garniture.

Tight little bands of satin or velvet are tied around the choke collars and finished in front with a tiny bow.

Metal filigree buttons are used a great deal by the Paris dressmakers. Usually they are olive and ball shapes.

An Exclusive Orchid.

[Les Annales:] The late Joseph Chamberlain was passionately fond of orchids, and at one time cultivated them assiduously at his Birmingham estate, where he had gathered a large collection of rare varieties of the tropical flower. The following characteristic anecdote, is said to have been told by an officer of the British embassy at Paris.

One morning, when the officer and Mr. Chamberlain were walking together on the Quai aux Fleurs, the great statesman suddenly caught a glimpse of a rare specimen of his favorite flower.

"What is the price?" he asked, making his way to the person carrying the blossom.

"Five hundred francs, monsieur; it is the only one of its kind in France."

Mr. Chamberlain paid the price, crumpled the flower in his hand, and scuffled it underfoot.

"I have it in my collection," he explained to his astonished companion, "and I don't wish a foreigner to possess one like it."

Familiar to Him.

[Philadelphia Telegraph:] Senator William E. Chilton of West Virginia smiled the other evening when the conversation in a Washington club turned to witty court officials. He said he was reminded of a certain magistrate.

Recently the magistrate sat on the front porch with a party of friends. The temperature was well up toward a hundred, and what with a large measure of humidity it was only natural that some observation should be made about summer drinks.

"By the way, Jim," interrupted the magistrate, "what would you call a thirst quencher for this season of the year?"

"Oh, I don't know," thoughtfully replied Jim. "There are lots of them. Did you ever try a punch made of gin, corn rum and ginger ale?"

"No, Jim," was the quiet rejoinder of the magistrate, "but I have tried several people who have."

BRENT'S Selling Out Sale

A-B Gas Ranges Sacrificed

BRENT'S has always sold more A-B Ranges than any store in the country. Our stock of these famous Ranges has always been enormous, totaling many thousands of dollars. When we started this Sale, we knew we would have to make drastic Price Cuts to move these Ranges out in the limited time before the termination of our lease. So we determined to slice prices down to a minimum.

This week we offer you what is probably the last chance to get A-B Ranges at such extraordinary Reductions as those listed below. If you need a Range of any size, we certainly advise you to come to BRENT'S tomorrow and get it.

Lines From Kipling

You remember we started a big MATTRESS SALE two weeks ago. It brought the crowds. As was to be expected, one of our competitors "trailed along," which reminded us of a timely verse from Kipling—

"They copied all they could follow,
But they couldn't copy my mind,
And I left them sweating and stealing,
A year and a half behind."

A Certain Competitor

recently advertised 30-lb. floss mattresses for $10.75 and 35-lb. floss mattresses at $15.95. You see, his patrons were asked to pay $5.20 for a difference of five pounds of floss and a little extra stitching, worth, altogether, about $1.50.

A Serious Proposition

"When I decided to sell out my entire stock, I knew it would be comparatively easy because of my stupendous price cuts. But after two months, I find my stock is not reduced as low as I want it, with my lease almost up. I still have sufficient goods to stock fifty ground-floor storerooms 20x100 feet, which means more than one side of a city block."

"You see, it is a serious proposition for me and compels me to sell Housefurnishings for even LESS, if I am to dispose of them before my lease terminates. I want every one to read carefully the Bargains I advertise today. If you want only one article or enough to furnish a home, come and let my clerks help you save money."

Our sales of Mattresses since we started this mammoth Clearance Sale have broken every record in the history of our business. We really inaugurated this Mattress Sale for an indirect reason. We found that we had far too many Brass Beds on our hands to sell out in the limited time at our disposal. The crowds who came to BRENT'S last week for Mattresses nearly sold us out of some kinds. This week we are ready to take care of everybody—but you'll find it good policy to come MONDAY, when your choice will be widest and best.

MANY ORGANS ARE MADE NEAR HERE

NUYS IS SCENE OF GROWING INDUSTRY.

Factory Furnishes Instruments for Many California Cities for the East—Supply of Redwood Here Proves Valuable Asset Work.

The Van Nuys High School is soon to become possessed of a pipe organ of a very ornamental type. There is nothing unusual about this fact, but when it is made known that the instrument is being constructed in the town itself the event takes on some significance. There are few towns the size of Van Nuys which can supply their own pipe organs.

This fact is not as striking, however, as that the town has besides supplied pipe organs for a great many other sections. Two have even been shipped to New York, and perhaps 200 have been made for different California cities, among them a dozen for motion-picture theaters.

Organ building is one of the most recent industries which the San Fernando Valley has acquired. There is at present just the one plant at Van Nuys, the Johnston Organ and Piano Manufacturing Company, but it is not impossible that the advantages, climatic and otherwise, may attract other manufacturing concerns of like character to this section of the valley. The supply of redwood influenced largely the Johnston company in deciding to locate in California. As long as twenty-five years ago a large English concern had this redwood shipped from California for its needs, having found the Norwegian pine, hitherto the chief timber used for organ pipes, unsatisfactory for the finer finishes. Pine absorbs moisture and exudes pitch, two very undesirable characteristics, it is stated, while redwood is free from these defects. It is resonant, but not resinous, and once dry remains dry. The Johnston company gets its redwood lumber on a ten-acre lot beside the factory.

Great progress has been made in organ construction of recent years. The present pneumatic mechanism in new organs is far superior to the tracking apparatus of the old instruments, in the matter of efficiency and economy. Bellows boys have been transformed into electric motors and the bellows into centrifugal pumps. The organ has been electrified in its operation. The whole regulation of stops, combinations and pedal actions is carried on now through electric action. The maximum of sound is secured with the minimum of muscular exertion.

DEMOCRATIC KING ALBERT.

The People of Belgium Respect His Taste for Little Ceremony in These Trying Times.

Arno Dosch, the war correspondent of the World's Work, tells the following incident:

"It was afternoon late in October. The town square in Furnes was full of military automobiles and a few pro[illegible]. I did not see any field pieces or machine guns. Every last one was tight up on the firing line. My feet were tired from walking over the Belgian blocks, and I held tenaciously to the sidewalk, passing around the [illegible] though it was mostly taken up with cafe tables and baby trees in tubs. At one point the tables were empty and a single sentry was marching up and down. I stopped to ask him the way to the gendarmerie, and in the middle of giving me the directions he came to attention, as a door opened behind him, and saluted.

"Two men came out of the door, one rather tall, with an easy manner, and smartly dressed as a general in the Belgian army. The other was older, also a general, wearing, if anything, a bit more gold braid of the two. They entered a waiting automobile and drove off as casually as two men at home might leave their office for their [illegible]

"Something about the first of the two men impressed me as familiar. I had only seen his back, but that had arrested my attention. I thought possibly I had seen him at the beginning of the war in Brussels, so I asked the sentry his name.

"'That is our King Albert,' he said quite simply.

"During the next couple days I saw the King of Belgium a number of times. He spent his nights at a small villa on the sea shore at La Panne, a hundred yards possibly beyond the hotel where I spent mine. He passed through the streets as unnoticed as any one of the other Belgians who had retreated from Antwerp and Ghent ahead of the army, and preferred the chilly nights in an unheated seaside hotel in Belgium to comfort somewhere beyond. It seemed to be a point of courtesy on the part of the Belgians not to bother their King with ceremony at this trying time. I doubt if he cares much for ceremony, anyhow. Searching around for a single adjective to describe him, I should call him off-handed. His manner, even then, while alert, was easy. It is easy to see why the Belgians love him. If Kings had always been as simple and direct as he, I am inclined to think democracy would have languished."

In an interview, Emmanuel Havenith, Belgian Minister to Washington, says:

"We have received letters recently from the soldiers fighting in Flanders, in which they speak many times of our King. It is when one talks with our soldiers that one perceives how he is loved; they say, all of them, that they will die for him. He is constantly at their side, encouraging them by his presence and his courage. At certain moments he ventures too far; always he is in the very midst of the combat.

"One soldier said to a friend of mine who writes in his letter his story: 'The King came and placed himself at my side in the trench. He took the rifle of a soldier so exhausted he could not stand, to give him a chance to rest, and fired like a plus petit pioupiou—just as one of his own soldiers—during an hour and a half. He himself carries the letters to the soldiers and distributes among them the little paquets from their friends, their parents, sent them from the homes now devastated. He shares—what do you say?—la ratatouille (soldiers' mess,) with his soldiers and he calls them "my friends." He does not wish that they shall render him honors; he wishes simply to be a soldier in the full strength of that term. One day he was seen, exhausted by fatigue, sleeping on the grass at the side of the road.'"

Woman Stops Husband From Using Tobacco

An Ohio Wife Broke Her Husband of the Tobacco Habit With a Recipe She Gave Secretly.

She Tells What She Used.

A well known Ohio woman, whose husband has been a heavy user of tobacco for years, broke him of the habit by the use of a simple home recipe that she gave secretly. She very gladly told what she used but requested that her name should not be made public, as her husband does not know why he quit using tobacco. She said: "The recipe is inexpensive and can be obtained from any drug store, and given secretly or with the patient's knowledge. To 3 oz. of water add 20 grains of muriate of ammonia, a small box of Varlex Compound, and 10 grains of pepsin. Give a teaspoonful three times a day at meal time, in the food or in the coffee, tea or milk. This recipe is perfectly harmless and has no color, taste or smell, and will be found effective for the tobacco habit in any form."

Music and Musicians.

known local pianist and violinist, will be heard in the lovely, but difficult, Cesar Franck sonata for piano and violin April 15. The balance of the programme will include violin numbers of Kreisler, Mendelssohn, Goldmark, etc. This is the first joint recital these two artists have given in several years, and it promises to be an event of more than ordinary interest.

New numbers by Caruso, Farrar, Gadski, Gluck, Homer and Whitehill are featured in the new list of Victor records for April, which has just been issued. Caruso presents another selection from Verdi's "Requiem Mass." Geraldine Farrar and Louise Homer are heard in an old-time Campana duet, "We'll Go and Seek." A Handel classic, "Oh, Sleep! Why Dost Thou Leave Me?" is rendered by Alma Gluck. Emilio de Gogorza presents an English ballad, "'Mong the Green Irish Hills;" Johanna Gadski sings "Die Wacht am Rhein," and Clarence Whitehill, "I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen." The second and fourth movements of the "Jupiter Symphony" are played by the Victor Concert Orchestra, completing the four movements of this Mozart work.

The annual spring festival tour of the New York Symphony Orchestra, with Walter Damrosch, conductor, begins April 12 and covers a period of eight weeks. The itinerary includes the South Atlantic States to Texas, then north to Iowa and east to New York.

Interesting entertainment is promised in the first appearance of the permanent American Grand Opera Company of Los Angeles in May at Clune's Auditorium. Two operas in English by H. J. Botta, head of the Milano Musical College of this city, are to be staged. Both works are in two acts and require a cast of about eight principals and a chorus of some thirty people. There is to be an orchestra of forty-five, it is announced. The rehearsals are said to be proceeding satisfactorily.

At Mrs. Jane Catherwood's musicale last Monday evening, Molly Byerly Wilson was in excellent voice, and sang the following numbers: Samson and Delilah aria, Saint-Saens; "Liebestreu" (Brahms,) "Auf dem Kirchhofe" (Brahms,) "Lungi dal Caro Beme" (Secchi,) "Were My Song With Wings Provided" (Hahn,) "Yesterday, Today" (Spross,) and "Birth of Morn" (Leoni.) Her accompanist was Miss Arley C. Mott, a young artist who has appeared in recital work here and in the East. Others who appeared on the musical programme were Miss Heloise Desiree Coutelenc, violiniste; Miss Lillian Ammalee Smith, and Mildred Rouse, pianists.

Mme. Grace Bradley, well-known Los Angeles contralto, left last week for Seattle, Portland, Spokane and other northwestern cities to appear in concert and lyceum work. Mme. Bradley has just returned from Europe, where she has been singing in opera and concert. She will be away about two months.

Arthur Shattuck, the American pianist who scored a tremendous success as soloist with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra in Detroit on St. Patrick's Eve, later in the season will visit the Pacific Coast for a series of recitals—his initial appearance west of the Rocky Mountains.

Frances Alda, one of the leading prima donna sopranos of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who, in private life is the wife of M. Gatti-Cassazza, director-general of the Metropolitan, will make her second transcontinental tour, which includes twenty engagements on the Pacific Coast, during March and April, 1916.

The California poppy song, music and words respectively by Mr. and Mrs. Jean de Chauvenet, promises to prove a worthy addition to the increasing number of California songs. It is shortly to be published in this city. The song takes for its subject the State flower, and was inspired by the poppy fields at Van Nuys and Lankershim. The words were, curiously enough, written in the dark. Both Mr. and Mrs. Chauvenet have been active in the local field of music instruction for many years.

HEALTH BY THE TONGUE.

Its Condition Gives a Very Reliable Index of the Internal Condition of the Body.

[New York American:] From the very beginning of medicine the tongue has been known to be a reliable indication of a person's physical condition and even nowadays it is one of the most useful aids in the diagnosis of disease. An abnormal appearance of the tongue is an indication of fever, some local injury, a disorder of the digestive tract or various other diseased conditions.

In fevers, according to a writer in the Dietectic and Hygiene Gazette, the tongue is generally coated or furred, dry, and sometimes fissured. It is apt to look dirty and the mouth to be bad smelling. In typhoid, when a brown furred tongue becomes darker and thicker, and foul accumulations appear on the teeth and lips, the condition is serious.

When the tongue begins to "clear up" we expect convalescence; when the coating reforms, we fear a relapse. The tongue becomes greatly enlarged in several fevers, where there is extreme exhaustion.

A coated tongue may be caused by decayed teeth or enlarged tonsils or excessive smoking. When a circumscribed swelling and hardness appear on the tongue they point to cancer or to another very serious disease. To establish the diagnosis between these it may be necessary to cut out a piece for microscopic examination.

Depressed scars upon the surface of the tongue indicate healed specific ulcers. We may find in epileptics scars due to biting the tongue. Finally the tongue may be stained by drugs, or acids or alkalis.

A furred or coated tongue occurs in disorders of the digestive tract. Constipation produces this; or a brown furred tongue with a bad taste may appear the "morning after" the patient has wined and dined generously. A coated tongue with a yellowish hue would draw attention to the liver.

When the tongue looks raw, like beefsteak, and of an unnaturally clean, smooth and perhaps glazed appearance, it points to gastric or intestinal irritability; this means shedding of intestinal epithelium with consequent loss of power of absorption—a serious condition, for here the supply of the system's nutritive material is interfered with.

The color of the tongue is affected by that of the blood. A pale, flabby indented tongue indicates thin and poor blood, as in anemia and chronic wasting diseases. It is said that a swollen and indented tongue, presenting also a sort of silvery sheen, is a sign of disease in women. The tongue is dry in diabetes and in other conditions. It is tremulous in chronic alcoholism, in many nervous diseases, and in acid and mercurial poisoning.

A tongue looking as if covered with white paint is characteristic of malaria. The "strawberry tongue" of scarlet bright red is found in scarlet fever.

MAKE PRISONERS OF DOCTORS.

Both Sides in the European War Are Doing it, and if Found Fighting Are Treated as Combatants.

[Manchester Guardian:] Considerable anxiety has been felt by relatives and friends of officers and men of the Royal Army Medical Corps who have been captured by the Germans. The number is now considerable and excepting a small party which came through by Switzerland in the opening stages of the war there have been no releases, and nothing has yet been made public about the matter. I learn today that the British government addressed to the German government on December 21 a proposal for an exchange of medical prisoners. To this proposal no reply has yet been received from the German government. The thing that needs explanation is how the medical men on either side came to be made prisoners at all. According to the Geneva Convention the army medical service and the Red Cross units are not to be taken prisoners of war. They may only be detained temporarily to attend to wounded. There seems to be a general idea that they are liable to capture if bearing arms, but this is not so. They are expressly permitted to carry arms for the protection of themselves or their patients. What they are not allowed to do is join in the fighting while wearing the Red Cross badge. They may remove it and become combatants and they may obtain leave to resume it when they cease to be combatants. But if they are captured fighting while wearing the Red Cross badge, they are not only liable to capture but to punishment for a war crime. Needless to say, accusations of Red Cross men fighting have been made on both sides. There have been cases in former wars where the excitement of the moment has been too much for the frailty of human nature. I understand, however, that no charges of this kind have been made officially.

Just What is Dissipation?

In the February American Magazine David Grayson, writing his new serial novel, "Hempfield," presents more of the philosophy of life which has made his other books famous such, for example, as "Adventures in Contentment" and "The Friendly Road." In his current story, "Hempfield," he comments as follows on dissipation:

"I think sometimes that our common definition of dissipation is far too narrow. We confine it to crude excesses in the use of intoxicating liquor or the crude gratification of the passions; but often these are only the outward symbols of a more subtle inward disorder. The things of the world—a thousand clamoring interests, desires, possessions—have got the better of us. Men become drunken with the inordinate desire for owning things, and dissolute with ambition for political office. I knew a man once, a farmer, who debauched himself upon land; fed his appetite upon the happiness of his home, cheated his children of education, and himself went shabby, bookless, joyless, comfortless, that he might buy more land. I call that dissipation, too!"

A Woman's Mirror

OWING to happy recovery of health by the timely use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound thousands of women throughout the world once more enjoy the reflection they see in their mirrors.

Nothing is so pleasing to the eye as a happy, robust, healthy woman, but owing to some curable disorder peculiar to their sex many women suffer week after week and month after month. Without complaining, they do their duty like soldiers until all beauty and freshness of features are gone; premature old age appears and their mirrors tell a sad and disheartening tale. Many women owe their health to

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Here are three out of tens of thousands of Genuine Testimonials:

An Operation Avoided.

"I suffered from female troubles so badly that I had a great deal of pain, and if I slipped on a stone in walking, or got the least jar, it would hurt me terribly. I continued to get worse until I had spasms, and was advised that I would have to go to the hospital for an operation. I objected to that, and one day a friend called and advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for she said she had the same trouble dreadfully and could get no help until she took it, which cured her. Therefore I began taking it, and after the first bottle I was better, and four bottles have entirely cured me of the trouble."—Mrs. ELLA F. RICE, 182 Friendship Street, Providence, R. I.

In a Short Time I Recovered.

"I suffered from female trouble so that the best physicians advised me to go to the hospital for an operation, because they thought there was something growing in my left side which would have to be taken out. I refused and instead sent to the drug store for a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and took it according to directions. In a short time I recovered enough to do my work, and later was able to make the trip to Decatur, Ill. I know the Compound worked a miracle in my case, and I have recommended it to many persons and told them what it has done for me."—Mrs. LAURA A. GRISWOLD, 2300 Blk, E., Williams Street, Decatur, Ill.

Makes Change of Life Easier.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me a world of good, and I want to recommend it to others who suffer as I did. When I began to take it I was passing through change of life. I was very nervous, could not sleep nights, and had a great deal of pain and soreness. I was advised to have an operation but they did not think I could live through it. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and have come out all right. I think every woman in this condition should rely on Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at this time of life, as it is such a good remedy."—Mrs. A. BANNIGAN, 57 Knickerbocker Avenue, Paterson, N. J.

A medicine that has restored so many women to health and can be proved to have done it, must be regarded with respect. This is the record of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which cannot be equalled by any other medicine for women.

Newbro's Herpicide

A Rabbit Proves Dandruff the True cause of Hair Loss

One of the earliest experiments following the discovery of the contagious nature of dandruff was by Doctor Sabouraud of the Pasteur Institute, Paris. This doctor inoculated a rabbit with human dandruff germs and the rabbit in time was completely denuded of its fur.

But what to us is of more direct interest—this experiment proved that dandruff kills the life and beauty of the hair and causes it to fall out.

SUN DRUG CO., SPECIAL AGENTS.

WHEN YOU WASH YOUR HAIR DON'T USE SOAP

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

A CATHOLIC STRONGHOLD.

The City of Lima, Peru, Has a Cathedral Founded by Pizarro, and a Multitude of Other Churches.

[Pittsburgh Gazette-Times:] Lima is one of the strongholds of the church. It is said that Toledo, Spain, is the only other city in the Roman Catholic world which has more houses of worship, per capita, than the capital of Peru.

From a high place their towers and spires are almost as numerous as trees standing in the forest. And they represent great wealth. Time was when the church property constituted a seventh of the total valuation of the city and it must be nearly as much now.

The cathedral is a most stately edifice. It is old and gray, for the foundation was laid by the mighty Pizarro himself. It took ninety years to build. In fact, the records show that it was more than a century before the imposing towers were completed upon the great foundations the iron-hearted conqueror laid down for them.

The present archbishop is the twenty-sixth in the line. The principal portal is the Door of Pardon. The large pedestal, which crowns the who bears the statue of St. John the Evangelist, the patron of the cathedral. There is an eagle at his foot and a book and pen in his hand.

The second door of the transcept opens on the Court of the Orange Trees, which is precisely like that of the same name in Seville in faraway Spain. On the pantheon are the remains of the conqueror and his daughter Francisca, who left a fortune to defray the expense of celebrating a daily mass at the high altar. The visitor may see the tombs of the archbishops and the very body of Pizarro, which is well preserved. One can see what a big strong man he really was, and that he had only one eye, the other having been put out by a javelin thrust.

Daybreak in Africa.

[American Magazine:] Each morning for some time I got up in the black night, ate my solitary breakfast by the flicker of a fire and then, just as the first milky gray was seeping into the darkness, I would start out for a walk. The ground was not to be seen at all, nor the objects near the ground, only the tops of trees like ghosts. We stumbled and moved slowly, feeling our way. All about us we could hear beasts snorting softly at us like mettlesome horses, stamping on the earth, or perhaps we heard the short swift rush of them as they dashed away. Only when they moved could we see them, phantom bits of the same dim substance of all the rest of the world. They were puzzled at us, and curious, and very near.

And all the time the flames were spreading in the sky, the fierce, hot, red and copper and orange flames of the African sunrise. They reflected on the earth. We could see a little better, guess a little more. Then all at once some dilatory god threw over the switch, and it was light!

Never did I become accustomed to the magic of this phenomenon. Whenever anybody, white or black, happened to be near me, I remarked upon it to him, and generally gained slight response.

Valuable as Gold.

RAISING FOXES NEW INDUSTRY.

EXTENSIVE BUSINESS IN PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.

Demand for Breeding Foxes is Extensive, While the Pelts of the Silver Animals Bring Enormous Prices, as High as Ten Thousand Dollars.

[Hartford Courant:] There is a new industry flourishing in Prince Edward Island, which lies "down east" from Halifax in the Dominion of Canada. The total plant needed consists of one or more pair of foxes, a ranch and about $15 worth of meat and milk a year for the sustenance of each animal. It is the breeding in captivity of the wonderful silver black fox, whose fur is more valuable than gold or diamonds. And among the leaders in the industry is a former Hartford man who retired from business in this city only a short while ago. He is now at the head of a company which is capitalized at $200,000.

This man is E. P. Cahill of No. 218 Ashley street. A year and a half ago he sold out the business which he conducted for many years on Pratt street, and went to Alberton, P.E.I. There, with a couple of friends, he started the Hartford Dark Silver Fox Company, buying five pairs of the little animals. There are now fourteen pairs of foxes on the ranch, and the new name is the E. P. Cahill Silver Fox and Oyster Company, Limited. The second part of the name is almost as interesting as the first, but for the present the foxes will be considered only.

Fox breeding started in Prince Edward Island about twenty years ago when Charles Dalton, a poor trapper, conceived the idea of breeding the priceless little animals instead of relying on the fast-vanishing supply remaining in the forests for pelts. He managed to secure a pair and from these have grown the present supply. The man who thought of the scheme is now a millionaire and has won for himself the title of the "Fox King of Prince Edward Island." He bred from this first pair of foxes enough fur-bearing progeny to amass a fortune and has now sold out his ranch and retired from active life. Mr. Cahill and his company bought the ranch and Mr. Dalton has taken $400,000 worth of stock in the new concern. Over the entire island there are 101 companies besides 122 ranches owned by private individuals or partnerships.

The pelts of the foxes bring enormous prices in the markets of the oriental potentate, the Chicago pork king and the Pitsburgh steel magnate, or anyone else who can afford $10,000, for the fur of the rare fox furnished a market that far exceeds the supply.

A single pelt of a silver fox from the island has sold as high $2700. Others have brought amounts nearly as great. In April, 1910, twenty-seven furs brought an average price of $1400 in London. Since that date few skins have been sold from the island except those of animals which have died of disease or become too old to bear young. The demand for breeding foxes has taken up the entire supply. Four years ago animals for breeding sold at little more than their pelt value, up to $3000 or $4000 a pair. Now one must pay from $10,000 to $15,000 for an option on a pup. Old foxes are rated at $10,000 a piece, with young ones at $7000.

The value of the entire fox population of the island may be appraised from the following figures: The provincial Legislature in August, 1914, passed an act taxing the increase in value of foxes, that is the value of the offspring, 1 per cent. The value is taken from sworn statements of the owners. The total number of ranches was found to be 277, containing 3130 foxes of the silver, cross, red and unclassified species. Of the silver foxes, by far the most numerous and valuable, there were found to be 1602. The value of the offspring of all classes for the year 1914, on which the tax was levied, was $3,717,163. The total valuation of the old foxes and the ranches was given as $15,186,150. This is twice the value of all cattle, horses, sheep, swine and poultry as shown by the Canadian census of 1911.

Of course the natural habits of the silver fox are one of the main factors in the success which has been attained in breeding it. This little animal mates once a year—in January. Unlike most other animals, the male chooses one female for his consort and breeds to her alone. The litters are from one to seven pups and the young are mature at six months and will breed the following year. The animal reaches a high stage of domestication considering its normal wild state. The total cost of upkeep is between $10 and $15 a year for food, which consists of meat, milk and similar articles of diet. The animals are kept within wire inclosures, the tops of which are turned in to prevent their climbing over and the bottoms extended far enough into the earth to preclude the possibility of their digging out. Sleeping dens must be provided and the ranches employ day and night watchmen to look after the precious little beasts.

Until 1912 the business of fox breeding was conducted as a private enterprise by individuals or partnerships. In that year the first companies were incorporated by act of the provincial Legislature and since that date 101 have been incorporated under legislative acts or letters patent. The companies and non-incorporated ranches paid to their shareholders in 1913 dividends averaging 50 per cent. and ranging from nothing to 500 per cent. and over, according to a statement issued by J. E. B. McCready, the Canadian government publicity agent for the industry.

A strong association has been formed of the breeders under the name of the Prince Edward Island Fox Breeders' Association, of which Charles Dalton is president. The government is showing every interest in the industry and is encouraging it by appointing a publicity agent, who has been mentioned, to boom the industry among capitalists of other countries, and also by giving its advice in the strengthening of the business and the association. The publicity agent, Mr. McCready, did one good service at the outbreak of the present war by urging the breeders, many of whom were getting panicky, to hold on to their foxes. He pointed out that, at present pelt values, a pair of breeders would bring returns of from 10 to 15 per cent. on the present quoted London prices. As a result there was little sacrificing.

The future of the business may be judged from the statements of Mr. McCready, who gives the following reasons for its future prosperity: "That the native silver fox produces the most valuable pelt known to commerce and broken all previous records on the London fur market. That the strain has been improved by careful breeding so as to insure the reproduction of high pelt value from generation to generation. That the conditions of soil and climate here are unequalled elsewhere and 85 per cent. of all the silver foxes in captivity are in the ranches in Prince Edward Island. That the production of all the more valuable furs has fallen off by 50 per cent. during the past twenty years, with a general advance in prices of 200 to 300 per cent. during the same time, and that the constantly increasing demand and the decreasing supply from the wilds can only be met by breeding fur-bearing animals in captivity.

DO YOU BELIEVE IN LUCK?

"KI-MAGI" Talismans for Good Luck Society's Latest Fad.

The popularity of Good Luck Charms or Talismans was never so great as it has been since this war. The miraculous escapes of some of the Indian soldiers who are now fighting in France, and their getting off with some trifling wounds in their arms, has to a great extent satisfied the doubting ones that there must be something good in the Talismans which most of them carry around their necks.

These "Ki-Magi" Amulets are rather rare in this country, but an enterprising importer of antique curios has succeeded in collecting a few of them and will send one postpaid to anyone upon receipt of one dollar or a collection of seven All Good Luck Amulets for business, speculation, etc., for three dollars. If you wish to secure these Talismans write at once to Sheriar, Dept. 73 R, No. 8 Groenedal Str., The Hague, Holland. Be sure and affix a 5-cent stamp on your letter.

POLAND ALL ROADS.

The Destructive Effects of the War has Worn Out All the Highways and the Near-by Fields as Well.

[New York Times:] The special correspondent of the Westminster Gazette sends the following interesting letter on "Ruined Poland" from Warsaw:

Poland is all road; and because it is all road the armies can hardly move. This contradictory conclusion will be come to after a visit to any spot ten miles or more distant from Warsaw. During my first six days here I made two sorties into the war-made wilderness in the west and southwest, and returned from both with the impression that not fields and bogs, as people think, are Poland's physical characteristics, but rather infinitely long and infinitely broad roads. When one gets ten miles out, where fences and roadside houses are rare, the chaussee or the country road begins to spread to greater and greater breadths, until, were it not for the monotonously-parallel longitudinal furrows, it would be a sea of mud without anything left of its linear nature.

The fields seem to have entirely disappeared. The road runs not only in front of houses which once faced it, but also behind them, so that they stand islanded in the furrowed mud sea. And the mud sea ever grows broader and broader. The cause of this conversion of fertile Poland into unproductive roads is that the original chaussees were destroyed by the Germans when they retreated in October.

Gen. Von Hindenburg "checkerboarded" them with metriculous German accuracy. He dug square holes alternately to right and left sides. Roads so treated are past repair. Transport of all kinds had to be driven over the roadside fringe of field; and, when that wore out, a further fringe of field was chosen, until finally the track used by the endless trains of artillery, ammunition carts, cavalry, supplies and Red Cross cars, stretched perhaps 200 yards to the right of the original chaussee. People who have been farther west say that hundreds of square miles of good land, partly sown with winter corn, are swallowed up by transport tracks, and that if the war lasts as long as soldiers calculate, my statement that "Poland is all road" will be a literal fact.

I drove to the village of Kuldno, of whose hundred-odd houses only two are intact. The population had "gone to Warsaw." This answer one gets everywhere; as a matter of fact, I found the population quartered in a larger village to the northwest. Kuldno was destroyed by artillery fire. Villages close by were burned as reprisal. I visited two, of which nothing remains but chimneys and stoves.

In Shelecho, the village farthest south visited by me, I found the whole population preparing to leave. The motive was want of food. The Germans requisitioned all the grain here and in the neighboring villages and not content with feeding their troops from day to day, carted large quantities away. The only resource is to tramp to Warsaw, where at worst no one is allowed to starve. The country people had lived on grain for weeks and many women committed suicide from hunger.

It is impossible to get a coherent account of events of importance. The headmen of Wlochow saw a fight in which 5000 men were killed and wounded. The villagers, though liable to panic, are not depressed. One sees on Sunday afternoons processions of brightly-dressed girls singing. There are picturesque religious processions, with numberless images. Groups of half-grown youths tramp the roads whistling a popular Berlin operetta melody, which has been learned from the invaders.

THE COCOANUT TRADE.

This is One of the Articles Pronounced Contraband by the British Lest Copra be Used for Butter.

[Washington Star:] In seeking to cut off the supply of food oils to Germany, Great Britain has prevented so far as possible, the shipment of copra. This calls attention to the wonderful economic development of the cocoanut, a development that is only paralleled by that of the banana, the potato and the tomato. A great English trader in cocoanuts and cocoanut products was recently reported as saying: "The average man's idea of the cocoanut business is the sale of the husked nut by a Greek fruit dealer. Few persons realize that two years ago the total cocoanut trade between America and Europe on one side and the countries of the east, where the cocoanuts are grown, exceeded $343,000,000, a figure that was only $72,000,000 less than the world's gold output for the same year, and which exceeded the rubber business by $93,000,000."

Copra is dried cocoanut meat and it is a highly important article of commerce in those lands where climatic conditions permit the cultivation of cocoanuts. It is an important article of export from the Philippines. The shipment of green cocoanuts is a commercial trifle compared with the shipment of the dried meat of these nuts.

Germany has been a large importer of copra. In that country the oil extracted from the nut meat is used as the base of a valuable, palatable and wholesome substitute for milk butter. In other countries of Europe it has long been employed and its employment has been increasing by leaps and bounds in the manufacture of a substitute for butter.

An Intelligent Dog.

The Farm Journal says that one of its employees, while on her summer vacation, was introduced to Prince, a collie nine years old, a fine specimen of this breed. It is said of him that if you give him a cent he takes it to the candy shop, puts the money in the attendant's hand, and begs until the candy is given to him. But this is the wonderful part: If you give him 5 cents he takes it next door to the ice cream parlor, gives the money to the attendant, climbs up into a chair and begs and barks until they give him an ice cream cone which he carries outside to eat. If they give him a basket to carry which is too heavy, he takes out some of the things and comes back for them! Isn't he a wonder?

BEAUTY EXPERTS ARE WAXING RICH.

How They Fatten on the Silly Women of Foreign Society. London Court Case that May Bare the Sins of the Unscrupulous Fakirs.

BY LADY MARY.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, March 17.—There is a beauty specialist of London, Paris and New York who has a claim against a well-known society beauty, now, by the way, nursing at one of the Red Cross hospitals on the Continent, for over $10,000, and it is anticipated that the case will cause a greater sensation than that of Lady Ida Sitwell and her money-lenders. The bill for the peress' beautifying is the most preposterous production ever penned. Lotions in it are charged for at the rate of $150 a bottle and tightening creams and decayed skin removers at something like $125 a jar. The lady against whom the bill is made out has been separated for a considerable time from her husband, though the general public was not aware of the fact and he now declines to foot the document which he explains must be settled out of her allowance—$35,000 a year—which is paid punctually.

There is no business including money lending at sinful interest in which there is such colossal swindling as that of the beauty doctors, many of whom have amassed large fortunes out of women who ought to know better. I was speaking the other afternoon to a young woman who is in charge of the make-up department in one of the leading beauty culture firms and she assured me that for these lotions and creams that are sold at the rate of $150 a bottle and $125 a pot, the ingredients cost just 18 cents or a dime and any chemist sells practically the same things under different names for 50 cents.

"The fact is," she said, "if you don't charge a rich society woman a fabulous price for these things she won't think anything of them. The more wildly expensive you are in this profession the more successful you are."

Several of the employees of one of the most prominent complexion specialists, well-known in New York as well as here, have broken from the firm and opened in Mayfair in a few weeks' time.

MRS. ASTOR IN TOWN.

Mrs. John Jacob Astor is again in town, looking rather tired after her experiences on the Continent, where she did some helping in the hospitals. While in a remote part of France the weather was very severe and the supply of coal gave out. She had a toe very badly frost-bitten and I am told suffered a lot with it. She had another unpleasant experience when a wounded soldier, who was delirious, tried to shoot a night attendant, taking the unfortunate man for a German. No one seems to know how it was the sick soldier had his rifle. Mrs. Astor heard the fuss and went to the ward to find out what was happening, whereupon the soldier became calm. Those in the hospital declare her appearance undoubtedly prevented a tragedy.

She is one of numerous people who intend to be in London a great deal in the near future, though she has under consideration a visit to the United States.

London is waking up and is certainly very full and later will be fuller still, according to the hotel keepers and the house agents, who both say their bookings are splendid. For the time being London is the capital of Europe and is the headquarters of many of the smart people of the entire Continent and innumerable Americans as well. Suburban houses, with big gardens are letting particularly well, for gardening is the craze and the mania of the hour. Fortunes are being spent on laying them out, and Lady Wolseley and other great authorities on the subject are literally raking in the dollars. Some of the landscape gardeners have more orders to plan gorgeous pleasure grounds than they can carry out in two years.

I hear Lady Granard is having great things done in the gardens of her husband's Irish seat and that she means to have an expert over from the United States to lay out the American garden.

Knitting is quite played out for the moment, the smart world having once more gone wild over afternoon bridge—auction bridge, of course—and stakes are very high. I don't believe it came out in the case, but it was really through auction bridge that Lady Ida Sitwell had to go to prison. Her friends rather blamed her brother (Lord Londesborough) for not paying her debts. As a matter of fact he had done it many a time and he knew perfectly well that he might go on doing it for the rest of his life; for Lady Ida would never be cured. He also, I am told, wanted to give another very charming and quite young member of his family a lesson, as the lady in question is bitten, too, very badly with the gambling mania and has lost considerably.

CHILDREN IN KHAKI.

All the children want to be dressed in khaki and Lord and Lady Ancaster's young heir, Lord Willoughby de Eresby, is the first of the society boys to be arrayed in it. I met him in Bond street the other day walking proudly along with his pretty mother in a lieutenant's uniform which was correct to the smallest detail. For some time the small boys of the general public had been dressed in khaki, but Lady Ancaster is the first peeress to adopt it in her nursery. She is one of the very exclusive American women and is on terms of great intimacy with Queen Mary, who, when her Majesty did visit country houses before the war, requested on several occasions that Lord and Lady Ancaster should be included among those invited to meet her. It is said with good authority that before long the countess will be asked to accept a post in the Queen's household, for, although an American, a precedent is furnished in the case of the late Duchess of Devonshire, who was a German, of a foreigner occupying an office in the reigning household.

DUCHESS OF ALBANY'S WOE.

The Duchess of Albany is suffering more over the war than any of our royal family, her only son, the very apple of her eye, being engaged on the enemy's side owing to the fact that some years ago he accepted the Duchy of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, which was declined by both the Duke of Connaught and Prince Arthur of Connaught when it fell into the royal family through the deaths of both the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and his son. This duchy was originally the property of Queen Victoria's husband, the prince consort, and after his death was passed on to his second son, the then Duke of Edinburgh.

I hear the Connaught family are blaming now over the fact that they did not take it on. It came as rather a godsend to the Duke of Albany's heir, he being by no means well-provided for. The Duchess of Albany was once privately engaged for twenty-four hours to Lord Rosebery, but

The Duchess of Albany was privately engaged for twenty-four hours to Lord Rosebery, but when the permission of Queen Victoria, her mother-in-law, was asked her Majesty was exceedingly angry, for she had the most rigid notions against the re-marriage of widows.

Her Royal Highness is a simple, kindly, domesticated woman, and she still wears a bonnet with jaw strings and never abandoned her full skirts. Lord Rosebery, it is recorded, used to say "she was the only really restful woman he had ever met."

Her Royal Highness has already said that she could not know American women because, for one thing, they would talk her head off, and for another they were too smart to be in the company of a bonnet!

SCIENCE, PROGRESS.

Medical Science and Ventilation.

[Richmond Times-Dispatch:] It was not very long ago that the doctors were telling us that the headaches, nausea and exhaustion that accompanied any prolonged stay in ill-ventilated rooms were caused by the depletion of the stock of oxygen in the air, with the resulting formation of carbon dioxide. Comes now an authority no less potent, grave and reverend than the Journal of the American Medical Association to inform us that this chemical reaction is exactly like the flowers that bloom in the spring, in that it has nothing to do with the case.

The writer in the journal suddenly remembers—his recollection must have been sudden, because a decade or less ago the fact it enshrines had no place in the warnings of the health department—that "it is necessary to go only a short distance up into the mountains to come under an atmospheric pressure such as to reduce the oxygen supply much more than it is reduced in crowded assemblies, and yet mountain air is especially healthful." And then he adds that "the amount of oxygen in the air apparently has little or nothing to do with the stimulating or depressing properties of the atmosphere breathed in ordinary life."

It is the same thing with carbon dioxide. "Evidently," says this destroyer of all our most fondly cherished theories, "a quantity of carbon dioxide far exceeding the highest hygienic limit which has hitherto been set up as a 'standard' can be breathed with impunity." And the iconoclast deals smashing blows also to the theory that toxic organic matter or bacteria floating in the air are capable of causing any decided harm.

He reduces it finally to a matter of heat and humidity. Rooms are too warm, he concludes, and their atmosphere overburdened with moisture. That is all. Apparently the person most competent to advise on questions of ventilation is not the physician or the chemist, but the heating engineer. In desperate emergencies even that long-suffering, but ingenious, person, the plain citizen, may be able himself to raise a window or open some of the furnace doors.

Effect of Worry on Brain Cells.

[Iron Trade Review:] Worry is a mild form of fright. Fright breaks down brain cells and causes deterioration of brain power. Worry produces similar results. This, in brief, is the theory of Dr. George W. Crile of Cleveland, the eminent surgeon who returned last week from the American Hospital in Paris and the battlefields of France, where he went to assist in taking care of wounded soldiers and to test their blood to determine the effect upon it of the terror of the battlefield.

Dr. Crile's investigations and lectures on this subject have aroused the keenest interest of business men, many of whom realize the danger of overwork and worry. He has shown that in the case of a rabbit frightened by a dog, the actual breaking down of brain cells has been caused and he says that there is no doubt that to some extent similar results follow from worry and excessive work. Dr. Crile has not yet announced the results of his investigations in France, but it is easy to understand that the blood and nervous system of a terrorized man would afford opportunities for study which might result in much practical good to mankind. If by studying extreme cases, resulting from war, Dr. Crile and his assistants can reach conclusions as to the treatment of nervous and mental disorders of those engaged in the strenuous pursuits of peace they will render service of great value.

Electroculture in Food Supplies.

[Frederic J. Haskin in Washington Star:] The problem of feeding Europe is to be partly solved in the near future by methods recently discovered for increasing the production of food through the utilization of electricity in agriculture.

It has just been announced that England will turn all her grazing lands into wheat fields bearing crops for the next harvest. Sir Oliver Lodge has already demonstrated on his own farms the possibility of making every acre yield an increase of at least 40 per cent. over its ordinary crop by electroculture. When the English grazing lands are growing wheat by electrically-aided agriculture, England need fear no shortage of bread, either for her soldiers in the field or their families left at home.

The scientists of every country are experimenting with a view to increasing the value of electroculture to the farmer and gardener, and at least half a dozen methods of applying electric currents to food production are adding daily to the world's supply. Sir Oliver Lodge has been especially interested in increasing the wheat supply, and the electrical farm apparatus of his invention is believed to minimize both expenditure and labor. He has demonstrated that a two-horse-power oil engine can drive a dynamo capable of supplying ample electricity for fertilizing an eighteen-acre wheat field.

The electricity is conducted through wires charged positively stretched across the field high enough not to interfere with walking under them, and by negative wires connected with the earth. The two kinds of electricity, positive and negative, strive to meet, causing a discharge of electricity between the overhead wires and the ground, which stimulates the growth of the crops.

The good effect of electricity upon the soil is due to its nitratizing influence. Every farmer knows the value of nitrate as a fertilizer. While it may be applied directly, electricity is helping food production indirectly by producing, in larger quantities than ever before, such substances as calcium hydrates, better known as nitrolin. The development of these products througn electro-chemistry has already gone far to fill the deficit of the failing supply of Chilean saltpeter. The great electro-chemical plant at Niagara Falls is producing unheard of supplies of these products, as if in answer to Sir Oliver Lodge's great query, "When the wheat crop fail, what———?"

In Germany and other countries having much natural water power, great electro-chemical laboratories are adding these fertilizers to the farmer's resources.

Can Measure Sound Waves.

[Pittsburgh Gazette-Times:] Jacob Mazer, acoustical engineer, says the progress of acoustical science has made it possible to obtain actual measurements of sound, so that it can be distributed over a large room without loss.

The volume of sound not only can be measured, he said, but it can be determined with the minutest accuracy the distance it will travel under varying conditions, how it is reflected from various surfaces, and all this knowledge can be used in the construction of walls, ceilings, angles, corners and linings, to obtain the best acoustical results. He told of work done in the alteration of many notable rooms, particularly in the Parliament building in Ottawa, Can.

Mr. Mazer said the buildings of the ancient Greeks indicated they had had a remarkable knowledge of acoustics, but until recent years this was a lost art. He told also of making a study of the acoustic properties of the Hall of Fame in the Capitol in Washington, a room that proved to be an unsatisfactory chamber for the lower House of Congress, because of its construction.

Civilization in Africa.

[The Argonaut:] In all parts of West Africa there are evidences that for centuries before the natives began to import or to buy European cotton goods from the European trader they grew their own cotton and wove on hand looms their own cotton goods. They also manufactured soap, and have made free use of it in keeping their bodies clean, as may be observed by those who travel through the country. Some wash their bodies, as a religious ceremony, two and three times a day.

MAXIM'S INVENTIONS.

The Germans Adopted His System of Throwing High Explosives and Other Nations His Explosives.

[Hudson Maxim, in Harper's Weekly:] Maximite, invented by me, and adopted by the United States Navy in 1901, was the first high explosive successfully to be fired through heavy armor plate and exploded behind the plate by a safety delay-action detonating fuse. A little later the United States government adopted my safety delay-action detonating fuse for use in high explosive projectiles. Since that time the other nations of the world have followed suit, and the use of high explosives in all kinds of projectiles is now universal.

I delivered a lecture before the Royal United Service Institution of Great Britain in 1897 on "A New System of Throwing High Explosives from Power Guns." In that lecture I showed designs of a 24-inch siege gun, with a semi-armor-piercing projectile, carrying half a ton of high explosive, and weighing, charged, 2700 pounds, and capable of being thrown by the gun at maximum elevation, with a smokeless powder charge, to a distance of more than nine miles.

The present German 23½-inch siege gun and the German high-explosive projectile are close duplicates of the gun and shell then shown by me.

That lecture, with illustrations, was printed in the journal of that society, in London Engineer, the Scientific American, New York Herald and many other papers.

Although the United States government adopted maximite, and although the English, soon after the lecture, adopted lyddite, still the Germans are the only people who have had the sagacity to adopt my system of throwing high explosives in its entirety.

Troubles of the Non-Com.

[London Chronicle:] Even drill sergeants have their trials, though their lot is envied by most of the military rank and file. One of them, much bemedalled, was drilling a squad of men the other day at a training center in the southwest district, and perhaps he was a little tetchy because he had just been drilling a few of those who have got H. M.'s commissions, for he suddenly broke out with, "Now then, corporal, don't you know your left foot from your right? 'Aven't I trouble enough with the officers without the men worrying me, too?"

Try "GETS-IT," It's Magic for Corns!

New, Simple, Common-sense Way.

You will never know how really easy it is to get rid of a corn, until you have tried "GETS-IT." Nothing like it has ever been produced. It takes less time to apply it than it does to read this. It will dumfound you, especially if you have tried everything else for corns. Two drops applied in a few seconds—that's all. The corn shrivels, then comes right off, painlessly, without fussing or trouble. If you have ever made a fat bundle out of your toe with bandages; used thick, corn-pressing cotton-rings; corn-pulling salves; corn-teasing plasters—well, you'll appreciate the difference when you use "GETS-IT." Your corn-agony will vanish. Cutting and gouging with knives, razors, files and scissors, and the danger of blood-poison are done away with. Try "GETS-IT" tonight for any corn, callous, wart or bunion. Never fails.

"GETS-IT" is sold by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago. Sold in Los Angeles and recommended as the world's best corn cure by The Owl Drug Company.

Ki-yi! Corn-pains in Every Nerve! Use "GETS-IT;" It "Gets" Every Corn Surely, Quickly!

A Sure Wrinkle Remover And Other Beauty Secrets

Secrets That Will Save You Years of Time and Many Dollars In Your Quest for Beauty, Told by Valeska Suratt, Famed as the Greatest Self-Made Beauty Actress.

By VALESKA SURATT.

We all more or less lead lives of quiet desperation, and the older we become the more pronounced seems to be our resignation. And particularly is this true with women upon whose faces Time is sketching, in wrinkle characters, an epic of its flight.

More wonderful to these women, than, seems the statement that wrinkles can be eradicated as surely as chalk from a slate. We are all sisters in the skin—skin is skin. That the skin can be made youthful in its vigor and appearance, is no longer a question. It is a fact. The secret lies in the material used, not in the manner of use. Massage alone is of no value. Ordinary creams are of little merit. The following formula, to my mind, is positively revolutionary in its results, yet it is simplicity itself. Mix this formula yourself at home in a few moments and you will have a quantity of surpassing wrinkle remover which would ordinarily cost many dollars if it could be bought in the stores already prepared.

To half a pint of hot water add two ounces of powdered eptol and two tablespoonfuls of glycerine. This forms a cream. When cool, apply regularly every day, generously. The eptol can be obtained at any drug store. This cream removes light and deep wrinkles, lines of worry, habit and age, and makes a difference of years in your appearance.

MISS HOW?—Poor girl! You will be able to comb and brush your hair vigorously without having a single strand come out and your hair will begin to grow out most beautifully again if you will apply every other day, or so, and in liberal quantities, a mixture made of half a pint of alcohol, half a pint of water, and one ounce of betaquinol. Shake thoroughly, and then it will be ready to use. If you prefer, you can use imported bay rum instead of the water and alcohol.

MRS. O. F. L.—Most of the beautiful complexions you have admired have been developed after years of painstaking effort. But such labor is no longer necessary by reason of the use of a formula which I believe is the most wonderful beautifier I have ever known. With a half-pint of hot water mix two tablespoonfuls of glycerine, eral in character, the symptoms or distone. When cool it makes an exquisite, satiny cream and is ready to use. This is exceedingly economical, and you can and must use it generously on face, arms, hands, neck and shoulders every day.

MRS. M. Q. T.—I don't use any face powder but my own, made according to my own formula. Being entirely free from chalkiness and extraordinarily fine and smooth, it gives a tint and velvetiness which appears absolutely natural. You can obtain this face powder now at drug stores, and is called "Valeska Suratt Face Powder."

MRS. NO-FORM—It is a difficult matter, at best, to develop the bust, but there is only one way that deserves a trial, and that is to make a mixture of two ounces of ruetone, half a cup of sugar, and a pint of cold water, and taking of this two teaspoonfuls after meals and at bedtime. This should do it if anything can.

MISS O. N. R.—The best soap in the world can never cleanse the scalp of all scurf, dead skin particles and dandruff as can eggol. This produces a wonderfully rich, creamy lather and is unexcelled as a scalp cleanser. Dissolve a teaspoonful of eggol in half a cup of hot water for your shampoo. Enough eggol can be secured from your druggist at a moderate cost to give over twelve exquisite shampoos.

DISSATISFIED—I do not wonder that you are dissatisfied with the many superfluous hair removers you have used. You will remove such hairs perfectly, and without burn or irritation by using simple sulfo solution, which dissolves the hair instead of burning it off and leaving a red spot. It is very startling in its action. You can get simple sulfo solution, but if your druggist hasn't it then get the sulfo powder, which is every bit as effective, works the same way, and which you simply wet with a little water just before you apply it.

MISS T. O. R.—I regret you were put out because the druggist had no neroxin, but if you will in such cases write, addressing "Valeska Suratt, care of Secretary, Thompson Bldg., Chicago," enclosing fifty cents, you will be supplied by return mail.

LOOKS BAD—You will go on forever using creams to get rid of pimples, and never succeed. What you need is a powerful blood cleanser. There is nothing better than a mixture of twelve ounces of sugar dissolved in a pint of water and one ounce of sarsene, taken in doses of three or four teaspoonfuls three or four times a day. Get the sarsene in the original package, by the ounce, at the drug store. You will get rid of your pimples quickly.

MRS. D. M. L.—It is an astonishing fact that blackheads can be removed in a few minutes by sprinkling some powdered neroxin on a hot-wet sponge and rubbing this on the blackheads. It removes them all, the big and little ones. The neroxin can be obtained at the drug store.—[Advertisement.

"Your Mirror Will Soon Reveal a Wonderful Story of Youthful Appearance Regained."

The Doctor's Advice

by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply in any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice free may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Ellwood Sts., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

Mrs. Belle C. writes: "I am informed that I have kidney trouble and that it is fast approaching a serious stage. What would you prescribe?"

Answer: If your symptoms are the usual ones, such as puffs under the eyes, swelling ankles; scant, copious or foulsmelling urine, accompanied by headaches, pains depression, fever, chills, etc., I would advise the immediate use of balmwort tablets, a very fine remedy for such difficulties, sold in sealed tubes with full directions for self-administration."

James J. asks: "For several months I have not been feeling well. My skin is sallow, my tongue is coated, have headache, am sleepless, nervous and bothered with chronic constipation. Please help me."

Answer: You need a laxative blood cleansing treatment in the form of three-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur.) Overcome the tendency to constipation and gradually your good health and pure blood will return.

"Poor Nerves" writes: "Is it possible to find a medicine which by its tonic or nutritive powers will bring the glow of health and ambition back to a man who has everything in the world but health and happiness? I am dull, forgetful, despondent, weak, trembling, short of breath and suffer more or less with pain in spine and back of head."

Answer: Your condition indicates the need of a strong, harmless tonic nutritive to restore nerve equilibrium, which in turn fortifies and strengthens the organs of nutrition, thus vitalizing the blood and promoting new cells and tissue to take care of the waste forces. Three-grain cadomene tablets, packed in sealed tubes with full directions, are recommended in all such cases.

"D. E. G. writes: "My rheumatism is getting worse all the time. I am getting so stiff that it makes it very hard for me to get around."

Answer: Do not worry about your rheumatism, as that can be very easily controlled by using the following: Get at the drug store the ingredients named, mix thoroughly and take a teaspoonful at meal time and again at bedtime and you should soon be entirely relieved of that disagreeable disease, rheumatism. Purchase 2 drams of iodide of potassium; ½ oz. of wine of colchicum; 4 drams of sodium salicylate; 1 oz. comp. fluid balmwort; 1 oz. comp. essence cardiol, and 5 ozs. of syrup sarsaparilla. This has satisfied thousands and I am sure it will you.

M. R. writes: "I have suffered with dyspepsia, or nervous indigestion more or less for 8 years, and I want you to prescribe treatment for me; my symptoms are the usual ones, such as pain and distress after eating, sour stomach, headache, heart-burn, and pain in regions of heart, or between shoulders, constipation, or sometimes diarrhea, coated tongue, bad breath and a score more. Am miserable, in a word."

Answer: Your case is chronic, but by careful diet and the regular use of an aid and tonic you should soon recover a normal state. Obtain a packet of "double-four stomach and bowel medicine" of a druggist. With it are directions. This is the newest and best treatment I know of.

C. J. R. asks: "Can I safely reduce my weight and how?"

Answer: Go to a well-stocked druggist and get five-grain arbolone tablets in sealed tube with complete directions. Take as directed and you should soon feel the relief you desire. Many of my patients report quick results without any harmful action whatever.

Ellen J. asks: "Tell me, please, how I can increase my weight and improve my color. I seem to be aenemic, weak and tired all the time."

Answer: Begin taking three-grain hyponuclane tablets with your meals and soon you will feel strength returning and gradually your weight and color will improve. This is a most effective remedy if persistently used.

J. W. W. asks: "Can you prescribe a reliable treatment to get rid of dandruff, itching and feverish scalp."

Answer: I know you can get instant relief and permanent results by using plain yellow minyol as per directions which accompany each 4-oz. jar.

"Morris" asks: "I have suffered with a chronic cough for almost a year, and catch a fresh cold every few weeks. Nothing the doctor gives me helps, so I write to you."

Answer: You need a thorough laxative cough syrup, one that not only relieves but surely drives it from the system. The following regularly used will oust any curable cough or cold promptly: Obtain a 2½ oz. bottle of essence mentho-laxene, mix it with a home-made sugar syrup or honey as per directions on bottle.

Miss "Stranger" asks: "I am in a weakened condition due to a long siege of catarrhal trouble. Briefly, I have Pelvic Catarrh (leucorrhea) and catarrh of the nose and throat. What local treatment is good for a cure?"

Answer: I am quite sure that antiseptic Vilane Powder is the most prompt and effective treatment that one can possibly use. Full directions accompany either a two or eight ounce package. Do not neglect of catarrhal trouble.—[Advertisement.

Entering the Home Stretch

Dawn of Final Week in Times Automobile Circulation Campaig Excites Feverish Intensity Among Candidates

New Vote Schedule Goes Into Effect Tomorrow and Continues Until Close of Contest on April 10th Liberal Additions Allow Heavy Gains on Votes That Will Win Automobiles

With every contestant lining up her forces and preparing for the final dash to the wire, the greatest newspaper campaign that has ever held the attention of Southern California—the "Times Automobile Circulation Campaign"—has developed into a matter of only one short week. All over the Southland this campaign is assuming its logical place as the affair of importance, and in several communities the entire population has taken it upon themselves to see that their favorite candidate will fight valiantly through to victory.

This stage of affairs bespeaks success for many, and it is certain that the prizes will be won by only a small margin, and the race for them will be one of the closest ever witnessed.

As no one candidate can be certain of victory, there is abundant speculation as to the final outcome. This last week will decide. It is only those whose rise to the occasion, and maintain a stiff upper lip, brushing aside every obstacle that may arise, that have the best chances of securing one of the valuable prizes. It seems to be unanimous, this perseverance that is characteristic of candidates, and the next six days will undoubtedly witness the most spirited battle that has ever taken place in this section.

Beginning tomorrow, a new vote schedule goes into effect. This schedule supersedes the schedule that has been used in the past, and the latter is henceforth null and void. Candidates should paste the new schedule, appearing on this page, in their receipt book, in order that they can readily determine the exact number of votes given on each subscription.

This increase in votes is positively the last special offer of the campaign, and will continue in effect until the final day of the campaign, Saturday, April 10.

Subscriptions that are secured in the next few days will win for candidates a substantial number of votes that will mean much in deciding their chances for victory. Six days is a remarkably short time in which to work, and efforts expended now will count for much—much more than candidates may realize. To get into the field and gather every possible subscription before Saturday, may, with the new liberal schedule votes, be the means of winning one of the twelve automobiles that are getting closer every hour.

Of course, every candidate realizes that it is necessary to get votes in order to win, and WIN is what they all want to do, without a doubt. Also, there is not much use of advising anybody against the practice of holding out votes and attempting to deceive competitors by a show of indifference. The standings shown today will not be changed again until the final count has been made by the judges and the winners are announced. Hence all reserve votes may now be deposited in the ballot box, as they will not be counted or published until after the close. The standings today will appear again this week without change, of course, and candidates who discover any errors in their vote totals should notify the Campaign Office at once, in order that corrections can be made.

During these few short days that remain it is essential that every contestant who expects to be a winner—and everyone wants to be a member of that class—gets out and puts forth her utmost effort in securing subscriptions. It is best to rake over all the territory as though with a fine tooth comb to make sure that nothing in the way of subscriptions has escaped.

The special 100,000 extra vote offer, which came to a close last night, brought in a veritable cyclone of subscriptions. The Campaign Office was busy until a late hour receiving callers and opening the heavy mails that arrived. The results obtained in outside districts will be materially swelled when the mail reaches this office that was sent by candidates at the last hour.

In view of the energetic manner in which candidates availed themselves of the offer just closed, it behooves every candidate to put fresh vitality in her work now, as this last offer enables her to make gains that will prove valuable. The home stretch of the campaign is at hand; now is the time that real, earnest activity must be displayed. The honors that are but a week off are proving a strong incentive to the young women who form the list of candidates, and, with the determination being shown by every one of them, an exceedingly warm finish is predicted.

The race is too close to bank upon any possibilities, and there are too many people interested in each candidate to insure any one else an easy victory. Over-confidence loses one a battle. Relaxation at this stage of the campaign is suicidal to success. Determination to win, in connection with the relentless activity in vote-getting, will make a contestant a winner. The wise candidate proceeds to get every vote she can and does not falter at obstacles. There is not time to hesitate. What is intended to be done, must be done NOW. To temporize is to let some other candidate sweep ahead and claim the prize.

Forty-four young women are going to be made happy—happy as they never were before. Automobiles have long been the most cherished desire of many, and now the opportunity confronts them of having one for nothing in return, except a little hustling. The splendid cars that The Times has selected as prizes comprise the names of the best known cars in the United States. And to win one of them is to secure a possession that might otherwise take years to acquire. The exposition tours are also an attractive means of viewing the greatest world's fairs that have ever been held. The candidates who win The Times' exposition tours will spend a week of unalloyed pleasure, indulging in a great variety of carefree amusement—all at the expense of The Times.

Once again let it be said that now is the time of all times. The date of the close of this campaign—Saturday, April 10th—looms big in the horizon, and every tick of the clock brings it nearer. Read again the new vote schedule which goes into effect tomorrow, and see how readily big advances can be made.

DRAMAS AND POETRY.

CALE YOUNG RICE.

Y THE risk of being trite we must say, because we feel it, that Cale Young Rice has written no poor verse — he has written some better than other. As Gilbert Murray, the foremost classicist of England, puts it, Mr. Rice ever "returns true to the central drift of great poetry."

Anyone already familiar with "When the Wind is Low" (a love tribute of exquisite tenderness,) with "Limitations," "The Barren Woman," with "Cloister" and with "The Mystic," does not need to be told that these are up with the very best. And as for dramas—we put this first: His plays, in dramatic and poetic quality, are not equalled by any American. We will not admit that the statement is arguable—no more so than the affirmation that James Huneker is peerless among American essayists—for it is something more than an opinion at which we have arrived; it is a conviction.

His lyrics are verbal music; but the inimitable feature of his poetry, as we see it, is the dramatic touch of which "Cloister" gives instance. In one of these, Fra Gian tells in prayer how he scraped off the profane classics from rich vellum so the parchment might be used for writing the lives of saints. But as he scraped, he was tempted, and peeped at the faded text of Virgil telling of nymphs and that night dreamed he was "a faun in a Bacchic rout."

More dramatic, and more deep in is the other lay which gives Sister 's prayer beseeching the Virgin that she need not have to look upon the Holy with the child at her breast. The prayer concludes:

"Let me be less within thy sight
Than Heaven's lowest heir,
But place me not where I must brood
On the lost bliss of motherhood—thy image there!"

Of the poetic dramas, "A Night in Avignon"—enthusiastically dolorous—is perhaps the best. All of them are strong, held by a theme which usually casts a shadow, but all are sustained with grace. Especially "Porzia," and "Giorgione" are warm with strength and full of contrasts. The admirable characteristic through it through the lyrics as well, is the under of life—the Browning quality.

When those who are loyal to the poetic cherished almost through the history of our language, and who feel a response to what by a long of discriminative selection has established as superior poetry—when we say, contemplate the anemia the Whitmanic variations conceits of contemporaries, disdain, but enthusiastically acclaim that Mr. Rice has the grasp and imagery and pulsating sym in wondering admiration, are genius.

OF THE NORTHLAND.

VOYAGEUR. By Lily A. Long. Holt & Co., New York.

"R the Voyageur" is founded manuscript records of two French trappers and traders who, so the prefatory note says, first pierced the wilderness beyond Lake Superior some two hundred years ago and have been overlooked by the historians. These men were Pierre Radisson and his brother-in-law, the Sieur des Groseilliers.

The drama is in verse, and the verse is better than the structure of the drama, worked out on the story of an Indian maiden's love for the flirtatious Radisson and the jealousy of an Indian chief. As a play it is almost wholly lacking in , but as a poem it has charm.

Radisson is a particularly attractive character, youth, and brave. When caught in the forest and weak from cold, he comes face to face with the chief who pronounces the death sentence. Radisson, to allow his enemy the satisfaction of seeing him afraid, chants:

"the happy chance befall
with back against the wall,
it as a crowning grace should choose no meaner place."

It is largely an Indian play—only the two white men appear—and the tribal ceremonies and rituals have a prominent part. Full descriptions of the Indian life are given and notes offer directions for costuming and mounting the play by amateurs.

BOOKS OF FICTION.

ROBERT W. CHAMBERS ON WAR.

WHO GOES THERE! By Robert W. Chambers. D. Appleton & Co., New York.

MR. CHAMBERS writes fiction much as the Germans make war. The Prussians—so the English say—do anything ; Mr. Chambers—so the intellectuals say—does anything to get the reader's attention; he maltreates the realities, massacres probabilities and crucifies coincidences.

Is the hero in danger of being shot by a German general? Said hero calls the general a "shrimp," insolently declares himself a Belgian with the intention of joining the Belgian army as soon as he can get there, and hasn't even enough to make him polite.

Is the hero likely to be inconvenienced by the presence of a British man-of-war? Then a machina considerately blows said out of the water for presuming to interfere with the destiny of said hero.

When the German general consents to spare the life of Kervyn Guild, it is with the understanding that Guild will go to London and aid the alleged daughter of the to escape. If Guild fails he is to return and be shot. If he succeeds, he is to be given his liberty.

Being a hero and not a normal man—it never occurs to Guild not to keep his obligation, and even in the most desperate situation we find him reaffirming that he will, if unsuccessful, return and be shot.

With his sympathies favoring the allies and his love going out to a German maiden, some difficulty in maintaining his mind. However, he takes war secrets from the maiden, deciphers them "a la Sherlock Holmes," and sends off information where he thinks it will do the most to the Germans.

In the course of his adventures, he witnesses a massacre of game followed by a massacre of men, fights a duel with the general, and wins his way into Belgium—but he goes not alone.

"Who Goes There!" is truly a Robert W. Chambers story; better than some, but not the equal of "Lorraine"—a former novel by him telling of war between France and Germany.

PHILIPPINE ROMANCE.

GUIMO. By Walter Elwood. Reilly & Britton Company, Chicago.

THE PUBLISHERS announce that it is said "'Guimo' . . . is too good to become popular." Perhaps that's only a canny, inverted method of advertising; though it is the consolation that every disappointed author (and, perhaps, publisher) takes unto himself—a mantra conjuring self-confidence out of failure.

Only the descendant of a Delphian priestess can hope to tell when Fame will blow her trumpet for this book or that—and even hope is deceitful. But there doesn't seem to be any reason why "Guimo" should not be popular with many readers, providing they do not know the more unpleasant features of the Philippines. Memories of the "dinky" fever, of the filthy streets, of the leper attendants in fish markets, unfit one for the enjoyment of a story which recites with something of poetical romance the life of a Filipino miscegenate.

We have scanty sympathy with Mr. Elwood's idealization of the Filipinos; but he has done it well, artistically. The first chapter is especially delicate and expressive. Guimo's love for Angela has romantic finish and is enjoyable if one does not question the likelihood of a Spanish landlord's opposition to a half-caste's love for his daughter.

Guimo, having — in the "conventional sense"— no father and losing his mother through a Moro raid, joins brigands, and in the course of an escape wounds a soldier, who later pursues him malignantly. The joy of life is beaten from Guimo, when after an undeserved imprisonment, his search for Angela brings an unwelcome discovery. Later he joins the insurrectos, but regards the Americans as his own people, and by a justifiable treachery to the natives, wins a welcome with the Yankee boys.

The whole of the book is overcast with a romantic sorrow, a poetical melancholy. Guimo is a well-drawn, consistent character; and the more pleasant, but least noticeable, side of Filipono life is given with excellent description.

A TOMLINSON NOVEL.

CONTRARY MARY. By Temple Bailey. The Penn Publishing Co., Philadelphia.

"CONTRARY MARY" falls into the Tomlinson class of books. Tomlinson, so Kipling recorded, was neither good enough to get into heaven, nor sufficiently otherwise to get into that place where all Englishmen are sure the Kaiser is going.

The title is more euphonious than descriptive, for having made the acquaintance of Mary she doesn't seem so very contrary to us, although we can understand why Porter, the wealthy, red-headed young man who wants to marry her might think so.

The story is not wholly without color, but we cannot imagine anyone being decidedly pleased with himself for having read it, though young ladies given to dreaming may find something in it that we have missed.

Mary, being the daughter of an extremely respectable family, arbitrarily rents a room in the house so the rent-money will, with what she has, pay the running expenses. As to be expected, the new roomer is an attractive young man. Mary is an attractive young maiden. Roger, the roomer, is not wealthy. Porter, who has also discovered Mary's charms, is wealthy. Guess who wins her?

A minor theme that gets almost as much attention as the major, concerns itself with the love of Mary's brother for the maiden of his choice. The story is saturated with love. In fact, the book, almost at the beginning presents the wedding of Mary's sister.

It is not a frothy story; it is not heavy. Letters are exchanged between Roger and Mary which strike a poetical-philosophical note—give a sort of "beauty" and "sweetness" to the story that is undoubtedly pleasing to many people, if we may judge by the sale some such books have had.

MANY MAIDS AND A MAN.

A RELUCTANT ADAM. By Sidney Williams. Houghton Mifflin Company, Boston.

WE FANCY that Mr. Williams has heeded the advice of Macauley and given over his nights and days to the study of Addison, or whoever happens to be his favorite author. There is literary finish in "A Reluctant Adam"—a flawless, cold, angular style possessed of a conscious excellence—as though challencing a captious scrutinizer—cultivated at the sacrifice of spontaneity.

The repartee, however, is terse, bright, and more of it would be welcome. A few of the passages, somewhat deliberately unusual, strongly incline us toward the opinion that Mr. Williams was much more concerned with his phrasing than with his plot. Which is the more important depends wholly upon what the author tries to do; but in the case of "A Reluctant Adam" there is a sense of incompleteness about the theme and of over-completeness about the style.

Strong is loved by many women before a spark of affection is struck from his heart. One affectionate woman after another draws his attention—even his caresses—and leaves him cold. The book reaches its artistic culmination in the episode—or you may prefer a more serious term for it—with Mrs. Ormsby. But the book should not reach its culmination there, for subsequently Strong himself learns something of what love, unattainable love, means.

And this situation, casting the shadow of contrast back through the novel, is slighted, is quickly, almost impatiently, disposed of. True, there is a sentence or two, scarcely more, relative to the awakened sympathy for his unloved wife, who—and he is considerately thankful for it—never learns of his attitude.

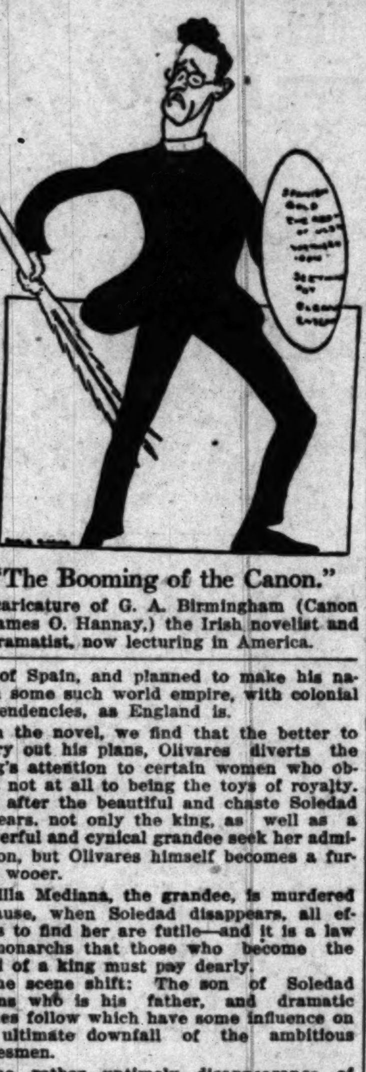
There is a cumulative strength to the story until the end is in sight, although we never feel that any of the women are really intense in their love, and question whether the author meant to picture (except with Mrs. Ormsby) more than the love some women have for love itself.

"CASTLES IN SPAIN."

A DEALER IN EMPIRE. By Amelia Josephine Burr. Harper & Bros., New York.

A SERIES of dramatic situations rather than a sustained development of plot carries the action through "A Dealer in Empire." Nothing else may well be expected when a long historical period is compressed between the covers of a normally-sized novel.

Gaspar de Guzman, Count of Olivares, was the power behind the throne of Philip IV of Spain, and planned to make his nation some such world empire, with colonial dependencies, as England is.



"The Booming of the Canon."

A caricature of G. A. Birmingham (Canon James O. Hannay,) the Irish novelist and dramatist, now lecturing in America.

In the novel, we find that the better to carry out his plans, Olivares diverts the king's attention to certain women who object not at all to being the toys of royalty. But after the beautiful and chaste Soledad appears, not only the king, as well as a powerful and cynical grandee seek her admiration, but Olivares himself becomes a furtive wooer.

Villa Mediana, the grandee, is murdered because, when Soledad disappears, all efforts to find her are futile—and it is a law of monarchs that those who become the rival of a king must pay dearly.

The scene shift: The son of Soledad learns who is his father, and dramatic scenes follow which have some influence on the ultimate downfall of the ambitious statesmen.

The rather untimely disappearance of Villa Mediana from the story does not add to the interest. He is a remarkably attractive character, courageously insolent and honorable. Quevedo, the dramatist, whose satirical verse stings the king to action that brings imprisonment to the poet as well as humiliation to Olivares, is also of interest though of minor importance. And Panchito, the dwarf brooding ever in the background like an animated gargoyle, is of picturesque rather than dynamic value to the plot though he plans his revenge for more than twenty years.

"A Dealer in Empire" is dramatic but in no sense "exciting;" there are chapters of exceptional force and vividness, there is perfect sequence of plot, but—especially in the second and third parts—the story is somewhat hurried and hasty for the big theme that it carries forward.

ANOTHER WAR NOVEL.

LITTLE COMRADE. By Burton E. Stevenson. Henry Holt & Co., New York.

WE HAVE an antipathy for war novels—European war novels. But it is really an antipathy against the defects opportunism presupposes. In "Little Comrade" there is no trace of haste, but a bit of infringement in the way of descriptive writing on the war corespondent's prerogatives. Outside of that there is a well-joined plot which charms the attention and calms our antipathy.

Dr. Stewart, an American doctor, finds himself caught on a wheel of action that knocks aside all plans of easily crossing the German frontier and escaping the war zone. While he speculates on two dainty slippers that have mysteriously appeared in his suit case, a woman—whom he has never seen or heard of—rushes into the room, throws her arms about his neck and showers him with kisses and demonstrative tenderness. He forgives her—she is so beautiful.

Then follows a strange and hazardous proposal in which the doctor is invited to risk his neck and be offered nothing but a winsome woman's thanks in return. He, of course, being an American and the hero, does not hesitate—we have said she is beautiful. Why, we actually envy him the meager chance he has of escaping the spike-helmeted firing squad.

When severely quizzed by the alert German official as to how the lovely young woman—who, it is strange to say, doesn't seem able to understand a word of German—came to meet him at the hotel, Stewart grabs for an answer in much the same way as the proverbial drowning man grabs for the proverbial straw. That is the most intense moment in the story—the reader's heart is likely to skip a beat or two—but needless to say, for "Little Comrade" isn't a tragedy, both the doctor and the woman eventually escape. They have a difficult time of it and—is it unsympathetic of us?—we get pleasure out of their difficulties.

It is a well-written story of adventure with a rather unusually strong atmosphere of reality for the kind of a story it is; but we are inclined to regret—though the ending he has is more dramatic — that Mr. Stevenson did not see fit to bring in at the end some such scene as that which took place just after the doctor found the dainty slippers and stockings.

COWBOYS AS NESTERS.

THE FLYING U'S LAST STAND. By B. M. Bower. Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

IT MUST be about as hard for the authors of frontier fiction to try and get romance out of plow boys and Yankee nesters as for cowboys to discard rope and quirt and take to the pitchfork. "B. M. Bower" has long written of the West, the old West with its reckless cowmen and charming daughters; and now the persistent pressure of an unromantic agrarian development has forced her reluctantly to a compromise. Her cowboys turn squatters. By an illegal, but unprovable, collusion, they seek to take up "homesteads" so the old range will remain free for the diminished herds of the Flying U.

But Pinky, and Irish, Andy Green and Big Medicine and other members of the Happy Family carry their old-time charm to their claims. It all comes about when a young lady land agent, unduly impressed by the deceptive, confidence-inviting eyes of Andy Green, confides in him her scheme for colonizing the Flying U range. Andy rounds up the boys of the Happy Family, herds them into the land office, so they are able to take up the choicest tracts for themselves. To deceive a paternal government, the cowboys awkwardly pretend to act in good faith by trying to coax a few vegetables out of the ground.

But the lady land agent is no "quitter." She brings her nesters who jump claims with an avidity that indicates a determination to stick. All of which might be very well were it not for the Happy Family's determination to keep the claims clear.

The six-year-old Buck, son of the Lady Doctor and Chip, almost crowds Andy out of first place in the story. Buck is determined to be a "real cowpuncher," and in the course of his adventures chances to become a very important figure in the plot.

"The Flying U's Last Stand" is lively and amusing and gives an enjoyable picture of the last conflict between the veterans of the old range and the new farmers—new farmers with books on cow culture and agricultural weeklies.

STORIES OF LAWYERS.

THE FINAL VERDICT. By Sidney L. Nyburg. J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia.

A YOUNG lawyer who takes a prominent part in one of the stories of "The Final Verdict" reflects that "to be a half-way successful lawyer, a man must be an author, orator, father confessor, business man and expert accountant all rolled into one body."

In some one or other of the above-mentioned roles we find the lawyers appearing in the six stories of this volume and conducting an adventure or episode that makes interesting reading. A little brevity—incongruous as it may be where lawyers are concerned—would materially add to the merit of every story in the book, but nevertheless they are unique and readable.

In one instance we have a brilliant, sincere and aggressive young lawyer fighting hard to clear the reputation of a fair client whom he almost loves. He succeeds—and is disappointed. But we know he is a very young and inexperienced lawyer; yes, very, very inexperienced, for he believes all that the beautiful young divorcee tells him.

In another instance we have a wise old lawyer face to face with a rather determined blackmailer who suddenly rejuvenates her affection for a young man engaged to an heiress. The wise old lawyer considers that this love affair may be fought out without too great a regard for ethics. The result is disastrous for the unscrupulous young woman.

"With All Her Worldly Goods" recites the remarkable confession of a man who married a woman for her money—then learned to love her and was urged by a belated manly impulse to "make good."

Mr. Nyburg has the story-teller's touch; but as was said before, he doesn't make sufficient use of brevity. Long after he discloses the conclusion of the story, he keeps on talking and brings in nothing new, which is—as the correspondence school instructors say—a technical fault.

WAR AND HISTORY.

OUR NATIONAL DANGER.

THE AMERICAN ARMY. By William Harding Carter. Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis. OUR NAVY AND THE NEXT WAR. By Robert W. Neeser. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

OUR MILITARISTS are earnestly trying hard to engage the attention of the United States and direct it to the flaws and deficiencies in our army and navy. They point out that the tragic school of war in Europe presents many lessons which we may profitably learn; that our smug sense of security is unfounded, except on conceit; and unwarranted, except by indifference to whether we retain our national liberties or have the authority of a foreign power imposed upon us.

Maj.-Gen. Carter is one of the foremost military men of this country. In his book there is not one sensational phrase, not an echo of jingoism or militarism. With the dispassionate calmness of a technician, he analyzes striking defects in our military service and advances suggestions for their remedy.

Mr. Neeser, author of "Our Navy and the Next War," is a young student of naval warfare with many solid books on the subject to his credit. He, also, is analytical and dispassionate.

Both of these authors fasten the attention of readers on the tremendous expense and lack of efficiency that has come to our government through reliance placed in volunteer troops—which, while brave, are weak, sickly, inefficient and expensive.

Maj.-Gen. Carter shows with logic that cannot well be answered that the National Guard should be under direct control of the War Department, instead of under the control of the various States. He points out that the United States will require at least 5,000,000 trained men for the first line in case of war with a first-class power. We have, National Guard and all, just 91,000.

Mr. Nesser emphasizes the fact that our navy is undermanned — a condition that is known to everybody (except Congressmen) who knows anything about the navy. With careful tabulations, he shows that—unless our naval programme changes—we will soon have a navy far inferior to any one of our possible enemies.

Both books set forth that we lack organization; that political changes and the eccentricities of Congress incapacitate the heads of the army and navy from creating permanent benefits. The opinion of each is apparent, but not intrusive, that the United States will meet with disaster in her next war—unless wise alterations and increases are allowed both the army and navy.

IDEALS OF ENGLAND.

ORIGINS AND DESTINY OF IMPERIAL BRITAIN. By J. A. Cramb. E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.

AMERICANS may find something to contemplate in this: "The United States as a nation bears the same relation to Britain as the Moorish kingdom in Spain bore to the Saracenic empire of Bagdad. It is a fragment, a colossal fragment torn from the central mass."

Thus does the late Prof. Cramb designate the relative values of the United States and Imperial Britain. Prof. Cramb, it may be said, has about the same place of importance in England as Treitschke in Germany; and while the Englishman employs less fervid adjectivism, the ultimate contention, nevertheless, is that Britain is the transcendent nation of the earth.

He does not believe that Britain will run the course of empire as history records of Greece, Rome and the Saracens because of the new, Colonial blood which vitalizes the nation. Britain, he insists, is "laying the foundations of states unborn, civilizations undreamed till now."

However, with modest expression which loses nothing of its dogmaticism, he concludes a rather lengthy argument with the flat assertion that "Britain may justly claim to represent humanity."

The chief interest in the volume is attached to those historical comparisons and anomalies through which Prof. Cramb endeavors to establish that Britain will more permanently endure the shock of time than have the empires of the past. His arguments are strangely Teutonic in their theoretical thoroughness; but he shows no more than any dextrous historian may show of any modern world power in the effort to establish that his country is deservedly preeminent and destined to flourish through a long future.

The book is made up of lectures delivered by Prof. Cramb some years ago, and one of the noticeable features of his attitude—in marked contrast to German historians—is the emphasis laid on the maintenance of Britain's prestige through peaceful, political developments rather than by arbitrary conquest.

"PIPE DREAM."

AN EMPEROR IN THE DOCK. By W. de Veer. John Lane Company, New York.

MR. DE VEER is a Hollander with British sympathies and romancing as a profession. He has out-Heroded all day-dreaming Herods, set Munchausen fretfully weeping in a corner, climbed higher into the realms of the imagination than ever did the redoubtable Jack on the bean stalk, and turned loose a bit of fiction which has nothing but the questionable merit of audacity—or impudence—to recommend it.

Mr. De Veer, deeply incensed by the Prussian victories and the manner of winning them, captures Kaiser William, tucks him safely away on a Dutch yacht and allows two scrupulously honorable Englishmen and one cynical and exceptionally (to be in a foreign novel) heroic American to badger the great War Lord with such questions and denunciations as English propagandists are busily shaking out of their fountain pens.

The Kaiser is blown up by one of his own mines and rescued by the yacht. We find him a good deal of a prig, snob, etc. He raves about "divine rights," scolds the American, execrates the Englishmen; but these magnificent and magnanimous characters are graciously tolerant but firm, and perfect gentlemen throughout.

Because the captain will not at once take him toward the German fleet, the Kaiser commits the heinous offense of trying to get command of the ship. For this mutiny the captain, the Englishman and the American constitute themselves as a board of judges and hale the War Lord before them for trial. He is severely lectured and reprimanded, but at last is released and sent on his way. The Englishman, American and Dutchman—though frankly pro-ally in their sympathies—are too honorable to keep the Kaiser prisoner.

The book has some value as a curiosity.

GLIMPSES OF BOOKS.

"The White Man's Burden" (The Gorham Press) by T. Shirley Hodge is a political satire showing the utopian anarchism of the negro race some thousands of years from now, and telling how and why the white races have been superseded.

"The Spiritual Body in Relation to the Divine Law of Life" (Richard G. Badger) by George H. Peeke is a theological volume; the dominant premise from which arguments advance is: "Every grave of nature has been a cradle, rocking new forms of physical life into being and preparing the world for the habitation of man."

"American Chambers of Commerce" (Moffatt, Yard & Co.,) by Kenneth Sturges, M.A., preface by Dr. H. A. Garfield, tells something of the modern functions and accomplishments of chambers of commerce, boards of trade and commercial clubs. Those of the Pacific Coast, however, are practically ignored.

"Cured!" (John C. Winston Company) by Brian Boru Dunne, foreword by H. G. Wells, recites in a decidely humorous vein the adventures of a dyspeptic among friends and physicians—and the inexpensive cure at last discovered.

"The Treasure Finders" (Duffield & Co.) by Oliver Clay furnishes historical sketches of the early explorers who, seeking treasures, came to the New World. It is interesting, especially so for younger readers.

"Uncle Sam's Modern Miracles" (Frederick A. Stokes Company) by William Atherton DuPuy reviews the more recent exploits of our government, and makes them read like interesting fiction. "Preparing for Possible Wars," "Capturing Blackhanders," "Helping the Farmer's Wife," "Producing Census Facts" are among the more unusual chapters of which there are twenty.

"Keeping Fit" (Thomas Y. Crowell Company) by Orison Swett Marden—the literary descendant of Dr Samuel Smiles—tells what to eat, how food affects character and some of the various ways of improving efficiency.

"Jesus and Politics" (E. P. Dutton & Co.) by Harold B. Shepheard (introduction by Vida D. Scudder) predicates a political system founded on the sayings of Jesus.

"Practical Mysticism" (E. P. Dutton & Co.) by Evelyn Underhill lays emphasis on the trend of thought that is indubitable toward mysticism, and without vagueness attempts to reveal its appeal.

"Automatic Pistol Shooting" (G. P. Putnam's Sons) by Walter Winans—one of the foremost authorities on the pistol—tells of the care, handling and quality of automatics.

"BUSINESS OF ADVERTISING."

"The Business of Advertising," by Earnest Elmo Calkins (D. Appleton & Co.) is designed to show what advertising is and how it is done; and aims to show briefly the work of those advertisers who are known to everybody that reads magazines or looks at bill boards. The publishers say that no one book on advertising could possibly be complete, but this volume is intended to set down the fundamentals of the practice of advertising. It is a book of size, well illustrated, and may be classed as one of the most important of a series that the publishers are issuing.

"PRESCRIPTIONS."

"Prescriptions" (Houghton Mifflin Company) is a collection of extracts arranged by Edith Motter Lamb from "What Men Live By," a book of poetic commonsense by R. C. Cabot, M.D. "Prescriptions" is really a small volume of healthy aphorisms and observations on life—original without being freakish and interesting without being spectacular.

BOOKS FOR BOYS.

Four books of especial interest to boys from the press of D. Appleton & Co. are "Captain Danny," a story of baseball in a preparatory school, by Walter Camp—one of the best known authorities on field sports; "The Scouts of Stonewall," by Joseph A. Altsheler, narrates the fortunes of a southern boy who is assigned to duty as an aid on the staff of Stonewall Jackson; "Off Side," by William Heyliger, is the story of a boy who goes into business; and "Johnson of Lansing," by Hawley Williams, tells of a boy who enters school very much disliked because his father who has considerable influence has barred some of the best ball players from the team.

Edwin L. Sabin of San Diego has furnished two lively, adventurers' stories for the boys this fall. One, "Buffalo Bill and the Overland Trail" (J. B. Lippincott Company,) may readily interest older readers, but it is sure to be absorbed by boys; the other, "Scarface Ranch, or the Young Homesteaders" (Thomas Y. Crowell Company) tells of ranch life in the early days.

George Barton has also written two books, the first of a series for boys—"The Bell Haven Nine" and "The Bell Haven Eight" (The John C. Winston Company.) Mr. Barton has written several boys' books, and in these two tells of the adventures, sports and frolics of school life.

The latest of "The Big League Series" is "Lefty of the Bush," by Burt L. Standish (Barse & Hopkins,) and while it is especially designed for boys is sufficiently interesting to hold the attention of almost any baseball "fan."

"The Boy Fighters in Mexico," by Worthington Green (Houghton Mifflin Company) is a story of experience in the bandit-ridden country south of the Rio Grande; "Scouting With Daniel Boone," by Everett T. Tomlinson (Doubleday, Page & Co.) has a title that explains itself and readily grabs a boy's interest.

"Lost in the Fur Country," by D. Lange (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Company) is a thrilling story of experiences in the Northwest where boys have many novel adventures and show all manner of pluck.

"GENETIC THEORY OF REALITY."

In the "Genetic Theory of Reality," by James Mark Baldwin, Ph.D., D.Sc., LL.D. (G. P. Putnam's Sons) the author states the general results of the extended studies in genetic and social science and anthropology made by him and others in recent years. According to the publishers, it completes the treatment of genetic logic as presented in the three volumes of his work, "Thought and Things," giving a critical account of the history of the interpretation of nature and man, both racial and philosophical.

Mr. Baldwin is recognized as a philospher of authority; his works rank high and he stands among the foremost thinkers in England today.

"DESTINY'S DAUGHTER."

"Destiny's Daughter," a novel by Alice Brikhead (John Lane Company) tells of the experiences of a girl of sterling character who makes her own way in the world. Gabrielle is a lovable girl, though a certain amount of luck has as much to do with her ultimate success as work. Her experiences at home are not pleasant, and after becoming the secretary of an important man she finds herself loved by another woman's husband. Later she makes a "hit" on the stage, but retains a loyalty, which seems to have nothing of affection in it, for the derelict husband who is wholly unworthy of it.

"RHYMES OF LITTLE FOLK."

Burges Johnson is well up in the first rank of the claimants for the Laureate of childhood, and "Rhymes of Little Folk" (G. P. Putnam's Sons,) is among the best of his juvenile verse. His rhythm is charming, and his interpretation of the child's thoughts—child psychology, if you like—shows that he understands well the little folk of the home and street and playground.

"THE BOOK OF TRUTH."

We have no great respect for Henry S. Grigg's "The Book of Truth" (Henry S. Griggs Company, Brooklyn,) though it is courteously iconoclastic and a volume of the pronounced "free-thinking" type. It is hardly conceivable to us that in this day it is necessary to solemnly disavow such things as Ingersoll repudiated, but, incidentally, Ingersoll did not repudiate, all that has been credited to him by some who formed their opinions without evidence.

AMERICAN GIRLS, STOP, LOOK, LISTEN.

There May be a Chance for You After the War to Become the Wives of Some of the Princes of "Merrie England."

BY DOROTHY M'KEE.

LONDON (Eng.) March 17.—Irresponsible gossip recently has been busy with a statement made, I believe, by H. G. Wells, in an article on reforms that are to come to England after the war. I hope I am not wrongly ascribing it to Wells because it may get him in trouble in high places.

In speaking of the royal family, the writer of this particular article, whoever he may be, declared that the ruling family of Great Britain must be freed from its German ties and must become democratized. It was the particular means suggested for this proposed democratization that have tickled the gossips and invited discussion. It was actually proposed that King George should ally his family with pure democracy by marriage with Americans.

So unusual is the alliance in marriage of a member of the British ruling house and even the highest British aristocracy that one expected to hear Britishers, one and all, gasp with astonishment and ill-concealed horror. But these times are so abnormal that many have taken the proposal as more or less serious, so intense is the reaction against the whole brood of German royalty on the Continent, and have fallen to discussing it.

It is pointed out that the proposition really has many advantages to both the individuals who may be concerned and the countries. It would, it is believed, more closely knit the ties that now bind all too loosely and in some future crisis make this country more sure of American support—a possibility that may or may not be considered desirable according to one's sympathies. At any rate, it would be an unadulterated blessing for England. In fact, most Britishers with whom I have jokingly discussed the question seem to regard it as a mighty good scheme developing out into what might be justly deemed a recapture of the American colonies.

Of course it stands to reason that any American girl who gets a royal title would have to have unlimited wealth. For one thing, it has become a recognized condition of international marriages. No Englishman of title ever married any American girl who did not have several millions to restore the fortunes of his line. How much more necessary in the case of a real royal prince. Besides, it is a case of necessity. All British royalty outside of the king and Prince of Wales are comparatively poor and no self-respecting American girl, used to the luxury of ordinary American urban existence, would come down to life in ramshackle St. James's Palace or Clarence House or Marlborough House unless she could bring enough money at least to put in the decorators.

WHY WOOL IS WARM.

It Keeps the Heat in the Body by Keeping a Layer of Still Air Around the Skin.

[Manchester Guardian:] The working of woolen garments for British soldiers in the cold weather is a useful thing to do, but there is no harm in saying that wool alone never kept any one warm on deck on a chilly night. Most of us know that, whatever the thermometer may say, it is always colder at sea than on land. The explanation is the all-pervading moisture of the atmosphere over the sea. A water bath is colder than an air bath at the same temperature. Water is a better conductor of heat than air, and the dampness of the air at sea forms a conduit, drawing the heat mercilessly from the body. To be warm on deck you must have clothing that is vapor-proof, and for that reason a suit of oilskins or good mackintosh goes further in keeping you warm than any amount of woolen underclothing. According to our landwise notions, it is a bad thing to wear vapor-proof clothing, like oilskins or mackintosh, because it prevents the ventilation of the skin. The idea is sound as far as it goes, but at sea one soon learns that warmth is more necessary to life than ventilation. All this is nothing against the usefulness of wool in its place. An inner skin of good woolens is a powerful reinforcement of the outer skin of good oilskins, but it is the outer skin that matters most.

There is another reason why wool alone will not keep anybody warm on deck, and that is the force of the wind at sea. Woolen clothing keeps the heat in the body (or, as we commonly put it less accurately, keeps the cold out,) chiefly by holding a layer of still air around the skin. It is not the wool so much as the air it holds that acts as an insulator to keep in the heat. The warmth of an eiderdown quilt, for instance, is due to the fact that it holds a particularly deep layer of air. But the layer of air must be still. If the wind can penetrate the air-holding clothing and can get the contained air moving, the clothing ceases to perform its function and the stream of cool air past the skin carries off the heat of the body and promotes evaporation from the skin very rapidly, exactly as one cools one's porridge by blowing it. Over the wide plain of the sea the strength of the wind is always greater than on land, except on the mountain tops. A light breeze in town means half a gale at sea. To antarctic explorers who have to face the blizzards of the antarctic continent wind-proof overalls are the most important part of their clothing—more important than wool. These wind-proof overalls are presumably made wind-proof with rubber. Amundsen's and Scott's certainly were. A suit of oilskins is not very vapor-proof, but it is wind-proof, and is fitted tight round the neck and wrists to prevent any leakage there.

Play and Longevity.

[Detroit Free Press:] "The time is coming," remarked Prof. Thomas Scott Lowden, in a speech in Columbus, O., recently, "when he will live longest who plays most, who plays into his work." Well, accepting this as a possibility, we can go right on and predict that when that time comes we will cease to think of work as a "grind," go at it with enthusiasm and hope for achievement of personal records of ability or profit or something of the kind, and regard it merely as an education and preparation for a pleasant life's afternoon—that time when, competence gathered, we sit back in the easy chair to make whistles for our grandchildren and watch the world and his wife whirl by. Yes, there are some who even now meet work with a smile such as they give old friends, and who never feel themselves in any grinding machine. They're in the fight expecting occasional reverses and determined to win. Do you know one of them?

PERSONAL— MRS. MASSON, the noted palmist, of London, England, may be consulted at 322 SOUTH SPRING STREET, by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND READINGS, FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT information.

PALMISTRY HONESTLY PRACTICED WILL NOT tell your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

A man alone is very often like a ship without a helm. I am the helm. If you have a little better than average personality, appearance and good manners, if you know what the value of sticking to the truth means, I will steer you on the road where other men are making from $5000 to $10,000 a year. DON'T GET EXCITED BEFORE READING THIS—Your real reason for buying a second-hand car is that you want the same grade of car that your associates are using, but you don't feel like spending the money for a new one. You don't want a cheap, low-grade car, or you wouldn't be studying the second-hand column. Your idea is to get the best-looking car for the money. Most of you seem to have the idea that if you only find the RIGHT PLACE you can get a car for a whole lot less than it is really worth. Generally speaking, THIS NEVER HAPPENS, and your common sense will tell you so if you don't get excited. The market is full of cars listed at from $200 to $500 less than they are apparently worth, accompanied by all sorts of reasons, varying from the war to the high cost of living. In nine cases out of ten, however, the real reason is that the owner is confronted with the prospect of an expensive overhauling job, knowing that his car is about all in, and would rather put a few hundred dollars more into the deal and get a new car. Now, right here is where we come in. We know the car's real value. It is our business to know it. If we take it in trade, it is for low enough price so that we can afford to rebuild it before selling it again. If we don't get the car at our valuation we DON'T make the deal. That's clear enough, isn't it? When we rebuild a car we REVERSE the usual operation and make it as good or BETTER than it looks. Sounds rather philanthropic, doesn't it. But it isn't. It's good business policy, that's all. We have to stand back of any car we sell. We have to get the confidence of second-hand buyers to dispose of the used cars offered us in trade on new Packard, Chalmers and Grant cars. Our rebuilt cars are all mechanically perfect. We guarantee them to be exactly as represented at the time of sale. That's as far as we can go. You can see the rest of the proposition when you look at the car. We always have a few on hand. Let's get acquainted.

EARLE C. ANTHONY, INC.,

MUSICAL INSTRUCTION—

THE ART OF SINGING—
Voice culture is an asset which cannot be valued in dollars and cents. From a health standpoint alone it is a necessity. We recommend our singers to good positions when they are qualified.

Convincing lesson free by appointment. Call any afternoon and let us see what may be done for you.

An interview will cost you nothing, and it may mean much to you. Lessons given before and after business hours if desired.

A WAIF OF THE WAR.

Incident of an English Gentleman Long Resident of Germany, who had to Flee the Country.

[Lausanne Letter, New York Evening Post:] Blown in with me at the door as I entered a cafe, came a stranger looking about him uncertainly. He was very English and a gentleman, and, when he began to speak, showed himself a scholar. He seemed not yet to have recovered the impassive pose of his class from some recent shock. In hasty fragments he told his story.

When a young man and fresh from the university, more than a quarter of a century ago, he settled down in a German city frequented by English and Americans and prepared their sons for examinations. Mildly prosperity came and he took a mathematical master to eke out his own Latin and Greek. So he remained on, liking the town and the people, and becoming one of them, and his earliest pupils wandered back to intrust their own boys to his hands. He was winding up this year's affairs and planning his modest vacation tour when a German friend broke in on him.

"War is on with England and there are only two more trains by which you can leave the country. The way train will bring you to Munich in thirteen hours, and from there you may reach Switzerland unnoticed. The express train takes only four hours, but our people are getting excited and may be waiting to mob it. You have no time to lose."

So the English schoolmaster packed hastily his handbag with whatever he could think of as most important, gave a last look at the library which was his chief acquisition of all these years, and fled out of the country. "Yet I loved Germany," he said, slowly shaking his head over his tea; "and now I can never go back and begin life over again at my age." He is but one more waif in the multitudinous floatsam and jetsam of hate which this war storm will leave behind it.

The Bathtub.

[London Chronicle:] Even today our folk are not all initiates of the Order of the Bath, for friendly visitors among the poor note that in those model dwellings where baths are provided they are frequently used as storage places, or even as extra beds. That some vague connection exists in certain minds between sickness and bathing is shown in the reply of a working woman to an inquiry as to whether her flat contained a bath. "Oh, yes; but thank heaven we've never had to use it!"

Facing a Condition.

MUST CREATE A DYE INDUSTRY.

PLENTY OF MATERIAL IN THE UNITED STATES.

But this Country Cannot Compete with Germany in Manufacture of Dyestuffs Unless a Sufficient Protective Tariff is Imposed to Encourage Investment.

[Boston Transcript:] Between a protective tariff that has never protected, and an anti-trust policy that prevents the great economies attained in Germany through the co-operation of manufacturers, the United States faces in the present demoralization of its dye-stuff supplies a larger economic problem than is generally realized. Most persons know that our great textile industries are much embarrassed by the failure of many dyes for which they have long relied on Germany. Some persons have read that domestic production promises no considerable relief. Those who really know the complicated coal-tar industry realize that this country has tied its own hands against sharing in this extremely important industry. And so long as President Wilson's ideas of business and southern democratic ideas of tariff and trust-smashing prevail, they know that this country will have to continue in its present uncomfortable dependence on foreign dye-makers. Further, some far-sighted persons are beginning to fear the results of a dependence that promises in the future to be much more serious than the present matter of dyestuffs. At a time when we are buying heavily of German potash for fertilizers, and when the coming necessity for using the nitrogen of the air for that purpose is beginning to take definite shape, the chemical dependence of this country on foreign makers is a bigger question than whether this or that mill must abandon pet greens or yellows in its shirting patterns. A great enlightenment of the public mind and a large change in the present attitude toward the tariff and toward "combinations" must come to pass before our dependence can be substantially lessened. We are paying tribute to German thoroughness and to German efficiency that does not hesitate to profit by the "pools" and "combinations" at which we shudder and mark our ballots for a Democratic President. This is a suitable time to consider whether that tribute to Germany would not better be banked at home, or "put into the business."

COAL-TAR DYES MADE HERE.

A small amount of coal-tar dyes, compared with our imports, have been made in this country for some years past. Just now there is a flutter of special interest in the promise of a small aniline-dye plant in Brooklyn, which has been run successfully for some three years past by a naturalized German, Dr. William Beckers, and which is now being much enlarged. Several of the most important worsted mills in New England, including the largest two in Massachusetts, have been buying blues and blacks from the Brooklyn plant, for dyeing high-grade goods, and they pronounce the colors quite equal to the imported German dyes. What interests the mills is that Dr. Beckers is reported to have made these colors entirely from American coal-tar "crudes," as the basic substances for coal dyes are called. Up to the time the war broke out he, like all other makers in this country of coal dyes, used foreign basic substances. The industry here has never got beyond the finishing up of dyes from the earlier stages of the materials which furnish nearly all the profits of the manufacture. "American" coal-tar dyes have been "American," therefore, in about the same sense that a pie is "American" when it is put together and baked here, but is made of imported flour, shortening, fruit, sugar and spices. Cooks both of pies and dyes differ in skill, but both alike come a cropper when the supply of foreign ingredients fails.

Dr. Beckers's plant, it may be remembered, was mostly destroyed, with some loss of life, last November, as the result of an unexpected chemical reaction. That plant was housed in a concrete building of the factory type, which made for economy of handling and supervision, but also multiplied the effects of an explosion. The new plant, occupying some fifteen acres of ground, has been built after the German practice, with low, scattered buildings, so that the results of an accident can be localized.

"American" methods, making for the saving of time over the practice in Germany, have an interesting place in the Beckers works, and perhaps elsewhere. The dyes are mixed as liquids, ingredients being added to water in a succession of several tanks through which the developing dye-liquid progresses. This liquid is then evaporated, and the dry dyestuff that is left behind is ground fine and sold as a powder. In Germany, the evaporation is generally done in large open vats. In the Beckers plant it is done under vacuum, which is a much quicker process.

A CASE OF ALL OR NOTHING.

But the question of domesticating the coal-tar industries in this country is much larger than vacuum versus open-tank evaporation, and much larger than the differences in labor costs here and in Germany. The labor costs are not very great, anyway, except for the comparatively few directing chemists. Most of the work is done by unskilled labor, which even in Germany now costs the manufacturer pretty near to $2 a day. And again, the proportion of the total cost of producing due to labor is smaller than in many other important industries, rising in Germany barely to 20 per cent. of the total cost of the tar products.

The real question is of creating here the whole coal-tar industry, and it is only when one has some idea of how widespread this is and how narrowly it depends for success on being profitable in every part, that the difficulty of the undertaking is apparent. At the start, beginning with the production of the crude bases from coal-tar, the stream of economic requirements seems small; but before the ultimate dyestuffs are reached the difficulties of utilization and marketing are seen to become enormously complex. A hint of this complexity appears in the fact that the maker of crude bases from coal tar has 95 per cent. of his original tar left on his hands as a by-product. At the very outset, therefore, he must not only make a profit on the sale of his crude bases, but he must also make a profit from the sale, or utilization in other ways of the 95 per cent. of tar residues.

RIVALS MYTHICAL LABYRINTH.

About nine hundred distinct chemical substances—dyes—compose the actual commercial [illegible] coal tar dye industry; [illegible] be noted, is not the whole coal-tar industry, for [illegible] dyes there is the whole [illegible] of medicinal substances, and [illegible] the coal-tar explosives, [illegible] Germany and England [illegible] nine hundred dyes are [illegible] aid of nearly three [illegible] substances—the so-called [illegible]ates," which are not [illegible] and which are derived [illegible] "crude" or basis substances [illegible] are obtainable in various [illegible] coal tar. Altogether the industry embraces some 1200 distinct [illegible] and more than that number [illegible]tinct processes of manufacture [illegible] processes require an enormous number and variety of appliances, [illegible] many of them only one or two hundred pounds of the product [illegible] made at a time.

Starting with coal, the [illegible] this in retorts results in about [illegible] cent. of coke, 22 per cent. [illegible] and 6 per cent. of tar, which [illegible] covers both liquid and solid [illegible] obtained by the condensation [illegible] gas. In the combined distillation [illegible] tar, there are over 150 [illegible] chemical substances. For dyes [illegible] these are used, the list running [illegible]zol (or benzene, of the famous [illegible] formula;) tuluol, of which [illegible] heard lately in Germany [illegible] Xylol; phenol, or carbolic acid; [illegible]thalene; anthracene, from which alizarine dyes are made; [illegible]thracene; phenanthrene, and [illegible] These nine make up from [illegible] cent. to 75 per cent. of the [illegible] which they are derived. From [illegible] dyestuff point of view, therefore, [illegible] per cent. of the coal is by-[illegible] which must be used profitably [illegible] fraction of 1 per cent. is [illegible] profits. The gas, and to some [illegible] the formation of the substances [illegible] tar, represent heat and light [illegible] of the by-products.

From the nine basis substances, "crudes" there are made by [illegible]dition of other substances [illegible] so-called "intermediates," which [illegible] the middle division in the [illegible] toward the ultimate dyes. The [illegible]cesses of making the intermediates produce substances which did [illegible]ist in the coal or in the [illegible] in the next step, of producing dyes from the intermediates, [illegible] addition of still other substances [illegible] other new regiment of distinct [illegible]stances is created. The number of actual dyes goes high into the [illegible]sands, but only a modest [illegible] of these find their way into [illegible] use.

The world's entire production [illegible] coal-tar dyes has been [illegible]mated by a careful authority [illegible] over $100,000,000 in value, all [illegible] being produced in works which [illegible]cupy an aggregate factory [illegible] not more than one square mile [illegible]

OUR STUMBLING-[illegible]

The problem of the by-[illegible] the great obstacle in the [illegible] American coal-tar industry [illegible] present conditions. As the [illegible] advance from the obtaining [illegible] crude bases, not over ten [illegible] each chemical transformation [illegible] modification, gives rise [illegible] the substance or substances [illegible]ately desired, but to additional [illegible]stances for which no use [illegible] beforehand. Somehow, all [illegible] products must be made a [illegible] profit, or the industry will [illegible] the by-products are so [illegible] make up so much the larger [illegible] the substances from the [illegible]erations that they would [illegible] profits from the dyes if [illegible] treated as lost materials [illegible] where Germany has the [illegible] of the rest of the world [illegible] chemists began with the [illegible] the coal-tar industry, and [illegible] for the by-products as the [illegible] of dye manufacture developed [illegible] became more complicated, [illegible] kept their commercial balance [illegible] side of profit all the way [illegible] result is that among the [illegible] German coal-tar factories [illegible] to make the whole series [illegible]stances. Some produce [illegible] of the crudes, others may [illegible]tain crudes and certain [illegible]termediates, and of those [illegible] the finished dyes, each [illegible] group of products. This [illegible] the individual plants of the [illegible] country are in co-operation [illegible] representatives hold an annual [illegible]ference at which they decide [illegible] approximate distribution of [illegible]tion for the following year [illegible] of these hundreds of substances [illegible] dye plants are the determining [illegible]responding to the demands of [illegible] plants and the export trade [illegible] them the plants that make [illegible]termediates and crudes must [illegible] to provide the kinds and [illegible] these needed for the proper [illegible]duction of the dye plants. [illegible] is an essential part of the [illegible] of the German system [illegible]edged. Over here it would [illegible]ing," or "monopoly," or [illegible] trade," or some other [illegible] crime, which we still condemn [illegible]gross, without much thought [illegible] necessity of some of these [illegible]ments in the economical [illegible] of sundry manufacturing [illegible]

The setting up of a com[illegible]dustry in the United States [illegible] this at present impossible [illegible] of the by-products—which [illegible] their use in various parts of [illegible] industry, not limited to dyes [illegible] cannot be accomplished [illegible] various parts of the industry [illegible]lowed to have the necessary [illegible] economic relations which [illegible]den by our present anti-[illegible] laws. The task also involves [illegible] and skillful system of [illegible] or selling, such as hardly [illegible] in any other industry. [illegible] it, presumably, but it [illegible] time and money, and [illegible]

A PROTECTIVE TARIFF [illegible]

Higher tariff protection [illegible] to the report of a committee [illegible] American Chemical Society [illegible]lutely needed. The present 30 per cent. ad valorem [illegible] dyes has been in force [illegible] but it has not created an [illegible] coal-tar industry. The [illegible] holds that a specific duty of [illegible] a pound must be added [illegible] per cent. ad valorem [illegible] protection. The small specific [illegible] would shut out the cheap dyes [illegible] are so largely used here [illegible] 30 per cent. duty would be [illegible] as now, on the high-priced dyes. [illegible]

There is plenty of raw material [illegible]duced in this country, the [illegible] production of coal tar being [illegible] for supplying the textile [illegible] with dyestuffs. But the industry [illegible] not be established here without [illegible]ter tariff protection. The problem [illegible] whether the public is willing [illegible] for controlling its own sources [illegible] in the long run the cost would [illegible] on the general public. Preliminary Study for Social and Educational Center in Crown City.

Prize-winning suggestion for "City Plan" in Pasadena.

The sketch, which was prepared by Dean Damon of Throop College of Technology as a means of showing the possibilities of neighborhood development in his own city, was one of eight to receive awards in a nation-wide competition held under the auspices of the City Club of Chicago. Intended only as a suggestion, the idea has been taken up by the Woman's Civic League of Pasadena as the basis for a vigorous city beautiful movement.

Progressive.

INTERESTED IN CITY PLANNING.

Pasadenans Hope to Beautify Ugly Places.

Throop Dean Originator of New Movement.

Civic Organization to Start Active Campaign.

Pasadena has caught the city-planning fever. Every one in the Crown City is talking about it. The Woman's Civic League, one of the leading civic and social organizations of the city, is setting out to push the idea for all it is worth. Other organizations are preparing to follow suit.

The whole movement originated from a mere suggestion. The people of Pasadena have long been dissatisfied with the manner in which the Santa Fe tracks cut across their city, but have never until recently seen any good way out of the difficulty.

George A. Damon, dean of the Throop College of Technology in Pasadena, has one hobby, and that is "city planning." Dean Damon has been thinking over the city beautiful problems of the Crown City for years. Several weeks ago he placed the results of his studies and observations on paper.

At the time Dean Damon was working on his sketches and diagrams, the City Club of Chicago was offering prizes for the best plans submitted from all parts of the United States in a "Neighborhood Center" competition. The competitors were asked to take actual city planning problems in particular cities for the basis of their studies. The dean was interested to the point of submitting his own sketches for a "Pasadena plan."

Dean Damon's study was one of eight out of the hundreds submitted to receive an award. The interest of Pasadenans in a new city plan dates from the day the news of the prize-winning was made public. This interest has reached the point where it bids fair to bear fruit in the form of organized effort.

The Woman's Civic League will this week issue a large illustrated pamphlet containing all of Dean Damon's sketches and diagrams, together with others pertaining to the general subject of city planning. The pages of the pamphlet will contain appeals to the citizens of Pasadena to take a part in improving the appearance of the city and detailed suggestions for bringing about the desired ends.

PLAN IN DETAIL.

The first move in the carrying out of the Pasadena city plan must of necessity take into consideration the removal of the railway lines to clear the way. President Ripley of the Santa Fe has already agreed with representatives of the leading commercial bodies of the city to co-operate in any movement that is feasible.

Dean Damon has considered the possibility of a union station on Colorado street in laying out his social and educational center. With the Santa Fe tracks removed in theory to a more southerly location, he has attempted to work out a plan that utilizes to the best possible advantage the other public and semi-public buildings already in existence in the area he has chosen for his purpose.

The plan calls for a center within the boundaries of Holly street on the south, Fair Oaks avenue on the west, Euclid avenue on the east and Summit avenue on the north. Broadway would be widened and extended to Summit avenue by cutting through the east end of the present Library Park.

Of the existing buildings that fit into the scheme the Y.M.C.A., the old Pasadena High School, the old Throop dormitories, the library and the Roman Catholic Church and school on Fair Oaks avenue are the most important. In the plan the dean would provide space for a number of other fine buildings, including a Y.W.C.A., a municipal auditorium, several churches and schools, a museum, art studios and a recreation clubhouse. The enlargement of existing buildings and institutions is also contemplated.

The plan, it is pointed out, would eliminate a number of eye-sores that mar what would otherwise be a beautiful section of the city.

The economy of the plan, due to the comparatively small amount of property that would have to be condemned, is also held to commend it. Dean Damon himself declares that his ideas could be improved in many ways and that they are only to be accepted as suggestions preliminary to some real plan of development.

Dean Damon, with the assistance of Walter L. Newton, a Throop graduate, is now completing drawings showing the possibilities for enlarging his city-planning ideas. These studies in their incomplete form contemplate a plaza just south of the social and educational center and extending from Holly to Union streets between Broadway and Marengo. Between Union and Colorado is provided the space for a future Pasadena civic center.

HOME BUILDING TAKES A SPURT.

HAMMERS RINGING ALL OVER LOS ANGELES.

General Revival in Structural Operations Indicated by Great and Growing Activity in the Residence Areas—Architects are Optimistic.

The spurt in home building activity during March was the feature of the construction operations in the month just closed. This activity, while most pronounced in the west end of Los Angeles, and was quite marked all over the city. Architects and builders generally are optimistic over the outlook for residence construction throughout the rest of the year. Following are some of the residence projects that took shape during the past week:

Work is to being this week on a seven-room house of the New England Colonial type for Isaac Levy. The site is at No. 909 South Wilton place. The Milwaukee Building Company planned and will erect the residence.

The Maine Building and Investment Company has planned and will build a double house for Miss Mary Haslett on Kenmore avenue near Ninth street. The place, which will be started this week, will contain twelve rooms and two baths and will have a dividing wall in the center. The contract has been let for a ten-room house to be built by Grace L. Kanuer has drawn plans for an eight-room residence which he will build for R. W. Oakman on Van Ness avenue near Fourth street. Thos B. Sanders is about to start work on an eight-room house at No. 232 West Fifty-fourth street. A double house of twelve rooms is to be started this week by Chas. Heath at No. 1317 North Catalina street.

Of the bungalows for which permits were issued or contracts let during the week just ended, the following have been reported: Bungalow court of eight buildings for John McClure on Alta street near North Broadway; five bungalows of four and five rooms each for Jennie M. Williams at Nos. 4314 to 4322 Normal avenue; two double bungalows for H. M. Nichols at Nos. 1264 and 1268 North St. Andrews Place; four bungalows for J. B. Riley at Nos. 928, 952, 962 and 972 South Ardmore avenue; seven-room bungalow for Mrs. Gale M. Becker; a $3750 six-room chalet in West Hollywood for R. W. Hussey, and a $3500 five-room bungalow in Bairdstown for E. L. Wright.

WITH THE BUILDERS.

Permits Issued or Contracts Let for Number of New Frame Flats in Various Parts of City.

The marked gain in building activity in March as compared with February was due almost entirely to the constantly increasing number of new residences and flats that are being projected in all parts of the city. Of the March valuation total of $1,150,000, approximately $700,000 was represented by frame structures of one, one and a half and two stories. The total valuation of the March permits for flats and residences alone exceeded that for all classes of buildings in February.

A considerable number of flat projects took definite shape during the past week. Permits were issued for a flat to be built by James Menzies at No. 5507 Monte Vista street; a flat for Mrs. L. V. Arnold at No. 1822 South Manhattan place; a flat for Harry Gray at No. 3014 South Van Buren place; a store and flat building for J. W. Hanrihan on North Broadway near Alta street, and a store and flat building for F. O. Johnson at No. 5409 South Vermont avenue.

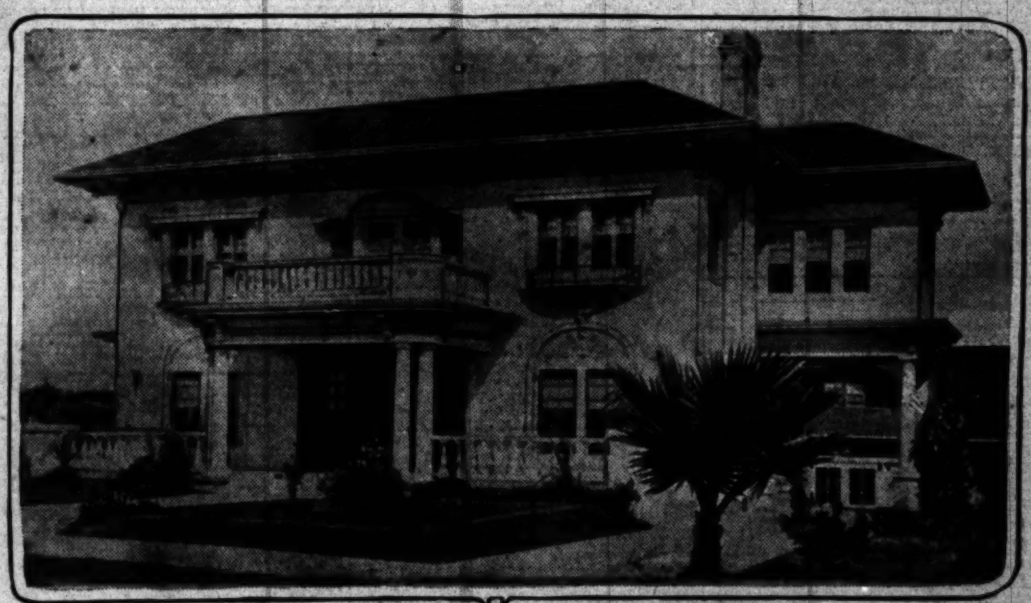
The contract was awarded during the week for a twenty-room flat to be built by Edward Dunham at Twenty-first and Arlington streets. Plans were completed during the week for a flat to be erected by W. M. Knapp on Thirtieth street near Vermont avenue; a flat for Phillip Haas on Orchid avenue, in Hollywood; a flat for George Arneson at No. 1547 Fourth avenue; a flat for Mrs. J. W. Dunning on Serrano street near Wilshire, and a flat for C. H. Thompson at Fifth and Hobart.

PYTHIANS TAKE LEASE.

Burton E. Newcomb of the business property department of Strong, Dickinson & McGrath reports the following leases: To Irving Lodge No. 317, Knights of Pythias, quarters on the top floor of the Isaacs Building on Broadway, between Seventh and Eighth streets, for five years, the Pythians having fitted up very handsome lodge and clubrooms; to Los Angeles Engraving Company, for five years, space in Meredith Building, No. 618 South Spring street, and to the Livingston Company, commercial photographers, space in same building. The two last-named leases were made in conjunction with A. G. Hemming, with Bryan & Bradford.

OPENS BRANCH OFFICE.

The Harry H. Culver Company has opened ground floor offices at No. 654 South Hill street, to be operated in connection with the main offices of the firm in the Hollingsworth Building. The new branch quarters will be given over largely to the Culver City end of the company's business.



Residence at No. 510 South Normandie.

FACT AND COMMENT.

The rise of local property values during the past epochal decade has been so phenomenal that real estate as an investment is today probably looked upon with more favor in Los Angeles than in any other American city. No argument is needed to persuade the average citizen of Los Angeles that he can do more with his money in realty than in any other field. If he has been here for any length of time he has seen enough with his own eyes to convince him. It is an indisputable fact that a majority of the fortunes large and small in and around this city have been made in real estate.

There are certain important facts relative to real estate, however, that cannot be overemphasized even in Los Angeles. Some of these facts are so elementary in character as to have the aspect of self-evident truths. It is just these fundamental principles in business, nevertheless, that so many persons fail to grasp.

In Los Angeles, as in other places, hosts of investors have blindly speculated and experimented with money they could ill afford to lose, ignoring not only the dictates of prudence, but the basic underlying laws of business procedure. These are the ones to whom real estate has not in the past appealed as a desirable investment. They are the sadder and wiser minority.

If it seems too much like arguing a thing that the average man hereabouts already believes in to assert that wisely purchased real estate is absolutely the best possible investment, the Fact and Comment man would urge that good, wholesome truth is something the world cannot have too much of, and the others really need the advice, "safety first."

In the first place, real estate is the safest investment in the world. In this day, as never before, the idea of safety is a governing factor in investments. People generally are growing more and more conservative and careful in the way they dispense their surplus earnings. The day of the "gambling chance" is passing.

Those who could least afford to run risks were in the past the ones who took the most chances. Today the tendency is to look before the leap. It is a tendency that augurs well for the future stability and prosperity of the country.

The new "safety first" idea is having and will continue to have a big influence in popularizing real estate as an investment medium. People are turning to real estate as the one

THIS WILL APPEAL TO PEOPLE WHO ARE IN THE MARKET FOR A DISTINCTIVE TYPE OF HOME.

We have recently taken over a number of lots in what is one of the finest old home sites in Hollywood, only 2 blocks from the center of Hollywood proper, just north of Hollywood blvd. This property is covered with roses and rose hedges, also fruit, flowers and shrubbery of every kind and description; this property is surrounded with fine homes, and is one of the highest and most sightly locations in Hollywood. The lots are all large, sewer, gas, water, electricity all in; street paved and paid; one block to car line. FOR SALE—
THIS LOT AT $750 IS THE BIGGEST BARGAIN IN THE CITY.
$25 CASH—$10 PER MONTH.
This is why it REALLY IS a bargain. It has gas, water, sewer, phones and electricity. Street work is in and paid; car service good, with two 5-cent lines. It has north front and really fine view that can never be cut off—yet is perfectly level. It is in the heart of the close-in southwest and the neighborhood is exceptional—no shacks and never will be. It is a rare opportunity at $750, on easy terms, because that amount is $350 less than its actual worth as compared with similar property in the immediate neighborhood. If you would buy this lot provided these statements are true, come and see it today—and bring your money with you. I will be today (and today only) at 3831 Western avenue, corner 38th place, to show this property. To come, take West 39th-University car going south on Spring street, get off at Western avenue and walk north to corner 38th place. Ask for MR. WARNACK. After Sunday you can reach me on the Home Phone F5935.

FOR SALE—
"RUMMAGE SALE"
SPECIAL BARGAINS IN SAN FERNANDO VALLEY.

We have been selling lands in the San Fernando Valley, from tracts in all parts of the best area of the Valley—all within the area now taking steps to be included in the city and to get Owens River Aqueduct water.

Our prices are distinctly lower than the average. Our terms are distinctly easier than any others we know of. Our land is GOOD, it has SOLD FAST.

We have sold out most of the pieces of land which front on good roads. We have land, just as good, which is NOT NOW directly on improved roadways. Undoubtedly, in the near future, these roads will be fixed up. If the land comes into the city—then the city will do it. If it stays in the county, the county will do it. Bound to improve, either way.

BUT, IN THE MEANTIME—shrewd buyers will be given special inducements to buy these lands and improve them. If you want to get a special bargain, and get it on terms that give you plenty of time to pay for it—this is your opportunity.

Think of getting rich, level soil, on the eve of annexation and irrigation with Owens River water, for $330 an acre.

FOR SALE—
FOUR "GOOD BUYS" at LOS ANGELES HARBOR.
Snap No. 1. 31,000 square feet, with frontage of 248 feet on S. P. R.R., within 2 blocks of municipal docks—probably the largest piece of undivided industrial property at the harbor today. Wide streets bound this property on the east and north. A 10-foot alley runs into the middle of it. The Consolidated Lumber Co., worth over $500,000, adjoins on east side and their future expansion must affect it.
Snap No. 2. 2 full lots on Canal st., Wilmington, the principal thoroughfare to municipal docks. An 80-foot frontage running back to alley.
Snap No. 3. 2 full lots, with 130 feet frontage on the S. P. R.R., and near Pacific Electric R.R., between Long Beach and Wilmington. The coming center of industrial development.
Snap No. 4. 6 full lots, facing two streets, near Seventh st., midway between Wilmington and Long Beach.
This property will probably quadruple in value in a short time, as has been proven around every harbor in the world. The present war and foreign trade—especially with South America—will greatly hasten this increase. An instance of this development is the coming into our harbors within a single month of the 22,000-ton steamships "KROONLAND and FINLAND," plying between New York and the west coast, via the canal, and the entry into the west coast trade of the new Japanese line with its four magnificent steamers.
R.R. frontage values here are greatly increased since the abolishment of switching charges in California. Address HH, box 212, TIMES OFFICE.

OF THE VERY CHOICEST LANDS
IN THE GREAT
P A H V A N T   V A L L E Y,   U T A H.

THERE ARE A HUNDRED GOOD REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD BUY A FARM IN

Here's only a few. You'll discover the others when you go up and look the country over.

Pahvant Valley is the valley that's making Utah famous.

There is no richer or more productive soil in the entire Western country. Our lands are the best in the Valley.

The soil is a sandy-clay loam more than 100 feet in depth and is absolutely free from rocks and hardpan—just rich soil all the way down.

The land is so level it can be prepared for perfect irrigation at a cost of from $1 to $3 an acre. It has just enough slope to irrigate properly.

Pahvant Valley is the greatest alfalfa hay and seed district in the world—has taken two World's Fair prizes on alfalfa seed.

Pahvant Valley produces from 5 to 7 tons alfalfa in three cuttings; or one crop hay and from $40 to $105 worth of seed.

Pahvant Valley produces bumper crops of all kinds of small grain; 67 bu. wheat, 100 bu. oats, 86 bu. barley per acre. Wheat averages over 40 bu. per acre.

Pahvant Valley produces the best sugar beets in America. They average over 17 tons per acre and from 18 per cent. to 21 per cent. in sugar. Cost to raise less than half what they cost in California.

Pahvant Valley produces vegetables of all kinds; all kinds of fruits (except citrus) grow to perfection.

Pahvant Valley was once the bottom of a great lake and is so rich in humus, it yields wonderful crops the first year, 52 bu. wheat, 103 bu. oats, 85 bu. barley, 25 tons sugar beets and other crops in proportion.

Our lands begin but 1½ miles from Delta. Six miles to the center of our tract. A branch of the Salt Lake route runs through our tract from one end to the other. Two stations on the land.

Pahvant Valley has the best culinary water in the world, 98 per cent. pure and 2 per cent. Lithia. It is strongly recommended by doctors for stomach and kidney troubles.

Pahvant Valley has the best markets and highest prices for everything grown. Alfalfa brings from $8 to $12 a ton.

Pahvant Valley has a wonderful climate (altitude 4643 feet,) dry and invigorating; few extremes of heat or cold. The sun shines 350 days a year.

Pahvant Valley is the greatest hog, dairy and stock country on earth. Hog cholera unknown. Hogs can be raised from 2½ cent to 4 cents a pound. Hundreds of thousands of acres of good summer and winter range adjoining.

Pahvant Valley contains a combination of soil, water, climate, local markets and transportation (main line Salt Lake Route) which eliminates every element of speculation.

Opportunity to own perpetual, cheap, dependable, gravity water becoming scarcer and rapid increase in values certain.

Pahvant Valley has "made good" beyond all question of doubt. Hundreds of good, paying farms adjoin our lands on all sides.

This land should double in value in three years, and in the meantime enough can be made from the crops to pay the entire purchase price.

Prices run from $45 to $60 per acre. We offer some perfect stands of alfalfa for $75 per acre; also some in winter wheat with house and other improvements. Terms, 1-3 down, bal. easy payments at 6 per cent.

Upon payment of 1-3 of the purchase price you receive a Warranty Deed and Abstract of Title to the land, together with a certificate for your water-stock, showing perfect title to land and water, and everything free and clear of all incumbrance.

To a few of the first purchasers here's a special proposition:

For an additional $10 per acre the Company will clear, plow, level, corrugate, buy the seed, plant, irrigate and care for in a good, husbandlike manner in proper season, and will harvest, thresh and deliver in sacks, without further cost to purchaser at threshing time in 1915, 25 bu. wheat per acre, which amount is guaranteed; and in case the crop yields less than the amount guaranteed, the deficiency will be credited upon the purchase price of the land and water. This means that you get your farm improved, which alone makes it worth at least $10 an acre more; the natural increase will be at least another $10 per acre a year. Also remember there is no "guess work" about this crop guarantee; it is backed up by the owners of the land. You get an "iron-clad" agreement—AND YOU GET THE WHEAT.

BUY A FARM WHERE RETURNS ARE QUICK, SURE AND BIG. THAT'S IN

SPECIAL BARGAINS IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA
ALFALFA AND GENERAL
FARMING LANDS.

We are selling at very low prices the remaining irrigable lands of the CHINO RANCHO.

CHINO is noted as the most highly developed, most uniformly prosperous area of alfalfa and general farming lands in Southern California. Only 35 miles east of Los Angeles, it has the same climatic conditions. Near the sea, it enjoys a generally cool and pleasant climate, but with some of the fogs and dampness of the ocean front warded off by the Puente hills.

The whole area is gridironed with good roads, and some of these are being made into paved boulevards. Good cities, towns, railroad lines on all sides. Prosperous farmers all around.

Water at Chino is developed from wells, at slight depth and with a short drift. Annual cost is small.

We have a few tracts, 10, 20 and 40 acres, for which water can be obtained without the expense of sinking a well—from neighbors whose wells produce them a steady surplus.

Twenty acres, sandy loam soil, fine for alfalfa, with water purchasable—and for only $125 an acre, on easy terms.

Ten or twenty acres, heavier soil, good for alfalfa, water purchasable, near paved boulevard, only $150 an acre, easy terms.

Sixty acres, well, pumping plant, provides 100 inches water (more than enough) at only $200 an acre.

Some magnificent opportunities for men with small means to get started in the most profitable kind of farming in Southern California—HOG RAISING.

GOVERNMENT LAND—

NOW IS THE TIME—
YOU SHOULD GET THE RESULTS of over a quarter century of our time spent searching State and government records.

Lists and service about STATE and INDIAN LAND until 1916 for $5 before May 1; after that, $10 or more.

There are 58 counties in California. You may be interested in a dozen or more of them. There is State land in all counties of the State, and government land in all except Marin, Sacramento, San Francisco, San Mateo, Santa Cruz and Sutter.

You would have to pay $100 or more to have search made of one county and result put on map. We give you this information for the small investment of $2.50 A COUNTY. It is EASY TO FIND the land and get it without other help.

The county sectional maps show government land PLAINLY MARKED on them. We believe it will pay you to send for a dozen or more maps, look at the land on the maps of different counties, see the land, select your choice and get the tracts NEAREST THE RAILROAD and GOOD TOWNS.

If you will send $30 for a dozen maps and get 320 acres of choice land, and show some to your friends, who will gladly pay you $320 to help them get 320 acres. On each one located you will make ten times the $30 paid for maps and GET YOUR LAND FREE.

A blacksmith in Bakersfield wrote us: "I have already located two homesteads FROM YOUR MAP." A university professor writes: "Your maps are VERY GOOD INDEED." We believe it will pay you to write us fully NOW with your order, so we can suit you as well as we have others. Write JOSEPH CLARK, Searcher of State and government records, 1511 K Street, Sacramento.

MR. PROPERTY OWNER:
What is your problem? Have you a piece of property which has outlived its usefulness for you? If so do not rely upon a sale. It is not to be had once in a thousand cases and then only at a ruinous sacrifice; but a "swap," the method of barter and sale before money was invented, will accomplish your purposes. If you are not hopelessly over mortgaged, or illogical in your desires and will patiently co-operate with us there is a speedy and practical solution of your problem. Favor us with a personal call, we never attempt to transact business over the phone. If you will acquaint us intimately with all the facts we can cite you to properties at first interview, that will suit you better than your present possessions and if you will promptly investigate our offerings we will make you a trade. We prefer to work on deals from $25,000 up to $500 000, but will gladly give our advice regardless of the size of transaction.

MR. OWNER OF CLEAR PROPERTY.
In these days, clear property has greater buying power than money when the market is brisk. We have been especially busy lately digging up bargains in equities for clients who had clear property. Bargains are plentiful. Everyone wants to sell; few have the fortitude and good sense to buy. We want clear property, city or country, for deals from $25,000 to $400,000. Some cash is helpful, but not indispensible. Now is your opportunity. Soon prices will stiffen and terms become less lax. See us today.

MINNEAPOLIS AND DULUTH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MINNEAPOLIS, April 3.—Flaxseed market for today: Demand quiet for all grades. No. 1 seed sold at 2@5½ under Duluth May price on spot and to arrive. Receipts today, 18 cars; last year, 38 cars. Shipments today, none; last year, 4 cars. Linseed oil shipments, 582,051 pounds. Linseed oilcake and meal shipments, 1,548,345 pounds. Duluth receipts today, 10 cars; last year, 3 cars. Winnipeg receipts today, 42 cars; last year, 41 cars. No. 1 seed closed at 1.88½@1.92 on spot and to arrive. At Duluth—In flax, crushers bought pretty fairly today, evidently being short of immediate supplies, and the market advanced at one time 4¼. It lost some of this, however, but closed strong, helped by the Buenos Aires situation, the bearish feeling concerning that being dissipated to some extent by rain in Argentina. The chief trading was done in May, but the other options, particularly September, received a good deal of attention.

MARINE COMPANY RECEIVERSHIP.

STEAMER CONCERN ORGANIZED BY MORGAN UNABLE TO PAY ITS INTEREST.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, April 3.—The International Mercantile Marine Company, the giant steamship combination organized in 1902 by J. P. Morgan & Co., which placed under one control some of the principal English, American and Belgian steamship lines, plying between the United States and Europe, today went into the hands of a Federal receiver.

The company has for six months been unable to pay the interest on its $52,744,000 four and a half per cent. collateral trust bonds.

While the International Mercantile Marine, since its organization, has been unable to pay dividends, it is said that with the outbreak of the European war its earnings were severely diminished, precipitating the present crisis. Many of its ships are now in war service.

The application for the receivership was made by the New York Trust Company, trustee for the defaulted bonds, and with the approval of the bondholders, P. A. S. Franklin, vice-president of the company, was appointed receiver.

Although the receivership affects the International Mercantile Marine as the holding company for all the subsidiary organizations which it controls, it does not affect the English subsidiaries, it is stated, such as the White Star, Leyland, Dominion and Atlantic Transport lines.

This is because the stocks of the latter companies were not pledged as collateral for the defaulted mortgage, it is explained. The receivership relates only to the American and Red Star (Belgian line) lines, to which the receiver is empowered to lend money to conduct their operations.

The bank was established eleven years ago with a capital stock of $100,000, which has been increased to $1,000,000. Its first location was in the Temple Block. It has enjoyed a steady growth and now ranks among the leading financial institutions of the city. The bank, located at Eighth street and Broadway, has six branches in various parts of the city.

STEAMER LINE RECEIVERSHIP.

Mercantile Marine Company Organized by Morgan Taken Charge of by the Court.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, April 3.—The International Mercantile Marine Company, organized by J. P. Morgan & Co. and controlling a great fleet of steamships plying between the United States and Europe, was placed in the hands of a receiver today by the Federal Court. The receiver named was P. A. S. Franklin, vice-president of the company.

Action against the company was taken by the New York Trust Company, trustee of its $52,744,000 4½ per cent. collateral trust bonds, interest on which has been defaulted. The proceedings are understood to be friendly.

Mr. Franklin was placed under a $50,000 bond and empowered to continue the business of the company.

Financial Review.

SAFE FROM THE WAR, STOCK TICKER INSISTS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, April 3.—Growing recognition of the safeguards enjoyed by this country against the financial effects of the war was registered in the week's stock market.

Abolition of minimum prices marked the re-establishment of a wholly free and open market. Expanded volume of dealings further reflected the return of normal conditions.

Both in stocks and bonds, March business rose well above the corresponding month last year, the final day of the month rising to the maximum and the highest prices since the outbreak of the war. Speculative caution and manipulative excesses prompted the realizing which resulted in the irregularity at the week-end.

The advantage to our foreign trade of the necessities of belligerents continues the dominant factor. War orders for steel in the last two weeks were the largest since the foreign clouds gathered. The $50,000,000 one-year French government bonds, taken by New York bankers, an equal amount for Russia and twice as much for England, under negotiation are all for purchases of materials here.

Renewed weakness of foreign exchange in face of these operations indicated the further pressure of the same causes.

Subsidence of expectation of early peace was a natural consequence. In contrast to foreign loans, new financing of home corporations in March fell to $58,000,000, compared with $264,000,000 in the preceding month. Home trade still hesitates.

Fact and Comment.

investment offering perfect security against actual loss.

Stocks and bonds are too often uncertain quantities. They rise and fall through influences that scarcely affect real estate. They are swept to the crest of the wave by one economic current and swirled into the trough of the business sea by another. They are the playthings of promoters and manipulators. There is generally a question as to their actual worth, for water is too often their principal ingredient.

Even good first mortgage public utility, railroad or municipal bonds can hardly be said to offer as good an investment from the point of absolute safety as real estate.

Tangible Value.

Desirable real estate, whether it be in the city or in the country, has a value that is tangible and real. Contributing constantly to that value is the growth of the community in which the property is situated. In a growing city or district the danger of retrogression is negligible. It is true that in cities business and residence areas sometimes shift from generation to generation, but these changes are always gradual, allowing the owners time and opportunity in which to think and act for the protection of their interests. There is no sudden sweeping away of fortunes such as is witnessed in stock flurries.

The owner of real estate has something that cannot be stolen and carried away. He cannot misplace it or lose it. It is a part of the earth and as fixed as the earth itself. Every evening it will be just where he left it in the morning. No amount of manipulating can destroy it or kill its productiveness.

The owner of real estate is in a sense the master of his own fortunes. By his own efforts he can add to the value of his property. It is within his power to be doing something all the time to make his investment securer. The investor in stocks too often merely spends his time helplessly waiting to see what will happen. The fate of his venture is entirely within the hands of others and he can do little or nothing himself to help insure the success of his adventure.

As to Returns.

There are those who, admitting the safety of real estate, are inclined to look upon investments in land and city lots as too "slow." These are the ones who want something that looks like "easy money" without waiting. If the whole truth could be known, it would probably be seen that a really appalling percentage of the investors who have started out with such ideas have ended in ruin.

Real estate, in the last analysis, is the foundation of all wealth, and consequently never to be despised as an investment. More money has been made in real estate all over the United States than in any other commodity that is bought and sold. In Los Angeles and Southern California real estate has paid returns that no other form of investment could even have approximated. There are men and women without number in Los Angeles who, in the years gone by, have missed their great chance for fortune in not investing in real estate.

Of course, there are all kinds of real estate. Some realty, while possessing that ever sterling virtue of safety, is hardly considered as a good investment. Many factors enter into values and the wise buyer will take all these into consideration. Location, condition and price all must come in for careful consideration. Real estate that is purchased with real intelligence and foresight will in any growing community pay all that can reasonably and consistently be asked for in the way of returns. There is always the possibility, too, that it will do more. The profits that thousands of real estate owners in Los Angeles have made in the selling of their property are almost unbelievable.

Present Opportunities.

There are many who, in commenting on the real estate situation, take the view that all the big fortunes that are to be made in real estate have already been made and that no such opportunities exist today as were to be picked up a generation ago. It is true that it takes more money to operate in Los Angeles than it did a decade ago, but this fact instead of constituting a discouragement should be an object lesson for the prospective investor. The values that exist in Los Angeles now show the possibilities for the pioneer in other Southern California fields.

At that, it does not require a fortune to get a good foothold in portions of Los Angeles that will beyond any reasonable doubt make future strides comparable with those that have already been witnessed in those parts of the city where the highest values today prevail. The men who bought property in Los Angeles and Southern California a decade or more ago faced no such certainties as those who buy today. No one knew then, as everyone knows now, the destiny that is in store for this city and section. To say that the opportunities in real estate are not as large and promising as they were ten years ago is to declare that the limit of advancement in Southern California has been reached.

The things always to be remembered in connection with the ownership of real estate are admirably summed up by a writer in the National Real Estate Journal. "The man who owns the land holds the key to the possibilities of the future in any section of the country," he says. "Nothing can be done without the land. The big industries, or the small industries, the factory and the residence, the big city blocks, the smaller flats and the larger apartments, all must have the ground. Tribute must be paid to the man who owns the land. For anyone to say that there is no real field for investment in real estate, is to deny the very fundamentals of existence."

The company will specialize in subdivisions and farm lands and has made arrangements for handling several thousands of acres of farm lands. Robert B. Armstrong, head of the firm, has for several years been associated with the Guy M. Rush Company, and is to continue the sale of Seal Beach and Seal Beach Court, two properties that have been handled by the latter concern. Henry E. King will have charge of the harbor real estate activities of the Armstrong company, and Robert Z. Adams will handle the farm land sales. The company is about to place on the market a close-in acreage holding to be known as "Farmington."

HOLDING THE PACE.

Building permits in Whittier for the first quarter of 1915 show that the year has started with improvements aggregating close to the first quarter of 1914. The total valuation of the permits for the first three months this year is $42,000, and for the corresponding term last year $44,000. Among the larger buildings figuring in the present total is the fine new office building for the Murphy Oil Company, costing $13,500. W. M. Dolley has taken out a permit for a one-story brick building on South Greenleaf avenue. A $3000 bungalow for Emma Kramer on North Greenleaf avenue and a $2000 chalet for F. D. Sawyer at No. 526 East Camilla street are among the other recent projects in the Quaker city.

PLANS REVISED.

Dirt is flying at the new site of Page Military Academy. The grading is finished and work on the foundations will begin tomorrow. A change has been made in the plans, in that the buildings will be of reinforced concrete and hollow tile instead of brick, as previously announced. There will be five buildings arranged on three sides of a square and all connected by arcades, the whole forming an attractive group in mission style. Fred Siegel is the contractor and all the buildings will be erected immediately.

FOR VALLEY LAND.

Leon R. Conklin reports having exchanged property at the southeast corner of First and Cummings streets, owned by Walter Bradford Ames and Louise Myers Ames, for 200 acres of Imperial Valley land owned by W. N. Hamaker. The local holding, which consists of a two-story pressed-brick building, occupying a lot 60x140 feet in size, went in at a given valuation of $40,000, the valley property being valued in the deal at $30,000. The difference was adjusted by cash and mortgage. Mr. Hamaker was represented in the transaction by N. Landsberg.

CONTRACT AWARDED.

Work is to be begun this week on a two-story brick store and apartment building for Charles Chovan at the corner of Jefferson street and Raymond avenue. Plans for the structure have been completed by Elmore R. Jeffery and the contract has been let to Valentine Katzenberger. The building will contain a store and bakery on the ground floor and living rooms above.

HOPE FOR BETTER DAY.

The Ookdale Acres tract in the foothill district north of Glendale was formally opened by the Holmes-Walton Company for the present season last Sunday. Owing to the rain on that day the company will hold another opening next Sunday. The event, like that of a week ago, will be featured by a roast pig barbecue.

BUYS VALLEY RANCH.

V. P. Jackson of Victorville has purchased the "Rose Villa" fruit and walnut ranch near the San Gabriel boulevard in Mission View Acres. The consideration in the transaction was not reported. The deal was closed through Mr. Goodin, of the country land department of O. E. Farish & Co. The buyer will take possession about April 15, and will farm the place on intensive lines.

PLANS COUNTRY ESTATE.

Alfred Wright, a Los Angeles attorney, has purchased forty acres of land in the San Fernando Valley and plans to develop a fine country estate. The property lies along Sherman Way, the main boulevard of the valley, and is near Owensmouth.

TO SEVENTH AND BROADWAY.

The Sidney B. Brown Company has removed from 708 Central Building to 1214-15 Haas Building, Seventh and Broadway. The company has added to its other activities a leasing and renting department, which is to be in charge of J. A. Jeffries.

TAKE A RAP AT COUNTY STORE.

PRICES EXCEED OURS, DECLARE RETAIL GROCERS.

Association will Take Formal Action Condemning System by Which Charity Managers Supply Poor Direct—Other Side Told by Grand Juror.

Is Los Angeles county doing an injustice to the retail grocers of this city and the county generally by carrying on its newly-established "County Outdoor Relief Store?"

On this question there is a radical difference of opinion between the managers of the county charities and the members of the Retail Grocers' Association. The latter body, it was announced yesterday, will take formal action condemning the county store system.

Secretary Olsen of the Grocers' Association said yesterday that he had investigated prices charged for supplies at the county store, and in various instances had found they are higher than the retail grocer is charging, although the county store is supposed to be strictly a work of charity and not a profit-making concern.

"I found the county store is charging $1 per dozen for canned milk," said Secretary Olsen, "while the grocery stores sell it as low as 85 cents per dozen. Vinegar was sold by the county store for 12 cents per quart, while the stores sell it for 10 cents. The regular groceries are giving sixteen pounds of sugar for $1, while the county store makes a charge of $1 for fifteen pounds. The regular stores are selling cocoa for 17 cents per can, while the county makes a charge of 20 cents per can for it.

"We contend it is not fair to the retail grocers, who are heavy tax payers, and that the indigent people could get better service by receiving orders on the regular stores. We will take definite action expressing our views."

Mr. Olsen expresses the opinion that an advantageous scheme could be evolved for giving a "balanced ration" order, so the indigent would be given a definite supply of certain staple commodities, instead of an order for a lump sum, with the right to select such things as might appeal to his fancy.

The "County Outdoor Store" was opened April 1 at No. 309 New High street and was called into existence by recommendations of the grand jury. A member of the grand jury has stated that investigations by that body showed that in various instances indigents receiving orders from the county on grocery stores had received short weight and inferior goods and that there were instances which showed actual receipts of not more than 60 per cent. of the face value of the county orders.

Secretary Olsen said yesterday that his organization would be glad to help prosecute these cases and the association would be the first to decry such methods.

The county store has been placed in charge of M. J. Fitz Gibbon, who had considerable experience in commissary work along the aqueduct. He went from the city service to take his new position.

Mr. Fitz Gibbon stated yesterday that if there has been any difference in the prices charged at the county store and those prevailing at the regular grocery stores, it was his own fault and due to the rush of getting the store in operation.

"We propose to charge exactly the same as the general groceries," he said. "The purpose is to see that the people holding orders from the county get their full weight and value in the goods supplied, and we believe that by purchasing in large quantities the county can effect a large saving in supplying the poor with groceries."

The past three days the county store has been swamped with orders issued by the county charities. This will be remedied hereafter by issuing orders at various times during the months, instead of having all go out the first day.

BROKERS REPORT BROADWAY LEASES

R. A. Rowan and Company, through their rental department, report having secured the renewal of the lease now held by the Sun Drug Company at the northwest corner of Sixth and Broadway and a new lease for the same concern covering the adjoining store which is now occupied by W. T. Ward with the "Silk Store." The drug company will remodel the two rooms and will install unusually fine fixtures.

The same brokers have leased for H. J. Isaacs, I. H. Norton and M. M. Norton to Milton Heckheimer the two stores at Nos. 929 and 931 South Broadway. The space will be remodeled to serve as a combination confectionery store and dancing room. This unique establishment will be known as the "Broadway Winter Garden."

Other leases are reported by the Rowan Company as follows: To Alexander Brick, eighth floor loft at No. 745 South Broadway, for wholesale woolen house; United Cigar Stores Company to D. P. Sheridan, storeroom at No. 325 West Eighth street, to be used as barber shop; Hicks-Hager Estate Company to B. Nergarrian, store at No. 618 East Fifth street, to be occupied by grocery.

ROCK ISLAND STILL ERRATIC.

DECLINES THREE POINTS, BUT RECOVERS LATER.

Cuban-American Sugar Rises Ten Points While Net Gains and Large Individual Transactions are Recorded in United States Steel and Reading.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, April 3.—Despite the intervening holiday and the snowstorm which seriously interrupted communication with out-of-town points, today's two-hour session manifested pronounced activity and breadth. Of the unusually large overturn, however, more than the average amount of business was restricted to minor issues like the local traction group, Rock Island, Erie and specialties. Various motor shares also contributed more than a fair show to the whole. Rock Island continued its erratic course, declining almost three points at the outset but recovering later. Numerous specialties rose two points or more while Cuban-American Sugar rose ten points to the accompaniment of stock or cash dividend rumors. Numerous net gains and large individual transactions were recorded in United States Steel and Reading. Bethlehem Steel regained some of its decline of the early week. Respecting the steel trade it was stated that export orders are running at double the rate of the closing months of 1914. The Atlantic Coast Line showed decrease in operating income of $187,000, while New Haven decreased its deficit by $719,000. The bank statement discloses a $14,422,000 expansion of actual loans. Excess reserves decreased by $1,618,000. Total sales of stocks amounted to 285,000 shares. The bond market was broad, but irregular in the main. Total sales (par value) aggregated $1,881,000. United States registered 2s declined ¼ per cent. and the coupon 2s ⅜ per cent. on call during the week.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

The produce and commission men yesterday morning played in the role of good "angels" when at the session of the Produce Exchange they donated about ten cases of eggs to the charitable women, who colored them for the children in the hospitals, orphans' homes and poor families.

The demand for eggs was fairly good and prices remained unchanged here or in the north. Receipts were 643 cases. Butter continued steady through the week at 22, and few changes are anticipated, this being figured close to the bottom price for the season. Receipts were 68,350 pounds. Cheese arrivals were 6570 pounds. The market continued very fluctuating through the week. Sales were light yesterday and the market is well supplied with northern fresh stock.

Potatoes continued firm. Reports from eastern States which ship to Los Angeles all indicate higher markets there. Receipts were 2278 sacks. Onion receipts were 305 sacks, and the market closed weak yesterday. Bean arrivals were 15 sacks and the market was featureless with a tendency to decline on several varieties.

No decline is probable nor has the impending advance in sugar been reported. In the East speculators have been forcing back and forth the raw-sugar prices, but the net selling quotations have held steady. With the coming of the canning season, which means heavy demand for the product, prices are expected to go higher.

The "Zone."

WHERE DULL CARE IS AN UNKNOWN QUANTITY.

Maze of Amazing Amusements at the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco—One Concessionaire has Invested Over a Million Dollars—You May Soar into the Air or Go Down in the Depths of the Sea.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, April 3.—The ends of the earth have been explored. Ten million dollars have been spent. More than 250 "shows" have been built. More than [illegible] acres have been covered.

And the best talent available in this and other countries has been enlisted in the creation of the "Zone," as the section of amusements at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition is called. Nothing at any previous exposition or at any amusement park, not excepting Coney Island or Chicago's "White City" can approach this completed city of fun and frolic that stretches for seven city blocks—[illegible] feet—and back, occupying the southeastern portion of the exposition grounds.

The "Zone" has already received applause from the thousands of visitors who have already passed through the gates of the exposition, and when one knows that showmen of the world over—7000 of them—entered into competition for the privilege of purveying amusement to the exposition's visitors; that only the best of the amusement enterprises were selected, with the result that one can spend entire days testing the delights of the district without exhausting its novelty; he can be ready to believe all that his acquaintances who have been to the "Zone" say about it. It is a wonderland of constant delight and amusement. Whatever one's desire in the way of entertainment it can be found somewhere between the Aeroscope, which takes passengers 265 feet into the air, and the submarines, which take them into the wonderful realms beneath the sea.

MILLIONS INVESTED.

But in the old days in Chicago in 1893, for instance, the showman who invested as much as $100,000 in an amusement venture was considered a game fellow. It is indicative of the advance in the purely amusement side of world's fair productions that to make any manner of noise at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition the showman must be "in" for quite up to a million dollars.

The heaviest individual investor in the amusement enterprises at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition is E. W. MacConnell of Chicago. Mr. MacConnell has established attractions on the "Zone" and his single investment foots up [illegible]. His "Big Three" attractions, the spectacular "Creation," "Evolution of the Dreadnaught" and "Battle of Gettysburgh" are typical of the better class of attractions demanded by the amusement seeker of today.

"Creation" is neither more nor less than the first chapter of the Book of Genesis. It is the story and the parable of the creation of the world and the birth of man, told not in cold type, but in magnificent scenic sequences, gorgeous colorings and electrical effects that are the last word in the modern application of mechanical science. So strong a pull does it exert that a very large percentage of those who see it go and go again.

The "Evolution of the Dreadnaught" is a spectacle of noisier and more exciting kind. With a series of battles fought out by true-to-life battle fleets with real cannon, it reviews the development of the modern war fleets of today from the war galleys of the ancients. The whole of the historic battle of the Monitor and the Merrimac in Hampton Roads, is reproduced or refought, with absolutely accurate regard to historical detail.

The "Battle of Gettysburg" is a pictorial reproduction of the crucial battle of the Civil War. It is a magnificent piece of work from both the historical and artistic viewpoints.

The other MacConnell attractions are the Eden Musee, wax figures of historic personages, the Jester's Palace, which is a houseful of rankest nonsense, Captain, a horse with almost human brain, Pharaoh's Daughter, counted the most beautiful of all illusions, the Samoan Village and the Joy Wheel, another contrivance which meets every requirement of the pure fun law.

THE "BIG FOUR."

The "Big Four Concessions," owned and controlled by the Combined Amusement Company, of which Fred W. Swanton, one of the best-known men in California, is the general manager, are most favorably situated about the center of the "Zone" and will offer entertainment to suit every taste.

The "Submarines," with a frontage of 200 feet and with a lighthouse and trident, connected by a wonderful electrical device 115 feet high, has an entrance which is one of the most striking sights on the grounds. A Neptune, forty feet high, driving seahorses of equal proportions, is on the right of the entrance and is but one of many features on the outside. The passenger, comfortably seated in a submarine, is given a trip "around the world, beneath the waters of the seven seas," going through a succession of winding subterranean caverns and seeing many unheard of wonders of the mighty deep. On coming ashore and going through the upper portion of the institution, the sightseer is treated to many sea-jokes in the way of apparently walking over jelly fish, being caught in the tentacles of a devil fish, walking through a vale and being called a Jonah. The submarines occupy a space as large as a city block and it is safe to say that nothing like this concession was ever conceived for amusement and instruction before.

"The Dayton Flood," a faithful mechanical reproduction of the terrible disaster of March 24, 1913, will prove of extraordinary interest to both young and old. It is in three acts and an epilogue, produced in a cosy theater, and is as realistic as real fire and real water, with the most modern and unusual effects patented by the designer, Harry Ellsworth, can make it.

The first act shows the heart of Dayton the day before the flood. The second act shows all of the dreadful details of the deluge, with real water flooding the city and the burning of two city blocks, the rain finally turning to snow and preventing the entire destruction of the city by flames. The third day of the big disaster is reproduced in the third act, with the water receding and the streets covered with debris ten feet high, and the epilogue shows Dayton of today, with one of Wright's aeroplanes sailing over the city which gave it birth, and everything is peaceful and harmonious as though there had been no flood.

The "South Pole" is another Harry Ellsworth production and worthy of the same mention as the above exhibit, but our space is limited. Suffice it to say that the production is an interesting and instructive scenic effect, depicting incidents and places relative to the recent ill-fated voyage of the late Capt. Scott.

"ALLIGATOR JOE."

"Alligator Joe's" farm and circus is sure to appeal to lovers of natural history, and the curious, containing as it does about 4500 alligators and crocodiles, all in a perfect state of submission. Among the special curiosities are four rare sea cows and Jumbo, the oldest and largest alligator in captivity. There are thirty man-eating crocodiles in the collection, baby alligators by the thousand and many rare birds, including water turkeys, pelicans, large blue herons and white aigrettes. "Alligator Joe" demonstrates how alligators and crocodiles are lassoed, captured, handled and hypnotized.

Another concession of surpassing interest, also under the management of F. W. Swanton, is the Aeroscope, which raises visitors to a height of 265 feet, or 330 feet above sea level, and affords a view covering 200 miles on a clear day. The device will carry 118 persons on a single trip and is absolutely safe in every particular.

All the countries of the Far East are represented in the Mysterious Orient, one of the most original and elaborate of the "Zone" concessions. First of all comes the Streets of Cairo, a large open space in which artists of many nationalities disport themselves for the amusement of the throngs. Here will be found impulsive, rollicking freedom, characteristic and entrancing, more so than anything of its kind ever endeavored before.

Then one goes down a comparatively narrow thoroughfare and emerges into a glittering array of zigzag streets and avenues, and mediaeval thatched bazaars and shops—the Turkish village. Here are dozens of men and women brought to the exposition from the far-away domains of the Sultan.

Besides the Turkish theater, with its dancers, duellists and diverse entertainment, the Turkish village contains a reproduction of Constantinople, with its golden domes and tall minarets, its narrow lanes and dazzling court and its motley races in their odd and multicolored garments. Jerusalem with a reproduction of the famous Jacob's tower and of the gorgeous and historical Jaff and Damascus gates is another feature of the Mysterious Orient. Busy money changers and excited pilgrims may be seen in the midst of their natural environment.

There is also represented a bit of Persia, Algeria and India. Lumbering camels stalk about, chewing their Showing the entrance to the Chinese Theater and Underground Chinatown. In the distance may be seen the entrance to Toyland Grown Up and the Submarines where the visitor may take a trip under water in a real submarine boat. The Zone stretches out for over a mile and hundreds of the greatest scenic and mechanical attractions ever created flank its broad walk on both sides. Millions of dollars are represented in the concessions erected and now in full swing and concessionaires from all over the world agree that it is the greatest amusement thoroughfare the world has ever known.

Grandeur of America is Faithfully Portrayed.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, April 3.—No matter through which door one enters the Palace of Transportation at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, the eye is almost instantly arrested by the looming proportions of what is declared to be one of the most novel and interesting exhibits ever seen. The earth itself is on display. The exposed surface is covered by the continent of North America and the oceans that bound it. The United States, with its mountains, rivers, valleys, national parks and cities, is taken in at a glance. In fact, the eye travels with tiny trains which flit across the huge miniature exactly as the trains they represent are in flight across the continent.

The exhibit is the production of the transcontinental system embracing the Western Pacific, the Denver and Rio Grande, the Missouri Pacific and the Iron Mountain. It stands in the northwestern corner of the Palace of Transportation, and becomes of even greater interest as one approaches. About it on every hand are the finest examples of the locomotive builder and the car-constructor and these pieces of railroad "furniture" give added point to the unique exhibit which illustrates a great railroad's function in serving mankind.

PEACE AND QUIETUDE OF THE "DREAM CITY."

Fairest of the Fairs Gives Rest to the Weary, Exaltation to the Soul—Vice-President Marshall Charmed with Beauties of Panama-California Exposition. Gentle Entertainment Pleases.

BY MARY S. GULLIVER.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN DIEGO, April 3.—It is the peace and quietude of the Panama-California Exposition, the Exposition Beautiful, that appeals to people in a manner they cannot forget. This appeal of the "dream city," as Vice-President Marshall described the fair, is the stronger at a time when nearly the whole world is at war.

The long colonades with their twining vines and foliage, the quiet patios, the winding paths leading to little grass plots or sequestered shady nooks in which are inviting stone benches, the pepper grove with its grateful shade, and last but not least, the very architecture, all give this atmosphere of peace.

If one were to visit the exposition every day for weeks, one would constantly be finding some new unsuspected beauty spot of the grounds. Sometimes it is a tiny formal garden, sometimes a cool green spot between the walls of two buildings, where a fountain plays and ferns are growing in profusion.

It is interesting to note what some of the famous men who have visited the exposition the past week have said about this quality of San Diego's fair. "A dream city, the memory of which will never fade from my mind" is the way the Vice-President described the exposition city with its atmosphere. Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt said, "While here I have had what I think so many have had—a peculiar feeling—a spirit of peace; a feeling that I don't want to go to the dictionary to explain it, but that I want to sit down and simply drink it in."

"HANDFUL OF PEARLS."

"Compared to other fairs it is but a handful, but a handful of pearls," is the way Judge Peter Grosscup referred to it. And Irvin Cobb said in his forceful way, "The thing which hit me between the eyes when I went up to the exposition, was that the men who have built the fair have succeeded in creating an atmosphere of restfulness, an air of contentment that is exceedingly welcome to the visitor who comes from a noisy city."

The effect of this atmosphere was wonderfully demonstrated last week when a day was set aside for Mme. Schumann-Heinck, and thousands of school children paid her homage. Some objection was made by some of the exposition people as to the advisibility of turning 10,000 children loose over the beautiful grounds. But Superintendent of Schools MacKinnon said, "I will vouch for their good behavior. One can't be a rowdy in this exposition, surrounded by this beauty and this peaceful atmosphere."

And he was right. The children trooped in by the thousands, some little tots of 6 years, and a demonstration followed that brought tears not only to the eyes of the kind-hearted diva, but to the eyes of the men—exposition officials and army men. And not one of the youngsters misbehaved or so much as molested a flower of the gardens.

Many of these beauty spots of the grounds are not seen by the crowds who travel only the main streets and buildings of the fair. One of the most charming is a little pergola covered with a luxuriant growth of solanum, or nightshade, with a mass of white bloom. The pergola overlooks the Canyon Espanol and across the canyon one sees the ocean and the Coronado Islands in the distance. The singing of birds in the foliage of the vines is the only sound that is heard in the pergola.

CANYON RETREAT.

To reach the pergola one takes a path from the formal garden that lies between the Foreign Arts and the Commerce and Industries buildings, winding through the tall eucalyptus trees to the little retreat by the canyon's side. In the other direction from the Foreign Arts Building is another pergola all rose-covered. A dozen pretty spots are found as one follows the path overlooking the canyon from behind the Fine Arts Building eastward toward the famous Pepper Grove.

Because of the beauty of the gardens and this atmosphere that grips all who visit them the exposition people have planned to give many out-of-door attractions during the year. Festivals, flower shows, pageants and out-of-door plays will be given. The first of these was the Easter egg hunt for the children held today in the Pepper Grove. More than 1000 eggs were secreted in nests in the grass, in the shrubbery and in the low boughs of trees. The children, nearly 600 of them, all little ones, marched to the grove and then joyously began the hunt. Later they sang songs and played games.

The next out-of-door affair will be a festival giving periods of the drama from the earliest Greek to the modern drama. The balcony scene from "Romeo and Juliet" will be a feature of this festival, which will be held April 22.

MAY DAY PAGEANT.

For May Day an old-fashioned New England celebration of the day is planned. A pageant and a Maypole, in which sixty children will participate, will be held in the Plaza de los Estados.

A pageant, folk dancing and music is the programme planned for May 11, under the auspices of the Y.W.C.A.

Later, a great rose show is planned when processionals will be held in all parts of the grounds and roses will be seen everywhere. A parade of small rose-covered floats driven by pretty girls will feature the rose day.

Throughout the winter, when the East is wrapped in snow, there will be delightful festivals and pageants of the early Spanish-American history typical of the romance of the South and the climate of the South.

The San Diego exposition has also a practical side and the exposition will be the meeting place of many teachers' conventions and institutes on account of its educational value. This week 400 Riverside teachers passed the entire week to study the architecture, the horticulture and agriculture as learned from the gardens of the exposition and from the Model Farm.

The exhibits in charge of Dr. Edgar L. Hewitt, the Science of Man Building, the Child Welfare exhibit, the Fine Arts, and the American Archeology of the California Building are all sources of much information for the teacher. Last month the San Diego county teachers held their institute on the grounds and in July the San Bernardino county teachers will meet here.

HUNT HUNTING A PRETTY MAID.

Wants Her to Act as Sponsor for New Battleship.

Imperial Copper Company is Sold at Public Auction.

Two Counterfeiters are Shot Across Line in Sonora.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TUCSON (Ariz.) April 1.—The newest dreadnaught of the American navy, the battleship Arizona, is to be launched about June 3 at the navy yard at Brooklyn. She was designed as a sister ship to the Pennsylvania, recently launched at Newport News. Twelve fourteen-inch guns for the terror of the seas are being tested at the naval proving grounds near Indian Head, Md. Two questions now are being agitated in Arizona. The first is: What Arizona maiden shall be named by Gov. Hunt as sponsor for the craft as she slides from the way? The second: How shall there be provided a fitting service of silver for the wardroom mess? A subscription list for the latter already has been started by Mayor Mix of Nogales.

ONE FAMOUS ARIZONA.

The name "Arizona" has been borne before by at least two war craft of the United States navy. One only was of importance. She was an iron, paddle-wheel steamer, built at Wilmington, Del., in 1858. Her name was changed during the Civil War, when she became the blockade runner Caroline. While en route from Havana to Mobile, loaded with munitions of war, she was captured October 28, 1862, by the Federal warship Montgomery. She was condemned in a prize court at Philadelphia, sold to the government for $845,000, given her original name of Arizona, and assigned to the Gulf squadron, armed with a battery of six guns. She participated in a number of important engagements along the Gulf Coast, at Sabine Pass, and on Red River, till destroyed by an accidental fire while on her way up the Mississippi River.

COPPER COMPANY SOLD.

The property of the Imperial Copper Company was sold in Tucson at public auction Wednesday by Receiver M. P. Freeman and was purchased by F. H. Hereford, at the minimum valuation, in the name of Leo Goldschmidt. The sale was in satisfaction of a mortgage of $2,000,000, held by the Bankers' Trust Company. It included seventy-eight mining claims in Pima and Pinal counties, eight mill sites, surface and underground equipment, 8000 shares in the Arizona Southern Railroad Company, a road which connected the mines at Silver Bell and the smelter at Sasco with the Southern Pacific station of Red Rock, and 9000 shares of the stock of the Southern Arizona Smelting Company. Despite the size of the mortgage, the property brought only $104,000. Hereford happens to be an attorney for the Calumet and Arizona Copper Company and therefore there is suspicion that he has been acting for that corporation, which is known to be in the market for copper properties of value and which now is opening up new ground in the Ajo country south of Gila Bend.

COUNTERFEITERS SHOT.

From Nogales comes news that two of the Mexican officials implicated in the plot wherein counterfeit money was to be stamped and validated, were executed at that point a few days ago, marched out to the cemetery and shot down in front of an adobe wall.

Sonora is said to be swarming with bands of Yaqui Indians, mainly deserters from the Maytorena army, tired of lack of rations and of little or no pay.

At Yuma the new wagon bridge across the Colorado has been attached, in the hands of the contractors, for satisfaction of a personal injury claim of $3000, preferred by a workman, A. Dwyer.

Mrs. Anna L. Mead, in the course of pleadings in a suit she has filed against the Commercial Insurance Company, virtually has been charged with arson. Mrs. Mead had been suing to recover insurance for damage done by a fire within the Mead Hotel, which she conducted.

An interesting feature of the black-list law, passed by the last Legislature, is that the faculty of the State Normal School considers itself bound under the terms of the law to give no recommendations covering the ability of graduates of those institutions, though statements will be given to applying school trustees covering the work done in the Normal.

ROSSI RETIRES.

"Rossi's," probably the best-known restaurant between Los Angeles and New Orleans, no longer will know the presence of the chef of surpassing ability, who has conducted its affairs for twenty-three years. He has given the cafe to a faithful employee and has retired to a little farm on the outskirts of Tucson. Pathetically he tells that he doesn't know how to conduct a cafe in a prohibition community and that he is too old to learn. He came to Arizona in 1883 to be chef for a hotel in Prescott. When the hotel burned and he was thrown out into the hills he attained more than local fame for his unwitting mixture of a couple of snakes with a toothsome stew he was preparing in the fireplace of a miner's cabin. He still contends that the stew was good and that no ill effects came to the partakers thereof.

Sylvia Pankhurst's Proposal.

[Memphis Commercial Appeal:] Sylvia Pankhurst is a strange woman with weird ways of thinking.

On Monday, through the courtesy of Lord Kitchener, she was permitted to bring a delegation of English suffragettes to the English War Office. She presented a protest and a request, both most womanly.

The protest was against the man-made law, which compels soldier wives receiving separate allowances to lead proper lives and to keep sober.

The irrepressible Sylvia seems to think that such an order is most unjust. She seems to feel that a soldier's wife receiving from the government a separate allowance has a perfect right to get drunk and lead an improper life.

The request was that the order be rescinded because it applied to the woman and not to the man.

Sylvia is opposed to sex legislation. She thinks that a common law should apply to all alike—that there should not be a law for the woman and a law for the man.

Palace of Transportation.

is forty-four feet in height. The trains are seen traveling from San Francisco over the tracks successively of the Western Pacific, Denver and Rio Grande and Missouri Pacific to St. Louis, whence the Iron Mountain radiates to points in the Southern States and particularly to Hot Springs, Ark. Cities and places of interest are labelled with their names and a light glows at each as the train passes. Yellowstone, Mesa Verde, Rocky Mountain and Yosemite national parks and Great Salt Lake, are indicated by squares of soft light.

Although a train crosses from San Francisco to St. Louis in three minutes, it is impossible to regard this globe and the suggested activity upon its surface without feeling as never before the splendid achievement of transcontinental railroading and the part it plays in our national life.

"The Globe," which is even more interesting within than without, is entered through ornamental arches. The pilasters are surmounted by strikingly sculptured figures of a prospector, representing mining; a fisherman, representing sports; a farmer, representing agricultural; a blacksmith, representing commerce; and a brakeman, representing transportation. Locomotives in relief appear to be emerging from the pilasters as from tunnels and their smoke drapes above the arches to spell the names of the four lines. Car wheels form a border for the arch entrances. In the width of the arch is seen a fragment of ballasted track. The keystone displays a bell, beneath which are the words, "Scenic Line of the World."

OVER THE DIVIDE.

Adjoining the globe and forming part of the roof of the interior exhibit is a reproduction of Marshall Pass in Colorado, the highest point reached by the Denver and Rio Grande. This pass, with an altitude of 10,857 feet, is the continental divide from which streams flow west and east to the Pacific and Atlantic oceans. In the colorful reproduction Mt. Ouray rises solemnly in the background. The trees and rocks of the foreground being real, the spectator is assisted in getting the "feel" of the "backbone of the United States." Below Marshall Pass are bas relief panels showing Ruby Canyon and scenes on the Feather and Missouri rivers.

The interior of this huge globe is so interesting that, were the exhibit on the Joy Zone and an admission fee exacted, the never-ending stream of visitors would as eagerly pass through its entrance arches. Within the globe is shown in miniature 3,000,000,000 feet of the finest scenery in the world. In passing along a winding fairy causeway one looks first to right and then to left upon the vistas of a partly-modeled, partly-painted diarama that pictures the scenery and the activities lying along the lines of this railroad system. The effect of viewing these superbly-wrought miniatures is difficult to describe. Not only do they acquaint the visitor with what is to be seen on this route, but they make him prouder of being an American.

WHAT YOU CAN SEE.

Moving from scene to scene is identical with crossing the continent from West to East. The Panama-Pacific International Exposition is shown just as one would observe it from a hilltop a mile away. The succeeding scenes are given in the order in which they occur: San Francisco; Sacramento, the capital of California; Feather River Canyon, which has made the Western Pacific famous throughout the world; Salt Lake City; Provo Valley and Utah Lake; Grand Junction, Colorado, with an orchard in Grand River Valley; Glenwood Springs, the noted resort; Leadville, with its mines and smelters and Mt. Massive in the distance; Royal Gorge, which has made the name of the Denver and Rio Grande known everywhere that men love to speak of the mighty and beautiful in nature; the Sky Line Drive, showing Canyon City and the Upper Arkansas River Valley, where agriculture alternates with oil wells and gold and coal mines; Pueblo, with the Bessemer steel works; the Garden of the Gods, with Pike's Peak in the distance; Denver, the mile-high metropolis of the mountain kingdom; the Pike's Peak region from the Crystal Park auto drive at Artists' Point, from which the eye takes in seventy miles of territory, including Colorado Springs, Colorado City, Manitou and the Garden of the Gods; San Luis Valley in Colorado, showing a 2000-acre alfalfa field; Sugar City, Kansas, with its beet-sugar industry; the cliff dwellings of Mesa Verde National Park, in Southwestern Colorado; Osawatomie, Kansas, with a 3000-acre farm and stock ranch; Kansas City, Missouri, with its new Union Station; Jefferson City, Missouri, with its new Capitol Building; St. Louis, the eastern terminal of the Missouri Pacific; Hot Springs, Arkansas, the famous watering place, connected with St. Louis by the Iron Mountain line.

These scenes are faithful reproductions. They are full of color. They are made instinct with life by the changing play of lights and shadows. There are sunrises, sunsets, night and storm effects. The growing and receding light makes one feel the might and majesty of the mountains.

ONE MAN'S WORK.

When the visitor has reached the center of the earth, as it were, he finds himself standing before a softly-splashing fountain. The light fades. Twilight is succeeded by darkness. Then the twinkling stars come out. Finally the honey-colored moon sends a glow into the chamber. The soft firmament, with its marvelously heavenly bodies, may be only a few yards away, but the illusion is perfect. It is exactly as though one stood in a garden on a matchless summer night.

The visitor is recalled to the actualities by a courteous attendant, who hands him printed matter in which the facts about the country he has been viewing are succinctly set forth. The globe was designed and built by F. B. Fulton of Denver, who directed the construction of the interior scenes from paintings made by himself.

It is quite possible that no other single exhibit in all the stupendous exposition will attract as wide attention or be more heartily praised by visitors, who find they have been instructed while being genuinely entertained.

Quicksilver Mines of Spain.

[Chicago Journal:] More than one-third of the quicksilver produced in the world last year came from the mines of Spain. Those mines were worked centuries before Christ, and they seem good for centuries more. Other quicksilver supplies are discovered, exploited for a time and exhausted, but no bottom has been found to the veins of Spanish cinnabar.

Many high authorities hold that other mineral resources of Spain are quite as splendid in proportion as her supremacy in the production of mercury. Spanish iron ore is sometimes shipped to the United States, yet the mines are said to be worked in very clumsy, ineffective fashion. It is even claimed that the coal supplies of the peninsula are superior to those of any other part of the continent, but these, again, are managed in a careless, indolent, unscientific manner.

cuds contentedly. Suddenly there will appear a herd of elephants, led along by their dusky trainers, to perform feats in the way in which only the pachyderm can perform them.

"101 RANCH."

The one quaint touch of the old wild western days is given the exposition by the presence on the Zone of the Miller boys, headed by the famous and kindly Joseph, and their collection of cowboys and girls, redskin, buckaroos and long horns all under the showname of the "101 Ranch."

It is not the ordinary wildest of "commerce," of Broadway cowboys and Market-street Indians. "Not-a-tail," as Joe Miller says it. On the contrary, it is a great big piece jerked loose from the last bit of the genuine frontier life in the United States. The whole "show" was brought from the Miller Brothers' huge ranch down in the old Indian Territory; it is a part of their practical working equipment.

Even the Indians are real, for Miller Brothers found the tribe there when they were born to the father that made the ranch, and since that time have fostered and cared for the whole redskin nation. They have stood in loco parentis to a whole tribe and the tribe has thrived as have the Millers.

The "show" itself is, of course, one big circus—a two-hour gun play with all of the ranch incidentals—"roping," "tying," "bulldogging," "Indian Battler" and all the rest. It is a wonderfully vivid, true-to-life reproduction of the hotter, earlier days, and it has proved no end of a sensation.

TOYLAND.

Frederick Thompson's Toyland is the largest of the "Zone's" varied enterprises. You enter whichever you choose of its three gateways—the gateway of Fun, which gives upon the rookedy, crookedy street with the zig-zag railway; the gateway of Fairyland, which leads to a land of beauty, and the gateway of Thrills, where one walks across the Cobweb of Life, in the center of which is a goal, and a prize for all who attain it. Dozens of devices of like nature are here, including a seven-league bootshop, a Jack's beanstalk and a Peter Pan street; Old Mother Hubbard's cupboard is the restaurant, with tables on two lower shelves, and a commodious dancing floor above. Old Dog Tray, twenty feet tall, stands guard here over Noah's Ark, and somewhere in the Cosmos Cynthia and her animal friends—real live ducks, dogs, piglings and a whole happy family are in residence here.

Next in area occupied and quite as interesting as Toyland are offerings of two great railway systems, the Grand Canyon of Arizona, built by the Santa Fe, and Yellowstone Gardens, by the Union Pacific. These are scenic productions, of enormous educational value.

In the Grand Canyon an eight-mile journey, which requires half an hour, is made in palace cars, which run along the rim of the canyon, stops being made at points of interest, such as Bright Angel Trail and the Painted Desert. El Tovar, a replica of the magnificent hotel at the entrance of the canyon, is the starting point for the journey. A very famous old-timer, Capt. Jack Hance, who has lived in the canyon for thirty years, is on hand to enlighten the visitors at points of interest.

On the roof of a Pueblo Indian village are families of Zunis, Hopis and other tribes, living as they do in their own reservation, and following their ordinary vocations — making baskets, blankets, pottery, beadwork and baking bread from cornmeal ground by the hand process in use for hundreds of years by these Indians. The 'dobe bricks and pinyon pine poles for the huts they live in were brought in from the desert, as was the red sandstone used in many ways in this concession and the enormous cacti and aloes. Plain and mountain sage brush are planted along the route of the railway. In all, twenty-six carloads of desert material brought from the canyon have been used in construction.

Yellowstone Gardens are a miniature Yellowstone National Park. In the center is an enormous relief map of the park, and surrounding lava rocks of marvelous coloring from which the ascent is made through foothills and forests and then past timber line to the high crags where the inn is located. Many of the geysers "gyrate" on the twenty-minute schedule maintained by the originals. Old Faithful Inn has been reproduced in full dimensions, with banquet and dining halls, and here every provision is made for the comfort and convenience of all comers.

PANAMA CANAL.

The Panama Canal concession is one of the most complete and best equipped shows that has ever been presented at any world's fair. Occupying over five acres of territory with an exact topographical reproduction of the Isthmus of Panama and a panorama, which discloses to the view of the spectator 5000 square miles, the miniature canal is instructive as well as entertaining.

Seated on a revolving platform, the largest in the world, with a seating capacity of over 1000, one is taken from the Pacific side to the Atlantic Ocean, making a complete round trip in twenty-five minutes. While riding along the oblong theater, which is so constructed that the gaze of the spectator is focused on the object immediately in front of him, one listens to a lecture which is transmitted by telephone from a newly-patented phonograph instrument. The various points of interest are minutely described and as the ships pass through the locks, each nation is brought to the attention of the onlooker.

It is one of the most stupendous propositions ever conceived, no detail having been overlooked. A visit to the exposition grounds would be incomplete without visiting this attraction.

The '49 camp is a faithful presentation of life as they lived in California in discovery days, which will warm the heart of old-timers and all those who have dreamed of the days of the gold rush. The original cabin which Mark Twain built and lived in, and the original Sutter's Mill, where Marshall's gold discovery was made, were brought here. Everything on display conforms to the traditions, and most of the material dates from Argonaut days.

Mahomet's Mountain is one of the thrills, and, of course, no exposition fun zone would be complete without a Bowl of Joy, a merry-go-round, a human roulette wheel, a baby incubator, an Old Mill, and like devices.

"Japan Beautiful" and the "Chinese Village" are each a wonderland of gardens, quaint houses, dainty rooms and queer shops, with geisha girls to entertain, and dainty maids to serve refreshments. Customs and costumes of the olden times as well as the present are included in the plans of these villages and the entertainers at Japan. Beautiful include wrestlers, dancers, jugglers and acrobats.

The Tehuantepec Village, in all its native color, transplanted to the heart of civilization, makes a strong contrast with its surroundings in the heart of the "Zone." Native weaving, beautiful dancing girls, singers and others entertain the visitor and many an hour may be pleasantly spent here.

Other attractions along the Joy Lane that will be found equally interesting and diverting are the Hawaiian Village, Dixieland, the Diving Girls, the Ostrich Farm, the Caucasian Ballet, Shamrock Isle and the Australasian Village.

The street itself flowers into a night-garden of wonderful beauty. Lights in semblance of blossoms, fruits, fireflies, garlands, pyramids, arches, gems, crowns, stars—yes, whole constellations—are installed. No system governs, and no precedent is followed. Each concessionaire has striven to outdo every other, and as the tourist progresses along this resplendent thoroughfare he finds himself willing to admit that he is truly in Wonderland.

Women and Motor Cars.

[Scribner's Magazine:] What changes a dozen years have wrought in motoring! Men no longer buy cars for the fun of discovering why they won't go, but wholly in the prosaic expectation that they will. Little do the beginners of today know of the stern joys of conquest which once made every mile a triumph! Today a man must drive his car to death to have anything more serious than arrest happen to him. And now we see women driving motor cars for all the world as if they belonged at the wheel.

Young girls, most of them, hardly out of their teens—they meet you everywhere, garbed in duster and gauntlets, manipulating gears and brakes with the assurance of veterans. Not always in little ladylike cars, either. If you visited last summer a resort blessed with good roads, whether East or West, you saw "sixes" of patrician fame and railroad speed, with big sister sitting coolly at the wheel, pausing at the postoffice on their way for a country spin. And you wondered if the callow youth seated beside the competent pilot would ever have the gumption to handle a real car himself!

An amazing change, even from the viewpoint of only three years ago! Have the women suddenly gained courage, or have motor cars altogether lost their formidable mien?

OLD-TIME IRON FOUNDERS.

Would Prove Their Skill by Making Casts of the Morning Glory and Leaves of Roses.

[Toledo Blade:] Nature and the old-time iron founder were alike in this, that for all they worked with mighty forces, neither could resist the challenge of delicate and perishable things.

Nature made casts of the trilobite, ancestor of the crayfish, and so well that today you can count its eyes and gain an understanding of its anatomical and physiological characteristics. She has left us the true figures of the graphtolites, plume-like organisms with no more substance than the weed waving in the runlet of a spring. She preserved the form of jellyfish, made copies of the wings of butterflies, the feet of cockroaches, the scales of fishes and the spores of ferns, even the borings of worms and the tracks that shellfish made in the mud.

The old-time iron founder used to test his skill by making casts of the morning-glory and the leaves of roses. The trail of his failures was long. His successes were few. So it was with the greater founder. She has left a wonderful record of achievements, some of them in rocks that go almost back to the beginning of life. But her failures must be beyond counting. Whole families and orders and classes of animal and vegetable life must have lived, died and passed away, with not one mold or tracing to tell what like they were.

HAVE TOO MANY WORDS.

Movement in Boston to Revise Spelling Books That They May Contain Words Suited to the Pupil.

[Philadelphia Inquirer:] And now comes along Boston, of all places in the world, to say that we have too many words. An educator has been making an investigation into the matter of spelling in the public schools and he comes to the conclusion that the children are not as proficient in that branch of their work as they should be. He says that the total number of words used by eighth grade pupils in their written work is about 2100, and that the spelling books contain about 10,000 words. As a result of this a spelling book is to be compiled which is to contain words "more nearly suited to the pupil."

It appears that the words which have given the youthful highbrows of Boston the most trouble are "their," "separate" and "there." If it is any consolation it may be said that these innocent words have given some older persons trouble, too. However, the purpose at the Hub seems to be to supply the children with fewer and better words. Whether this is good or desirable can not be determined offhand. A large vocabulary is usually regarded as a mark of culture, although it must be said that the important thing is to write and talk in the way that can be best understood. In short, as has been said, get 100 per cent. out of your words. Do that and it makes no difference whether you use a few or many words.

THE UNCANNY TORPEDO.

The Gyroscope Prevents it Deviating from the Prescribed Direction, and it has a Range of Four Miles.

[Philadelphia Public Ledger:] A torpedo fitted with the newest type of gyroscope rudder is more deadly than a shell from the biggest naval gun, for the accuracy with which it glides through the water to its prey is almost uncanny.

The gyroscope keeps the rudders exactly as they are set before the torpedo is fired, and only by a swift, unexpected move can a ship at which a torpedo is aimed escape.

The vertical rudders steer the torpedo, the horizontal ones keep it at its correct depth under water.

The torpedoes used in the British navy are of three diameters—14, 18 and 21 inches—and they vary in length from 16 to 18 feet.

A torpedo is driven by compressed air, which first passes through the heater, acting through the engines on twin propellers fitted to the tail of the weapon.

The propellers revolve in opposite directions, thus counteracting any tendency to turn right or left on the torpedo's part. The smaller propeller "unscrews" the safety catch of the striker while the torpedo is in the water.

One of the newest types of British torpedo, perfected by Lieut. Hardcastle, R.N., weighs 1600 pounds, and is charged with 250 pounds of guncotton, which explodes on impact by means of an appliance fitted in the nose of the torpedo, and which is sufficient to blow a hole as large as a haystack in the side of a battleship. It has an effective range of about four miles.

The guncotton is kept wet to keep it from exploding until actually struck.

As soon as a torpedo hits its mark it explodes automatically, and there are only two methods of defense against it. One is to locate and shell the attacking torpedo boat or submarine; the other, to drop steel wire nets all round your ship. They are by no means an infallible defense, however.

Anniversary.

CALIPATRIA IN HAPPY MOOD.

Imperial Town Celebrates First Birthday.

Music, Sports and Speeches Mark Event.

Orators Laud Rapid Growth of Community.

CALIPATRIA, April 3.—When Calipatria took a day off Thursday to celebrate the first anniversary of its founding the only persons who did not lay aside their work were the construction crews upon the First National Bank and Peterson buildings. While speakers at the gathering of Imperial Valley residents at Ramada Park told the story of the town's growth, emphasis to their assertions came in the pounding of the carpenters' hammers and the ring of the masons' trowels.

From a whistling station on the Southern Pacific to a town of sixty-five business firms, set in the center of a productive agricultural area of [illegible] cultivated acres, is the summary of the growth of Calipatria.

One of the men who made addresses was Harry H. Clark, who was the first [illegible] of the town. Mr. Clark asserted that no farming town in America could boast a more rapid growth than Calipatria has had. Further tribute was paid by Judge Farr of [illegible] who related that he had lived in the Imperial Valley for twelve years and had seen all the valley towns grow. "None has surprised me as Calipatria has," he said.

[illegible] Schader, general representative of the Imperial Valley Farm Lands Association, gave in his speech the material side of the year's progress. "Where before was nothing," he remarked, "there is now a town of 500 people, with electric light, power and water, an investment in buildings of [illegible]000 and an industrial district having three lumber yards, a cotton gin, a cement products plant, a [illegible] plant and several lesser establishments."

Mr. Schader prophesied a marked [illegible] in the town's prosperity within sixty days, when 250,000 sacks of barley are to be harvested in the Calipatria district. Looking farther ahead he said that surveys had been completed and that rights of way were being secured for an interurban line to [illegible], which would bring the rich country to the west tributary to Calipatria. The construction of this road was to be followed by another, he declared, to reach down toward Holtville, tapping the fertile [illegible] district.

In the afternoon of the birthday celebration representatives from the woman's clubs in the various valley towns were guests of the Calipatria Woman's Club at a reciprocity meeting at the Storms Hotel. Telephone Statistics Reveal that Ontario is Growing at Rate of Ninety Persons Every Month.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ONTARIO, April 3.—That Ontario is growing at the rate of ninety new residents a month, or more than 1000 annually, is the belief of Charles L. Tuttle, manager of the Ontario-Upland Telephone Company, after a careful study of the figures of his company relating to the installation of new telephones.

During the first quarter of the present year the company showed a net gain of sixty telephone subscribers, and based on the conservative ratio of 4.5 persons to every telephone, Ontario is apparently growing at the rate of about ninety persons a month.

Indeed, the city's growth in recent months has been so great that the company is now perfecting plans for the expenditure of $11,700 in extension and improvements to its system. Of this amount, $3700 will go for a new switchboard and kindred improvements at the main central office and the remainder for outside improvements and extensions.

March building permits, according to the figures of City Building Inspector F. E. Alford, were fourteen in number and represent a total expenditure of $20,610. This brings the city's building total for the first quarter of the year 1915 to $46,385. Of the permits issued during March, all were for new dwellings or for additions to residences already built.

Wealth in Water and Cattle.
Main Irrigation Canal, Fresno County.
A San Joaquin Gusher.
Wahtoke district pomelos.

Valley skyscraper.

Fresno county's varied products.

Soil, sunshine and water are in their most happy combination in San Joaquin Valley. The irrigation canal shown in the upper right of the picture is one of the main arteries of the systems which carries Kings River water to the farmers. It has a capacity of 600 cubic feet per second. The well at the lower left of the picture is typical of the artesian gushers of the county. This one is located in the western portion of the county. The building at the lower right is the Griffith-McKenzie building in Fresno. It is ten stories high and is said to be the tallest and finest office building between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Development.

FIFTY MILLIONS TO BE ADDED TO FRESNO COUNTY RESOURCES.

Mammoth Irrigation Project and Subdivision of Big Ranches Bring New Era of Great Prosperity to the Rich San Joaquin Valley.

FRESNO county has got the jump on dull times. The geographical hub of California, the pivot of agricultural expansion, it is setting a pace in development for the rest of the State that will make 1915 a year to date from.

There is no boom in the sense of soaring prices and hysterical enthusiasm. As in other rich counties in California, land is selling for about half of what it is really worth based on its capacity to produce. But in that vast area of the San Joaquin Valley, crops are being planted and land is being prepared for the planting of more crops to so great an extent that many additional millions of wealth are right now in the making.

Everywhere one goes throughout the busy, prosperous county, something is doing. A farm here has increased its productivity 50 per cent. A city there is adding 10 or 15 per cent annually to its population. New orchards are coming into bearing and others are being planted.

Two items alone are sufficient to focus the eyes of the nation on this inland empire. There is a clearly-defined project, well under way toward consummation, to conserve and store in enormous quantities the waters of Kings River. It will cost $8,000,000 to do it, but it will put to work 300,000 acres of land so rich that its full possibilities can only be guessed at. It will add, at a conservative estimate, $50,000,000 to the agricultural wealth of the county and will extend its domain miles beyond the present limits of cultivation.

CUTTING UP BIG RANCHES.

The second item is the subdivision of nearly 100,000 acres of ranch lands. These lands cannot properly be classed as idle or unproductive now, but in large holdings they produce only a small fraction of what they will when they are owned in small tracts and farmed more intensively. These subdivisions are being handled by men of capital, energy and brains. At the low selling prices they will speedily pass into the hands of individuals who will swell the population and resources of the county and add enormously to its productivity.

The combination of rich soil, sunshine and plenty of water is the story of California, and Fresno county has written one of its biggest and most interesting chapters. It has nearly 800,000 acres of land under irrigation—more than any other county in California. That means that it is the largest area of irrigated land in the country.

With the present supply of water from Kings River, the limit of cultivation has been virtually reached. Now it is proposed to add 60 to 75 per cent. more irrigated land by conserving the waters of the river, which is the third largest in the State.

Most of the land under cultivation between the San Joaquin and Kings River is irrigated with the waters of Kings River through the systems of the Fresno Canal and Irrigation Company and the Consolidated Canal Company. These companies are under the same control and they have a combined capacity of 3000 second feet—seven times as much as the flow of the Los Angeles aqueduct.

GREAT IRRIGATION PROJECT.

It is now proposed to form five irrigation districts in Fresno, Tulare and Kings counties, comprising about 500,000 acres. Most of this land will be irrigated by additional water to be taken from Kings River, the water to be made available by building two immense storage reservoirs, for which there are excellent sites.

One site is known as Pine Flat. The basin will be formed by constructing a dam 250 feet high across the main river. This will impound 400,000 acre feet, more than six times the capacity of the Haiwee reservoir. Another reservoir will be formed on the "Mill Creek" site, by constructing a dam 175 feet high. This will impound 200,000 acre feet of water. The total cost of building the reservoirs and extending the main canals will be $8,000,000.

A considerable part of the new supply of water will be taken to the west side of the valley and put on to 200,000 acres of land that is literally as level as a floor. This land is practically idle now, as the rainfall in that portion of the valley is only about half as much as in the eastern districts, and dry farming is precarious.

For years men have contemplated the vast expanse of these western plains with longing eyes. They beheld it in its virginity, ready for the plow and the seed, with no need of levelling scrapers or other preparation. They declared that no finer body of land exists on the face of the earth. The soil is rich and deep, free from hardpan and alkali. The climatic conditions are ideal for alfalfa, deciduous fruits, grapes and other high priced crops.

TO WIN FIFTY MILLIONS.

Without water it is worth practically nothing. The life giving moisture to be brought from the snow-capped mountains will make it a garden of beauty and productivity. Fifty million dollars is a low estimate of its intrinsic value then; far too low after a few years when development has been continued to include some of the high-priced crops that have helped to make Fresno county rich.

L. A. Nares of Fresno, president of the irrigation companies now in operation in Fresno county, saw these lands in a different light. They brought to him, not regret, but a vision of opportunity. One of the biggest men in the irrigation business in the West, he believed an investment to bring water from the snow-fed streams that swell the Kings River would be speedily returned a thousand fold. His associates shared his belief. I Tielman, his chief engineer, who knows every inch of the valley and its irrigation possibilities, reported, after investigation, that the project was entirely feasible with no engineering difficulties at all. It seemed formidable only because of its magnitude.

Mr. Nares and other men engaged in the irrigation business have sought and obtained the co-operation of landowners in the districts to be served. These landowners have organized and selected a Conservation Committee. The committee is working in conjunction with the canal companies. Just now their efforts are being directed toward securing necessary legislation in the way of constitutional amendments.

The next step which will be taken soon, will be to canvass the five districts and learn how many landowners desire to participate in the project. Then the districts will be organized and bonds issued. Mr. Tielman says it will take about two years to complete the works and get the water on the land.

THE PRESENT SYSTEM.

The canal companies have invested already about $3,000,000 in irrigation works. The Fresno district has 332 miles of main canals in one unit. The Consolidated district has 200 miles of main canals. The entire irrigated district is a network of main and lateral ditches. One of the main canals that runs near Fresno city carries 600 second feet of water, 50 per cent. more than the capacity of the Los Angeles aqueduct.

Water is cheap in Fresno county. In one district it costs the farmer 62½ cents an acre foot and in the other 75 cents. The rate in the new districts will, of course, be higher, on account of the greater cost of getting the water to the lands.

In addition to water brought directly from Kings River to the new districts there will be a considerable additional supply by pumping. In fact, throughout Fresno county return waters, available by pumping, are a valuable asset. Generation of electric energy will be a side product of the new project of great value. This factor makes the enterprise doubly attractive and reduces the burden of cost to the landowners.

Next to the big irrigation project the most impressive phases of development are the tendency toward intensive farming and the subdivision of big ranches. Both mean increased population and greater production and both will exert a powerful influence this year.

DOS PALOS SUBDIVISION.

The Dos Palos rancho of 15,000 acres is just being subdivided and put on the market in small farms of from ten acres up. This fine body of land is in the northwestern portion of the county, just across the border line of Merced county. It was formerly known as the Miller & Lux ranch and is now owned by W. I. Hollingsworth of Los Angeles and other capitalists.

The land is remarkably good. It is free from alkali and hardpan and the soil is forty to fifty feet deep. There are fifteen large, deep wells in that district and two of them are on the tract.

An experimental orchard has been planted to demonstrate the relative merits of plum trees, pears, peaches, grapes, etc. Muscats and Thompson's seedlings have been already raised there successfully and profitably. The land is very level and splendidly located. At the low price of a little over $100 an acre with water, its owners believe, it will speedily pass into the hands of farmers who will make it yield twenty-fold what it does now.

The selling prices of land on this subdivision are influenced by those that obtain in most portions of the valley. One landowner, who has operated in Fresno county for nearly twenty years, explains the low prices of the lands by calling attention to the immensity of the valley. "San Joaquin Valley," he said, "is big enough and its lands are rich enough to easily support twenty times as many people as we now have and even then there would be no crowding.

"If there was only a little land, the demand for it would send prices soaring, but at the present time there is more land than people to till it, and almost all of it is of equal excellence. San Joaquin Valley is nearly 500 miles long and its width varies from twenty to sixty miles. It contains 33,000,000 acres. More than one year and more than twenty years will be necessary to develop this vast domain, but the time is coming when the valley will be more thickly settled and the land will be valued at its true worth, reckoned on the basis of its producing capacity."

VALLEY GARDEN FARMS.

Another big subdivision contains 30,000 acres and is part of the ranch once known as the James ranch and later as the Graham ranch. It is in the western portion of the county and has just been put on the market as the Valley Garden Farms. It is owned by Benjamin F. Graham, W. H. Holliday, Marco Hellman, W. L. Valentine and W. E. Keller of Los Angeles.

The owners have adopted a unique plan of placing this land in small tracts in the hands of farmers. The purchaser is given ten years in which to pay for his farm and is required to pay practically nothing down, provided he is prepared to make improvements necessary to give him a good start. The owners believe that, under this plan, the land will actually pay for itself. It is being handled in twenty-acre units.

The soil is black silt loam, is thirty feet or more deep and is free from alkali and hardpan. There is ample water, some of which comes by gravity flow from Kings River and the remainder from forty artesian wells. The new town of San Joaquin is in the center of the tract and none of the land is more than a mile and a half from the railroad.

This tract will be largely devoted to alfalfa and dairying and fruit culture. A creamery is being established at San Joaquin and a demonstration farm with a farm adviser, whose services will be available for all the farmers in the tract. Development in this portion of the valley is expected to be rapid and the products of the tract next year will materially add to the county's resources.

North of the city of Fresno, extending to the San Joaquin River, lies a body of land that has lain dormant until very recently. Development has progressed ten to twenty miles in every other direction from the city, but the twin bugbears of "hog wallow" and hardpan hemmed in the city in that direction. It was for years nothing but a barley field and people didn't see much in the property, because it was not level and, because it has a substratum of hardpan.

Unimproved, undeveloped, it constituted a barrier between the people of the city and the San Joaquin River. It is probably true that until recently only a small per cent. of the people of Fresno city had ever seen the beautiful stream of water that flows only twelve miles from their doors.

Ten thousand acres of this land has been purchased and improved by C. W. Gates and Stoddard Jess of Los Angeles and J. C. Forkner of Fresno. They arranged for the construction of a street railway line through the tract from Fresno city to the river, constructed a fine boulevard, 120 feet wide and lined with trees, and erected a clubhouse on the bluff overlooking the river.

It cost $30 an acre to level this land and $260,000 to build the railroad. More money is being spent in creating a park at the river end of the line and in bringing modern improvements to the subdivision. But the menaces of "hog wallow" and hardpan have been dispelled. The venture has already been justified from the standpoint of the owners and the big improvement is a magnificent asset to Fresno city and county.

Thirty-five hundred acres of the land have been levelled. There is an abundance of water on the entire tract. Experiments have proved absolutely that the hardpan can be overcome by "shooting." It costs about $6 an acre to blow great holes in the ground and an excellent orchard district has been created. With their roots running below the hardpan, trees are said to do fully as well as where there is no such stratum. For vegetables and other crops, there is plenty of soil on top of the hard stratum.

Within a few minutes ride from Fresno the tract is being built up to suburban homes of more than ordinary excellence. A hundred acres of the tract has been highly improved in one-acre parcels, each acre having water, electricity and telephone connections. It is the only big subdivision in San Joaquin Valley that has cement walks, curbs, electricity and highly improved boulevards. The remainder of the tract is being sold in parcels varying from two and a half to forty acres. It will soon be built up to suburban homes and orchards and will constitute an attractive intervening country between the city and the river, which have been brought together by the development of the land and attendant construction of the railroad.

Product of the snow-capped mountains.

One of the many mountain streams that feed Kings River whose waters, spread over the land, have made Fresno county crops a wonder of the world. These streams create freshet conditions in the early summer and a project now under way contemplates the conservation of the excess flow by impounding enormous quantities in storage reservoirs.

IMMIGRATION TO FRESNO CERTAIN.

Aside from the big factors of increased water supply and present-day subdivision there are many reasons why Fresno county is sure to grow rapidly in the next few years. Transportation facilities are getting better. The market is improving as well as marketing methods. The tendency toward intensive farming is strong now and growing stronger. The big ranch of yesterday and the big farm of today will give way to smaller and more thoroughly cultivated tracts that will produce much more to the acre.

Fresno county expects to benefit by immigration to a much greater extent than other portions of California. The county now has nearly thirty nationalities represented in colonies of good size. When the war is over these colonies will attract, each of their kind, thousands of men and women from Europe. Fresno county, it is believed, will get a greater proportion of immigrants than any other county and they will be better sustained.

UP AND COMING.

Residents of Reedley in Fresno County Organize Chamber of Commerce with Hundred Members.

With over one hundred charter members enrolled there was established on March 26 a Chamber of Commerce in the town of Reedley, in Fresno county. The organization proposes to work constantly for the upbuilding of the community.

Since the new line of the Santa Fe Railroad has been built six miles east of Reedley, adjoining the foothill section, this part of Fresno county has taken on new life, and the foothill section is being largely developed both to citrus and deciduous fruits. The foothills directly east of Reedley are particularly adapted to olives, some of the most noted producing groves in the county being situated in this vicinity.

WHAT BIG CROPS YIELD ANNUALLY.

Fresno county is worth more than $160,000,000. It produced last year about $55,000,000. It has 1,728,000 acres of agricultural land of which 867,840 acres have been developed. Of this 500,000 acres are under cultivation.

Fresno is the greatest raisin-producing center in the world. Ten per cent. of the county's annual income is from this source. The production is almost 100,000 pounds. More than 122,000 acres are devoted to grapes. Thirty per cent. of the grapes are converted into wine, 60 per cent. into raisins and 10 per cent. are packed and shipped out as table grapes.

Fresno is the leading sweet-wine district of the State with twenty-seven wineries, some of them the largest in the world and twenty-nine distilleries. The estimated production of sweet wine this year is 7,000,000 gallons, and of brandy, 1,000,000 gallons. There will also be produced about 150,000 gallons of dry wine and 50,000 gallons of grape juice.

Fresno county has 3,000,000 deciduous fruit trees and healthier, more productive trees cannot be found. Small orchards are the rule, which means careful attention and high-class results. The annual peach and nectarine crop averages $2,400,000, and many orchards yield $100 to $150 per acre. Oranges, figs, olives and prunes are grown extensively. Extremely favorable climatic conditions chiefly account for the superlative quality of Fresno's dried-fruit output.

Soil and climate in Fresno county appear to be "just right" for berries. Many thousands of dollars' worth of strawberries are ripened every year in February and shipped to eastern markets. Last year's crop of alfalfa was worth $2,500,000. Eight tons to the acre was the average yield. Fresno's nurseries are second to none. They produce annually more than 1,500,000 deciduous trees, 500,000 citrus trees and 3,000,000 grape vines. Their products are shipped all over the world.

Fresno county, with an annual output of nearly $3,500,000, is one of the four leading dairy counties in the State. With hundreds of thousands of acres of additional dairy land to come under cultivation when the waters of Kings River are conserved this output is expected to be doubled.

Cattle, hogs and poultry all do well in Fresno county. The profits of cattle raising alone this year will exceed $3,500,000. Beef and mutton will bring $400,000 more, and poultry nearly $450,000.

ACTUAL RESULTS ON SMALL FARMS.

What can a man do with a small acreage and a "shoestring" in Fresno county? That is the question on the lips of thousands of newcomers. Here is what some men and women have done:

C. H. Schmidt was a high school teacher who left teaching for fruit growing and dairying. Six years ago he planted ten acres near Selma—one acre to alfalfa, four acres to Tuscan cling peaches, five acres to Phillips cling peaches. He has personally taken care of his orchard and sells his fruit under contract. Last year his net returns were $1750 in addition to alfalfa. Mr. Schmidt says that ten acres in Fresno county will keep a man comfortably employed, educate his children and keep a bank account growing.

J. B. Evans has three acres near Sanger. Last year the proceeds from berries and fruit amounted to $461.95, in addition to oranges, cherries, lemons, almonds, figs, walnuts and almonds for home use.

A barber, out of health and with practically no money, bought forty acres of land in the western portion of the county a few years ago almost entirely on credit. He planted barley and alfalfa first and later set out some trees. He has a house, teams, hogs and a jersey cow all paid for, as well as the land. He has recently been offered $9000 for his place, a profit obtained in only a few years, besides a living in the meantime.

B. J. Gard has ten acres four miles northwest of Fresno. He has been there six years and has six and one-half acres producing. The remaining three and one-half acres are just becoming productive. Last year he sold $957.50 worth of fruit, berries, vegetables, chickens and eggs. He says his ten acres in full bearing this year will produce $1500.

Mrs. Hattie B. Gibson was left a widow with four small children a few years ago. Her only resource was ten acres of land near Fresno. She has made a good living from her ten acres (in fruit trees) and has a comfortable home and independence.

W. C. MacFarlane with ten acres near Hanford has saved money from the proceeds, invested it and is worth nearly $50,000.

J. M. Hacock has made a big start raising poultry on only one acre close to Fresno. He has built a nice bungalow on the proceeds of his efforts and his poultry, and has recently acquired ten acres more.

Progressing.

NEW BOULEVARD TAKING SHAPE.

"MOUNTAIN TO SEA" ROUTE NEARER REALIZATION.

Over Four Miles More of Paving Assured on Western Avenue. Five Miles now Under Way—Highway to Extend from Griffith Park to San Pedro.

By vote of the Board of Supervisors last Monday, the macadamizing of four and one-half miles more of Western-avenue boulevard was assured. This section of the boulevard joins on to that portion of the boulevard which is now under contract with Brashear-Burns Company and which extends from Manchester avenue to Monte Vista avenue. The stretch now about to be improved extends from Monte Vista avenue south.

Work is at present going on in the Lomita district on a section of paving two and three-quarter miles in length and three and one-half miles of Western avenue is under asphalt paving proceedings from Santa Barbara avenue south. This makes a total of twelve and three-quarter miles that is either to be paved with asphalt or with the oil macadam used in the good roads in the county. The work is being carried on under the road improvement act of 1907, wherein the county and the property owners jointly stand the expense of the improvement.

This development work, which means so much to the city as a whole and particularly to the western portion of Los Angeles, is the outcome of the efforts of the Western Avenue Boulevard "Mountains to the Sea" Association. It is the plan eventually to extend the boulevard from Griffith Park to San Pedro.

L. E. Shepherd, president of the Southwest Land Company, and Col. George B. McCaughna are the two committeemen-at-large of the association. Both report that the completion of the great boulevard plan is practically a certainty.

SALES REPORTED.

Sales in Orange Grove Addition, one of the promising tracts of the Fresno district, are reported by W. E. Bush & Co. as follows: To Dr. W. H. Barr an entire block of lots, on which the purchaser will build a fine home; to A. J. McKellow, an improved ten-acre plat; to Mrs. Dora Pipig, a forty-acre vineyard, and to B. M. Stone a twenty-acre orchard and vineyard.

New Rock Crusher at Baldwin Park to Turn Out Seventy-five Carloads of Material Daily.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BALDWIN PARK, April 3.—The Russell, Greene & Foell Company of Los Angeles has completed its rock crusher here and will begin operating at once. The plant was put in at a cost of about $125,000. The crusher will give employment to about forty men and has a capacity of seventy-five cars daily. It is located one mile northeast of Baldwin Park on the Southern Pacific Railroad. Frank Neff will be the superintendent.

LARGE AREA PLANTED.

The James R. H. Wagner Company reports that trees have been planted on 260 acres of the Nuevo Rancho tract in the Lakeview-Perris-Hemet Valley district during the last three months. This is said to almost double the acreage set to fruit trees during the planting season of 1914. More than half the acreage planted this season on the property has been set out to apricots, a considerable portion also being given over to peaches. A few walnut and olive groves were also planted and one grower set out citrus trees.

A recent purchaser of Nuevo acreage is T. A. Morris of Santa Ana, who has bought five acres.

TO LEASE OCEAN FRONT.

EL SEGUNDO, April 3.—The Potassium Company is arranging to lease from the city of Los Angeles a portion of the ocean front adjoining El Segundo. This company has been trying for some time to get a location along the shore at this point, and it is now stated that arrangements are practically completed. The company plans to manufacture potash from seaweed. Officers of the company state they will endeavor to have oil piped to their plant direct from the Standard Oil refinery at El Segundo. About thirty men, it is said, will be employed at the outset.

Successful Farmers Are Coming to San Joaquin Valley

The San Joaquin Valley, more than any other locality in California, is attracting Successful Farmers.

Agriculturalists of long experience and keen success are coming to this section because they can see and realize the productiveness of the soil.

They realize that in the San Joaquin Valley they can year after year produce bigger and better crops.

They know that a twelve months' growing season and a rotation of crops is a positive asset.

And they know that every farmer in the San Joaquin Valley is absolutely independent of rainfall the entire year.

Investigating farther they are finding here a deep, rich, responsive soil, land that is level and a climate that is ideal.

Lastly, they are finding here land of proven qualities, cheaper than in the Middle West—land of such opportunities that they are coming by the score.

In the choicest section of the San Joaquin Valley we have several tracts of the finest agricultural land with an abundance of water, in parcels of

A Four-Year-Old Knight.

[Pall Mall Gazette:] "Butcher" Cumberland enjoys the distinction of being the youngest member ever admitted to the Order of the Bath, which has now been added to the Grand Duke Nicholas's list of distinctions. When George II reconstituted this order in 1725 he personally invested a number of knights, including the future victor of Culloden, then a child of 4.

In an account of the ceremony written by John Pine there is a full page illustration of the tiny knight presenting his sword at the altar. Pine tells us that at the close of the investure the new knights walked in procession from Westminster Abbey to the chapter house. At the abbey door stood the King's master cook, in his linen apron and with his chopping knife in his hand, saying to each in turn: "Sir, you know what great oath you have taken, which if you keep it will be great honor to you, but if you break it I shall be compelled by my office to hack off your spurs from your heels."

Speed in Naval Warfare.

[New York World:] The Seydlitz, the Molke and the Derflinger owed their escape to their superior speed. The Bluecher was sunk because she could not get away from the British battle cruisers that had trapped the German fleet.

The Bluecher could make only 25.5 knots, but this is .5 knots faster than any battle ship or armored cruiser in the American Navy. The Seydlitz and the Moltke are twenty-nine-knot ships and the Derflinger is rated at twenty-seven knots. This is one knot slower than the Lion and the Tiger, but it seems to have been sufficient to save her.

Our fastest armored cruisers make only twenty-two knots, and none of our battleships can exceed twenty-one knots. American naval constructors seem to have no respect for speed. With the exception of torpedo boats and destroyers there is not a ship in the United States Navy which could overhaul the slowest of the big battle cruisers that were engaged in the North Sea battle, or could make her escape if necessary.

Cemeteries for Dogs.

[St. Louis Globe-Democrat:] Nearly every country house in England in these days has its dogs' garden of sleep, where pets are laid away to rest among the flowers that are as carefully tended as those in the pleasure grounds. It was Queen Alexandra who originated the idea, and her dogs' cemetery at Sandringham is the most perfect thing of its kind in England. There is a marble tombstone for each grave, on which is recorded the life history of the dead favorite. It was only the other day that the stone was put up to Caesar, King Edward's favorite terrier, and on it his faithfulness is recorded in the words of the Queen herself—"When his master died," the engraving goes on to explain, "he fretted and declined to be comforted." Nearly all the smart American women who are dog lovers have such little cemeteries; indeed, many go so far as to place wreaths on these little graves on anniversaries, though Queen Alexandra, who is so sensible in all things, does not go to this extreme."

News From the Great California Oil Fields

Coalinga.

MARATHON HAS GOOD SHOWING.

Well in Devil's Den Looks Better than Usual.

Thousand Barrels is Yield of Mohawk Producer.

Kern Trading Makes Quick Time in Drilling.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

COALINGA, April 3.—In the Devil's Den, the Marathon Oil Company, section 13, 25-18, is down 2655 feet, with eight and one-half-inch casing, in brown shale. There has been more or less gas pressure nearly all the way from about 1700 feet down, with slight traces of oil, but no well defined pay sand.

The oil has been carried in small seams of shale, and when gas has been encountered with the oil, blowouts have resulted from time to time. In no case, however, has anything approaching commercial quantities of petroleum been encountered. Blowouts of the character mentioned in similar formations have occurred in quite a few other wells in the Devil's Den, but no well has yet been a commercial producer.

In the Marathon well at present, however, the gas is reported unusually strong and the showing of light-grade oil in the sumps is greater than usual so that the manager, C. F. Daugherty, reports that he is much encouraged by the showing.

Pluto Property.

Just what will be done with the Pluto property, section 19, 25-19, Devil's Den, is still a matter of doubt. Hanford people recently acquired control of the company.

Their first action has been to employ Manager Daugherty of the Marathon to pull the casing from the old well. He has the six and one-fourth and ten-inch out, and is working on the twelve and one-half.

Coalinga Mohawk.

Nine hundred barrels of 31.5 gravity oil is being obtained from the Coalinga Mohawk well No. 6, section 12, 20-15, Coalinga, just south of the Turner property of the Royal Dutch-Shell. The depth is 4400 feet. Much difficulty was encountered in shutting off water in this well. No. 5 has also just had its water cemented off after much trouble, and No. 4 is to be given similar treatment.

No. 1 has been a fine producer ever since it came in during March, 1910. It started with 5000 barrels daily, and is still producing 500, testing 31 gravity.

A new superintendent, Phil Daubenspek, formerly in charge of the Turner, and therefore familiar with this part of the field, has recently been put in charge, and he has been experimenting successfully in locating and curing water trouble.

Kern Trading.

Drilling to a depth of 2900 feet with ten-inch casing and shutting off water in ninety days' time is the record of the K.T. & O., in its No. 38, section 19, 20-15, southeast quarter.

The twelve-and-one-half-inch casing was carried down to 2100 feet. The oil sand is expected at about 3400 feet. An excellent well is anticipated from the fact that its neighbor on the east has averaged 700 barrels daily, since the latter half of 1912. This last well has produced at slight cost and with little trouble.

In the well now under construction, No. 38, the formation has been ideal for rapid drilling.

Healthfulness of Vegetables.

[Philadelphia Press:] Dean Watts of the Pennsylvania State College was given the housewife something upon which to ponder. Speaking before the Philadelphia Grange at Bustleton, he asserted that the use of more vegetables at the family table was not only a necessity to lower the high cost of living, but that it would be a preventive of illness and place a clamp on doctors' bills.

Vegetables, too, are the more healthful, this educator and expert states. He declares that the eating of meat in such large quantities by the American people leads to ill-health.

Decrease in population, too, declares the dean, has always been followed by a larger use of meat as diet. This is explained, of course, as due to the less use of land for farming purposes, hence a stimulus for killing cattle, sheep and all meat-producing animals. Statistics, the dean stated, showed that where a vegetable or milk diet reigned the mortality was lessened.

Exclusion of meat as a diet Dean Watts does not favor. He believes that it is an essential in every family. However, he does declare that America has much to learn of the nutritive value of peas, beans, etc., and that the sooner housewives realize their excellence and strength, the better for them.

An Officer's Wasted Efforts.

[Tit-Bits:] The recruits were going through their first course of musketry and they were in charge of a full-grown second lieutenant, who was trying to show his authority, together with his great knowledge of musketry. Sauntering up to the latest recruit, he said:

"See here, my man, this thing is a rifle; this is the barrel, this is the butt and this is where you put the cartridge in."

The recruit seemed to be taking it all in, so the officer, continuing, said:

"You put the weapon to your shoulder; these little things on the barrel are called sights; then to fire you pull this little thing, which is called the trigger. Now smarten yourself up, and remember what I have told you, and, by the way, what trade did you follow before you enlisted? A collier, I suppose."

"No, sir," came the reply. "I worked as a gunsmith for the government small arms factory."

A Hard Hit.

[Judge:] Mr. Bore—I don't see why people keep diaries, do you?

Miss Lenore—Why, to write down their thoughts, keep a record of their affairs, and—

Mr. Bore (interrupting her)—But that's all foolishness. I can keep those in my head.

Miss Lenore—That's a very good way; but then, not everybody has the room.

LEASES HOLDING NEAR ITS GUSHER.

LAKEVIEW NO. 2 TAKES OVER ADDITIONAL PROPERTIES.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

MARICOPA, April 2.—The Lakeview No. 2 Oil Company has leased 160 acres on section 34, 12-23, close to the location of its famous gusher. The land comprises the extension lease, formerly held by Julius Fried of Los Angeles, one of the owners of the land where the original Lakeview gusher was located, and the South Midway lease declared forfeited by the former holders, some time since, in an action in the Superior Court. A rig is already under construction by the Lakeview on the Extension lease. There are producing wells on the South Midway.

The Spreckels well No. 3, cemented last week at 2415 feet, with the six-and-one-fourthinch casing, will be drilled out at once. The oil sand is expected in a few feet, and the well will be carried into it with four and one-half-inch casing. A feature of this well is that the water stratum found in all the others drilled by the company was not encountered.

The cementing was done during the visit to the property of John Hargreaves, the Australian hydraulic engineer, sent to California by his government to investigate oil well drilling and management in this State. He was given the opportunity of watching the work.

READY FOR DISTRIBUTION.

Bulletin Dealing Exhaustively With Petroleum Industry is Published by State Mining Bureau.

The California State Mining Bureau has bulletin No. 69, dealing with the petroleum industry of California, ready for distribution to the public. The publication consists of a 500-page book and a separate folio of maps.

In preparing this report a thorough review of the oil industry was made and all of the many phases of the subject are for the first time presented in a single publication. It is expected that the information will be valuable to all persons who are interested in any manner in the oil business of the State.

The extent and productiveness of oil land in California is outlined. The cost of drilling wells and recovering the oil is gone into very thoroughly. The financial or business aspect of the industry has received special attention.

The maps of the developed fields and many prospective areas, are bound in a most convenient form, and clearly show all the wells, pipe lines and land ownership. This feature is of the greatest value to every oil operator or other person even slightly interested in oil lands.

The bulletin and maps will be mailed upon request addressed to the State Mining Bureau, Ferry Building, San Francisco, Cal. The law requires that a charge be made to cover the cost of printing, which, in this case, is $2.

Geographical Doubles.

[London Chronicle:] The "doubles" of geographical nomenclature are endless. They may be partly accounted for by the tendency of all people to assimilate place-names to something with which they are familiar. The Galicia, to which our eyes are turned now, takes its name from the town of Halicz, but the Hungarian King who annexed the region at the end of the twelfth century called himself "Rex Galatiae"—presumably recalling the country in Asia Minor known to us through St. Paul's epistle. And now we call this country by the same name as the northwestern corner of Spain once inhabited by the Callaici or Gallaeci. And close by are the Carpathian Mountains, which have no connection with the Carpathian Sea, the part of the Mediterranean near Rhodes, named after the Island of Carpathus.

Chinese the First Locksmiths.

[Wide World:] The earliest locks known to man were the Chinese make. Although it is impossible to tell the exact date of those still extant, they are wonderfully well made, and as strong as any manufactured in Europe up to the middle of the eighteenth century. The Chinese locksmith of today uses exactly the same kind of tools that his forefathers had, for they are very simple and primitive. He carries all his impediments in two cabinets, sitting on one and working at the other. When he has finished all the work available in one neighborhood he fastens the two cabinets to a bamboo rod and slings it over his shoulder. He tramps through the towns burdened in this way, and stops when he is called, much as a scissors grinder or umbrella mender does in our country.

Ales of the Middle Ages.

[London Chronicle:] There are many other ales besides the Scots ale brewed from heather, whose recipes are secrets of the past. No one knows for instance how the nut-brown ale of the Middle Ages was brewed, or the famous "Dagger" ale, which was to be obtained at only one inn in London, the Dagger, in Holborn, an Elizabethan resort of lawyers and their clerks. Then there was the popular but mysterious "three threads," with which London citizens slaked their thirst centuries ago. All have long since vanished, but as a compensation there are still numerous favorite ales — not the largely advertised beverages which everyone knows, but the special tipple of various famous hostelries which are known only to certain explorers of London.

Tige had Right of Way.

[New York Tribune:] The story of how three lake steamers turned out of their courses to save a dog was told when the W. H. Bixby of Detroit docked at Duluth.

The Bixby had forged ahead two miles before it could be put back. Then, so that Tige might not be run down, it signaled the steamer T. F. Cole, which had been following it, and a passenger steamer of the Northern Navigation Company, which was downbound, to turn out. The Cole steamed south and the other vessel north. The Bixby lowered a boat and Tige, swimming bravely but almost exhausted, was picked up.

Fined for Overeating.

[Pall Mall Gazette:] In view of the serious shortage of food in Germany, a Berlin journal suggests that persons found guilty of over-feeding should be made liable to imprisonment. Such a law was actually promulgated in France during the reign of Charles IX, when the cost of living reached an unconscionable height. It was then ordained that no person should eat more than three courses at a meal, the amount to be served at each course being also prescribed. Heavy fines were imposed for any breach of this law.

AFTER OIL IN MODOC COUNTY.

GOVERNMENT ASKED TO LOOK INTO POSSIBILITIES NEAR OREGON LINE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, April 3.—Modoc county people think they have located oil indications at Fairport—almost on the Oregon line—of sufficient importance to justify a Federal inquiry, and they have asked Congressman Raker to get the United States Geological Survey to make an investigation.

For a long time there have been those who have believed oil exists near and under Goose Lake, which lies about two-thirds in Modoc county and about one-third in Lake county, Oregon. It is said that oil springs bubble up through the water in the southern part of the lake.

Until a few years ago Modoc county, lying in the extreme northeastern corner of California, was without railroad transportation. It is still none too well explored in parts; hence the fact that no pool or belt of oil has ever been set on maps in this region, does not necessarily prove anything at all, or perhaps gives no ground even for forming an opinion.

Should oil be found, it will be the only discovery ever made in California north of San Francisco, except in Humboldt county, where indications have been struck but where oil has never developed.

SHELLS AHEAD AT FAIR.

The Shell Company of California seems to have gained the inside track at the Panama-Pacific exposition by getting the first concession for garage and gasoline supply stations on the fair grounds. The concession apparently covers almost every important approach and exit for autos, so that the motorist desiring a fresh supply of gasoline is almost compelled to buy Shell petrol.

It looks as though the Shell managers acted while their opponents slept. The opponents are now angrily protesting and want to get positions too. The Associated, in particular, has raised a protest to the exposition management, declaring that as a California company it should be favored above a European concern, all of whose shareholders are in Great Britain and Holland.

The Shells reply that they are spending $7,000,000 or $8,000,000 in California and are therefore entitled to just as much consideration as any other company and that, as they got in first, whatever exclusive advantage they may reap thereby is justly theirs.

Nutrition of Potato Flour.

[London Chronicle:] Experiments carried out by a Danish medical man seem to show that potato flour, which is now largely used for bread-making in Germany, has strong nutritious properties. In order to prove that albumen is not essential to the maintenance of the human system, Dr. Hindhede has since 1895 lived for months at a stretch on potatoes for his staple diet, flavored only very occasionally with butter and milk. He further induced his gardener, Frederick Madsen, to live on potatoes for 300 days at a stretch, his average consumption being nine pounds a day. During the experimental period Madsen was so closely watched that his master can vouch that he tasted no other food, yet the diet left him stronger than he had ever been. But what a life!

Quick-witted Atkins.

[Tit Bits:] The chaplain-general tells two good stories of quick repartee by soldiers. The hero of each was an orderly. Thomas Atkins, No. 1, was being impressively warned by a hospital sister before going on night duty against the criminal offense of falling asleep.

"It's all right, miss; there ain't no fear of that," he said, with a twinkle in his eye. "I was a poacher before I joined!"

Thomas Atkins, No. 2, was being put through his paces by another hospital sister as regards his practical knowledge.

"And what would you do in case of collapse?" she asked.

"Give him some brandy, miss."

"But supposing you had no brandy?"

"Sure, then I'd promise him some, miss."

The Pastor's Opportunity.

[Cleveland Plain Dealer:] The Missouri pastor looked over his glasses and shook his uncut locks.

"Carrying out my original declaration," he said, "I am about to call the names of those persons who are now asleep in this congregation. John Stackpole."

There was no response.

"John Stackpole."

The stout man in the second pew stirred reluctantly.

"John Stackpole!"

The stout man stirred again.

"Be down in a minute," he drowsily called. "Keep things hot for me."

The pastor's voice rang out.

"You're going down, all right, John Stackpole," he roared. "And things will be kept very, very hot for you! Let us now sing the ninety-ninth hymn."

The Bachelors of Korea.

[London Chronicle:] Trieste, which once proposed to make marriage compulsory, might have taken a leaf out of the book of Korea. In Korea until comparatively recent a man was not allowed the dignity of trousers until he had taken to himself a wife. Your gay bachelor had to wear a skirt, and brand himself in the public view as one who had not yet attained a position in which he could support a wife.

Powdered Glass to Stop Bullets.

[New York Herald:] Powdered glass forming a layer between two moderately thin plates of steel has been proved much more effective than a thick plate of steel for the purpose of stopping bullets. Although this method of armoring automobiles for the front has not been adopted by the British makers, it has worked successfully with the Belgians. The new British motor armor plate, which is only a quarter of an inch thick, has, however, withstood severe tests. When the Belgian armored automobiles are badly injured by shot and shell they are sent to London for repair.

China's National Expenses.

[Indianapolis News:] How China runs the governmental machinery without the enormous drain that other nations inflict upon its people is one of the thing other nations are trying to find out. Our government at Washington spends $8 a year per capita. But China spends 20 cents a year per capita. China lives somehow without a navy, with a small army, though it is now growing fast, and with no financial system.

UNIONS ARE UNNECESSARY.

Scientific Management is Democratic but is Opposed by Unions Because they Won't Learn About It.

[American Justice:] Ida M. Tarbell, writer and investigator, in her testimony before the United States Commission on Industrial Relations, advocated scientific management of industrial institutions as the best means for removing discord.

"Does efficiency preclude the idea of democracy in the management of industry?" asked Chairman Walsh.

"It is the most democratic thing you can think of," Miss Tarbell said. "The man in overalls goes right to the office and complains. I think the unions are doing wrong in not going into the shops and learning all about it. To say at the start that it can't be done is wrong."

"Do you consider the union essential to the protection of the workmen where they have scientific management?"

"No, it is not essential."

Commissioner Lennon asked why, in Miss Tarbell's opinion, the unions are opposed to scientific management.

"The testimony before this commission," said Miss Tarbell, "would indicate that one of the reasons is that they know so little about it, and don't want to learn."

Miss Tarbell's opinion is that scientific management will prevail whether the unions want it or not, and that it is foolish for them to oppose it.

OPERATES AN OPEN SHOP.

George H. Ellis was Elected to the Massachusetts Senate Largely on His Attitude Towards Labor.

[Boston Transcript:] Mr. George H. Ellis of Framingham was elected to the State Senate by running ahead of his ticket though his opponent exploited his attitude toward organized labor. Mr. Ellis runs an open-shop printing office, and when attacked by his opponent, he said:

"I shoveled gravel as a boy, and I will shovel gravel again as a man before I will run a 'closed shop.'

"There hangs conspicuously in our counting-room, and I think in the counting-room of most of the large printing offices in Boston, except the so-called State Printing Office and the municipal plant, the following notices, drawn some ten years ago by Mr. Louis D. Brandeis:

"'This is an Open Office.

"'No discrimination is to be made between union and non-union employees.

"'It is one of the terms of employment that no employee shall refuse at any time to handle material on the ground that it has been prepared by union or non-union men or to work with union or non-union men, and that no employee shall subject any fellow-employee to annoyance because he is a union or non-union man.'

"For this principle I stand and for this principle I spoke at Framingham.

"I have no sympathy with the 'closed shop' whether closed to 'union' or 'non-union' men. I have many times paid tribute to organized labor and to the good it has done even with its limitations, many of which it is outgrowing; but I will not stand for its abuses, among which the 'closed shop,' un-American as it is, stands pre-eminent."

CHINA USING CONDENSED MILK.

Their Habit of Drinking Tea Without Cream May Have Been Result of Scarcity of Lacteal Fluid.

[Indianapolis News:] It is generally believed, in this country, at least, that Chinese and Japanese drink their tea without sugar or cream because they find the natural flavor of the beverage much more attractive. When sugar and cream are added a new drink is made. Others who have tried the custom have generally compromised by abandoning the cream, but retaining the sugar. Now, it seems, that the oriental devotion to tea without cream or sugar has been largely a matter of habit.

A condensed milk company, seeking a wider field for its sales, sent a corps of investigators to China. The situation was gone into and a test made on condensed cream for ice cream. The novelty proved attractive, and now numerous native restaurants serve it. Thus encouraged, the manufacturers attempted to introduce condensed cream for use in tea. It was conjectured that, as there were few cows in some parts of China, there was a scarcity of milk. An advertising campaign was begun and the results have been amazing. The consular agent is led to comment: "Perhaps, after all, the orientals have taken their tea clear because there was no milk to put in it, and not because they thought the addition of milk ruined the beverage."

China, with its millions, consumes immense quantities of tea, and it must be encouraging to the manufacturers to contemplate the trained appetites that await them. This recalls the case of a young man who always had lived in New York, and whose views were correspondingly restricted. Going to a smaller city, where there were real cows, he complained that "Your cream is simply abominable. Now, in New York we have a special kind, and I won't be happy till I get it." The board-house proprietor engaged another milkman, but still the boarder complained. Finally a light dawned on her, and she purchased a can of condensed cream. The ecstatic smile with which the wise man from the east drank his coffee—or tea—was reward enough. He had what he was used to.

AMMUNITION TO KILL.

A Ton of Cannon Balls is Required to Kill a Man or Seven Pounds of Cartridges for Small Arms.

[London Tit-Bits:] For every man killed in battle one ton of cannon balls is required. Although this was an old theory in the days of the flintlock and muzzle loaders, it is a known fact today. General Rohne of the German army has proved this to be true by a careful study of statistics on the battle of Kiao-Chow, which preceded the siege of Port Arthur during the Russo-Japanese war.

In this battle the Russians killed were 1475 officers and men. The Japanese loss numbered 4204 officers and men. The Japanese discharged 40,150 cannon shots and 4,000,000 rifle cartridges, while the Russian forces fired 736,000 rifle cartridges and 7780 cannon shots.

Eighteen per cent. of the losses were caused by artillery and 82 per cent. by small arms. According to Gen. Rohne it took 105 cannon balls or 214 cartridges to kill each Japanese, and 151 cannon shots or 3330 rifle cartridges to kill each Russian. The cannon balls used by the Japanese had an average weight of 142 pounds five ounces, and the rifle cartridges discharged by them weighed 162 grains. Therefore it appears that about 2200 pounds of steel and lead in the form of cannon balls or seven pounds in the form of cartridges, was required to kill each Russian lost in the battle.

REPORTS ON WAGES AND CONDITIONS.

Timely Bulletins from All Parts of the World.

Bulletin No. 161, just issued by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the United States Department of Labor, tells of wages and hours of labor weekly in the men's clothing and cigar industries of the country, 1911 to 1913:

Men's Clothing Industry.

Full-time weekly earnings in this industry in 1913 were 8.3 per cent. higher than in 1912 and 10.7 per cent. higher than in 1911. Rates of wages or earnings per hour in 1913 were 13.5 per cent. higher than in 1912 and 16.3 per cent. higher than in 1911.

Full-time hours of labor per week in 1913 were 5.1 per cent. lower than in 1912 and 5.3 per cent. lower than in 1911.

Thus we see that in this industry, as in nearly every other of our industries, wages continue to increase and hours of labor to decrease. This is a natural result of our growing importance as a manufacturing country, with more consideration of employed by employer, totally irrespective of the foolish and costly strikes (inspired by labor agitators to serve their personal ends) which too often occur.

By occupations the average weekly full-time earnings, average rates of wages per hour and average full-time hours of labor per week, are:

For females, represented by nine occupations, the average full-time weekly earnings varied from $8.50 for hand sewers, pants, to $12.36 for operators, vests. The average hours of labor in 1913 of nearly all occupations were between fifty-two and fifty-three per week. For cutters, the "princes" of the trade, the average was about forty-nine hours per week.

Cigar Manufacturing.

While regular hours are worked in some cigar factories, in many other factories no regular hours are observed, the employees coming and going as they desire. Because so many of the factories have no regular hours of work, it has not been practicable to present figures for full-time hours of labor per week nor full-time weekly earnings. Only the rates of wages (or earnings) per hour can be given:

THE EFFECT OF SOCIALIST LIES.

[EDITORIAL.]

IT IS NOT strange that the worker who believes that he is being robbed of four-fifths of his earnings by his employer should be ready to protest against such treatment. The only surprising fact is that so many workers should be so willing to take on trust the lies that the Socialists tell them (census reports to the contrary notwithstanding) when the facts are easily obtainable if they took the trouble to look for them.

Yet these are the conditions which exist. The unknown and irresponsible soap-box orator who spouts on the corner wins the confidence of his hearers because he tells them that they are the victims of an oppression far worse than ante-bellum slavery. The workers who listen to him believe his lies and swallow the misrepresentations which he deals out as "facts" without thinking of questioning his authority for such statements, when, nine times out of ten, everything he says is either untrue or so distorted that it is next to impossible to extract the germ of truth from the mass of lies with which it is entangled.

The direct effect, however, of this propaganda of falsehood, may be seen in the attitude which the Socialists take toward all existing institutions. Teaching, in the words of Marx, that "the workingmen have no country," they proceed to instill a philosophy of unrest which can have but one logical result, the engendering of a spirit of hatred of everything which is even remotely representative of authority.

It is upon this theory and from this point of view that the Socialists damn the government and everything for which it stands. According to their assertions, the police, the army and the navy are merely the clubs with which the capitalist seeks to keep the worker in subjection, while the courts and the laws which they enforce are but instruments of exploitation designed to assure the continuance of the "monstrous system of inequality now existing throughout the world." Let a law in the true interest of the worker be passed; let an employer inaugurate a scheme for improvement of the worker's condition, and he is promptly told by the Socialist that the measure is nothing more or less than a deliberate and well-planned attempt to delude him by making him believe that something is being done for his behalf when, in reality, the purpose is to push him deeper and deeper into the mire.

It is not difficult to imagine what the effect of a continuous performance of such instructions must be. If accepted as gospel truth, this doctrine of class hatred, of enmity among men, gradually sinks into the heart, and the poison does its work as the drip, drip of water wears away the hardest of flint.

The Socialists know this. They realize that this is the means by which they may create a force among the toilers that can be welded into the great army of destruction of which all their leaders have dreamed.

As all who are familiar with the history of the Socialist movement know, the founders of the philosophy never imagined that the change for which they labored could be brought about without a bloody revolution, and it is only too apparent that the violent actions of the I.W.W., while repudiated by some of the more conservative Socialists, is a logical carrying out of the principles laid down by Marx and Engels and many another Socialistic prophet.

It was Marx who lauded the horrors of the French commune as "the glorious harbinger of a new society," and who excused all violence with the remark that "Force is the midwife of every old society about to be delivered of a new."

Engels, too, repeatedly asserts that revolutionary terrorism will not be sugar-coated. In his "Working Class of England," he says:

"The proletarians, driven to despair, will seize the torch . . . the vengeance of the people will come down with a wrath of which the rage of 1793 gives no true idea. The war of the poor against the rich will be the bloodiest ever waged. It is too late for peaceful solution. The classes are divided more and more sharply, the spirit of resistance penetrates the workers, the bitterness intensifies, the guerrilla skirmishes become concentrated in more important battles, and soon a slight impulse will set the avalanche in motion. Then, indeed, will the war cry resound, 'War to the palaces, peace to the cottages,' but then it will be too late for the rich to beware."

While this may sound like an extract from a speech by one of the I.W.W. spell-binders, it isn't. They are the words of a man who is respected by all Socialists as an authority on Socialism, and this is the kind of "dope" that is handed out every day in the year to all who will listen to it.

The so-called "conservatives"—the pink-tea Socialists—may protest that blood and violence have no place in their propaganda; they may deplore the fact that Haywood and his I.W.W. associates have the right to call themselves Socialists, yet, despite all these exhibitions of virtuous indignation, when you get right down to the skin, you will find that even the "conservatives" themselves are marked with the same brand.

Take Victor Berger, for example. During his brief career in Congress, as Representative from Wisconsin, nothing which he did or said could suggest that he, too, was an advocate of the bloody revolution; but, if you will refer to the "Social-Democratic Herald," you will find, under date of July 31, 1909, a signed editorial in which Berger expressed his real views upon this subject. And this is the way he did it:

"In view of the plutocratic law-making of the present day, it is easy to predict that the safety and hope of this country will finally lie in one direction only—that of a violent and bloody revolution."

There cannot be much doubt as to the idea which Berger—the "conservative" Socialist of one Congressional term—had in mind when he penned those words.

But he had not gone far enough:

"Therefore, I say, each of the 500,000 Socialist voters and of the two million workingmen who instinctively incline our way, should, besides doing much reading and still more thinking, also have a good rifle and the necessary ammunition in his home and be prepared to back up his ballot with his bullet if necessary."

Remember, this is the advice of a man who is supposed to be about as conservative a Socialist as can be cast in the mold of Marxism—the man whom the Socialists sent to Washington to help make our laws.

And this is the doctrine that is preached whenever and wherever a Socialist dares to express his honest opinions, for the leaders of the movement have never deceived themselves with the belief that the present order of things can be overturned without the use of violent methods.

Moreover, it follows naturally, that if those who listen to the preaching of this gospel of destruction are imbued with the belief—the effect of Socialist lies—that they are being robbed of four-fifths of the money that rightfully belongs to them, it is not unlikely that they, too, will feel that they are fully justified in trying to abolish private property at one stroke, irrespective of the means employed.

This is the mission of Socialism—to preach the gospel of discontent until the heart of the worker is so embittered that he will be ready to resort to the bullet and the torch when, as Engels says, the "right impulse" is given.

Already we are feeling the effect of Socialist lies upon the workers in cases of strike violence and destruction of life and property.

NOVEL WEATHER VANES.

The Handy Boy with a Jack-knife Can Make Some Very Ornamental Wind Indicators.

[St. Nicholas:] Every boy likes to see a weathervane spinning round and round, and especially when there is a good big wind that keeps it fairly whizzing for hours at a time; but it would be more interesting if it were not for the fact that nearly all the weather vanes look alike. If an attempt is made to have something different it is usually a sailor holding a pair of paddles to catch the wind.

There is no need for this. Any clever boy can make a great variety of weather vanes. It needs considerable ingenuity and a lot of patience, but it is always worth while.

An attractive weather vane, representing a yacht race, can be made by means of four toy boats. These are fastened to light oak sticks or small metal rods. If the sails are cut out of strong canvas and firmly wired into place, they will stand two or three seasons of weather. On top of this for a wind indicator, make a small oar.

With few exceptions, these ornamental weather vanes are made to spin around and around with the wind just for the sake of the attraction there is in them; but these spinning things do not really show the direction in which the wind is blowing, and so the wind indicators are needed in addition. Always make wind indicators in keeping with the subject or style of the spinner.

A wind indicator moves back and forth only slightly, varying with the wind. They do not spin around, but only serve to tell us from which direction the wind is blowing. For this reason the side that catches the wind should extend the farthest from the supporting rod.

The combination wind indicator and weather vane is the biplane weather vane. Make an ordinary little biplane with two very thin boards or pieces of tin, and balance it on the supporting rod by means of the light wooden frame, the tail piece, or rudder, helping to balance it. On the front there is a propellor, made of tin. Now the wind will blow this whole biplane back and forth just as an ordinary wind indicator would vary with every breeze. At the same time the wind will keep the propellor spinning around and around, and in this manner you get the combination weather vane and weather indicator.

Paper Clothing of Japan.

[The Argonaut:] "Kamiwo," as paper clothing is called in Japan, is made of real Japanese paper manufactured from mulberry bark. The paper has little size in it and though soft and warm, a thin layer of silk wadding is placed between two sheets of paper and the whole is quilted. Velvet shirts and drawers made in this way are more comfortable than flannels. The Japanese soldiers realized the value of this kind of clothing when they had to weather a Siberian winter. The only drawback to this clothing is that it is not washable. A company in Yokohama is supplying large quantities of paper shirts to the Russian army. It states that paper clothes are extensively manufactured in Japan. The garments are made of tough, soft fabric, strong enough to hold buttons sewn on in the ordinary way, and are said to be very serviceable.

Etiquette of the Sofa.

[London Chronicle:] "The etiquette flopsyetaoin shrdlu cmfw etaoin shrdl of the sofa" in Germany is indeed a profound mystery to English people. We offer the easiest chair near the fireplace to the guest of honor, but in Germany the sofa is invested with a sanctity as of a throne. The visitor must not sit upon it unless especially invited to do so by the hostess. To take a seat there unasked is an outrageous presumption. Strictly according to the rank, wealth and status of her guests does the hausfrau offer them seats of honor, the "von" before the untitled, and so on to the married lady before the spinster. It is as delicate a matter as the English woman's pairing of her guests for the dinner table.

Seek the Cause.

CLOSED SHOP HURTS BUSINESS.

MOVEMENT HAS BEEN ENCOURAGED BY ARCHITECTS.

Endeavor has been Made to Prevent Jurisdictional Controversies and Other Delays, but this has Made the Architects Fellow Conspirators with Union Workmen.

[Walter Drew in American Industries:] The architect as the representative of the owner either negotiates or exercises a great deal of influence upon the terms of the contract between the owner and the contractor. He also supervises the execution of the contract. Labor questions naturally are one of the chief considerations. In common with the contractor, there has been a tendency for the architect to make concessions and compromises in order to avoid trouble or delays over labor questions. This he has done in the belief that it was for the interest of the owner.

By reason of this policy of concession and compromise, closed-shop unionism has obtained a stronger foothold in the building industry than in almost any other. The closed shop in building operations has had an opportunity to show its effects and to make a record. The demand on the part of the unions that the architect shall join with them in strengthening their closed-shop control is becoming more insistent. As the representative of the owner, it would seem to be the duty of the architect to investigate the closed shop and its practical operation and effects most carefully before he gives heed to this demand. The interests of the owner, the general good of the community, the growth and development of the building industry itself upon which the architect's employment depends—all these are most vitally affected by this question of closed-shop control of building operations.

The demand on the part of the Building Trades Council of a city that the architect shall have closed-shop clauses inserted in all building contracts in the city is becoming common and general. To architects to whom such a demand has come and who are giving it any serious thought, the following considerations are submitted:

(1.) While an individual employer may have the right to insist that his work shall be done by a certain class of persons—white or black, union or non-union—it does not at all follow that the unions of a certain industry in a city may, by concerted action, compel the employment of none but their own members. Such an attempt to fasten a general closed shop upon a community is an unlawful conspiracy against both the contractors and the workmen who are thus sought to be prevented from participating in such industry. There are also express decisions holding that when the architect uses his position or influence at the request or demand of such unions to assist them in securing a closed shop, such architect becomes a co-conspirator and is subject to the same legal liabilities as are the unions—in fact, the owner himself has been held by the Supreme Court of Massachusetts to be a party to such conspiracy when he attempts at the demand of the unions to force a contractor to discharge non-union men.

(2.) The closed-shop contract has come to mean not security, but insecurity, so far as labor trouble is concerned. The increasing use of the sympathetic strike and the great increase in the number of jurisdictional disputes among building trades unions make the contractor who is a party to a closed-shop agreement much more subject to attack than is the open-shop contractor. This attack is all the more dangerous and disastrous because in both the sympathetic strike and jurisdictional dispute it arises out of issues over which the contractor has no control and in the settlement of which he has no voice. His work must lie idle while other parties fight out the issues and make the settlements.

There are at the present time a large number of bitter jurisdictional wars among the building trades unions. The brunt of these wars will be borne by those whose operations are most closely tied up by closed-shop agreements to these unions. Until the unions eliminate the sympathetic strike and find some means of settling jurisdictional disputes in their own ranks, I cannot believe that an architect will be doing justice to the interests of his client, the owner, if he lends himself to any attempt to put the owner's work within the grip of the closed shop.

(3) The undue power gained by the closed shop without corresponding responsibility tends naturally in the direction of the arbitrary and uneconomic use—or misuse—of such power. Decreased efficiency, limited output, unreasonable rules—all these things are natural developments of such uncontrolled power. They mean on the economic side an abnormal building cost, high rents, and a community uninviting to outside capital. American cities furnish ample demonstration that closed-shop domination directly militates against the welfare and progress of the city as a whole. Architects interested in increasing the demand for buildings in their community should be the last class to lend themselves to a movement whose every tendency makes for a decrease in such operations.

In the closed-shop city of San Francisco, among many arbitrary and uneconomic features of the closed shop, may be cited one typical rule of the Bricklayers' Union. This provides that one-half of one per cent. of the contract price on jobs containing brick work shall be paid by the contractor into the treasury of the Bricklayers' Union. The rule is enforced, if necessary, by strike. The following receipt was offered in evidence at the hearing of the Industrial Relations Commission in the city:

Bricklayers' Union, No. 7 (B. M. and P. I. U., Local No. 7,) hereby acknowledge receipt of forty dollars $(40.00,) from Brandt & Stevens, being one-half of one per cent. (½ of 1 per cent.) of the sum of eight thousand dollars ($8000,) approximate cost of brick work on the Stewart job at the northeast corner of Ellis and Mason street, San Francisco, paid in accordance with Rule 5 of said union, requiring general contractors to pay said percentage to the treasury of the union on every job of brick work.

It is understood that the exact cost of said work and of one-half of one per cent. to be paid on it is to be determined hereafter.

It is understood that the strike called by the union on said job on account of said money required by said rule not having been paid, is to be called off, and that Brandt & Stevens are paying said sum under protest to bring about the termination of the strike, and without acknowledging the right of the union to enforce said rule.

Dated, San Francisco, July 16, 1914.

BRICKLAYERS' UNION NO. 7.

By [signed]

C. Noonan, Business Agent.

It should be added that San Francisco has lost two-thirds of her manufacturing strength in the past six years, and her own business men say it is due to union control. Open-shop cities such as Los Angeles, Detroit and others have in the meantime been growing by leaps and bounds.

(4.) In many cities where closed-shop domination has become intolerable and recognized as a serious check upon the city's progress, there have been movements on the part of the business interests to reassert some measure of independence. This is true in Chicago, in St. Louis, in Buffalo, and such movements are now developing in San Francisco and Cincinnati. Closed-shop control has been greatly lessened in these places. Indianapolis at the last election rejected all of the candidates of the unions, although nine national labor organizations have their headquarters there. The movement against the closed shop in the building industry is becoming general and universal. Any city which permits closed-shop control to increase will be taking a course directly opposite to the general trend.

(5.) There is no intention to suggest a general open-shop campaign in the building industry, although oftentimes the open shop seems the only adequate remedy under the conditions in a particular locality. Some building trades unions are in the main well organized and well conducted. It is not a benefit to them, or to any human institution, to have a complete control without any check or balance. Union agreements should contain clauses eliminating the sympathetic strike, jurisdictional dispute and the boycott of materials, and provide proper guarantee for the enforcement of such clauses. In general, they should severely penalize any action in connection with disputes which do not arise between the immediate contractor and his own workmen regarding some condition of their own work. No contract should attempt to specify or control the character of men to be employed in some other trade or by some other employer. It seems too obvious for debate that the architect in guarding the interests of his client, the owner, will insist upon such clauses as these, rather than place the work entirely within the control of closed-shop unionism without check or protection.

THE MENACE OF RUST.

The Corrosion of the Iron and Steel in the Great Skyscrapers May Reduce Them to Shapeless Mass.

[Engineering Magazine:] Among the many questions which the architect and builder are called upon to consider, none perhaps, is more important than that relating to the corrosion of iron and steel. This tendency to decay is peculair to these materials, since none of the ordinary metals exhibit it to any comparable degree, and it is so strong that an unprotected piece is soon reduced to a shapeless mass of rust. It is one thing to design and erect a mighty skyscraper, but an entirely different matter to protect it from those influences which, if allowed to do their work, would ruin the greatest structure in a short time.

It seems strange in a way, that unless iron is well protected it is far less resistant to natural agencies than wood or other building materials. It is being used more and more in the fabrication of large buildings and other structures of a permanent type, and the length of their life, to say nothing of the safety of the people employed in and around them, depends on the success with which corrosion can be prevented. Painters are constantly employed on such structures as the Brooklyn or Forth bridges, scraping away rust spots and repainting. When serious rusting is once started it is very hard to check, and as it would inevitably lead to the restruction of the framework, a collapse would be certain to occur sooner or later, probably with an appaling loss of life.

HELPED BY CLAIM AGENT.

A Railroad Employee's Necessity and Pluck Recognized and Turned to His Advantage.

[Youth's Companion:] Some time ago, during a severe thunderstorm, a long train of freight cars was being slowly and cautiously hauled out of the railway yards in the city of Lynn. On top of those cars, in the face of the pelting rain, a brakeman was making his way back to the caboose attached to the rear of the train. In passing from one high box car to another, a blinding flash of lightning caused him to take a short step and he fell between the cars to the ground. Before he could drag himself clear of the rails the wheels passed over one of his legs and severed it below the knee. The brakeman was a young fellow of tremendous vitality and pluck. As the caboose was rolling by he made a grab at one of the railings and then, with a desperate effort, drew himself up on the steps. He was immediately hurried to the hospital. His grit and cheerful disposition were an inspiration to the nurses and doctors, and his recovery was unusually rapid.

From the day of the accident this brakeman was virtually under the personal care of the railway claim agent. They were both serving under the flag of the railway company. Industrially and humanly they were brothers. The claim agent made all the arrangements for the comfort of the sufferer, kept his family informed about his progress, paid all the bills and was the first to congratulate him on his recovery.

On account of the unavoidable nature of the accident in which the brakeman had been injured the corporation settled his claim on a very liberal basis, and finally gave him a permanent place in the yard service. A few months later the claim agent happened to meet the young fellow on the street. Greeting him warmly, he asked him how he liked his new work in the yards.

"Oh," replied the man, "I couldn't stand it—it was too easy. That was a job for a man with no legs at all. So the other day, when a fellow came along who was in just such a legless fix, I let him have my job and now I am hunting for some work that is more in line with my ability and ambition."

It did not take the claim agent long to put this young man in another place altogether to his liking.

English Canal Building.

[London Chronicle:] Canal-making made its first serious start in this country in 1755, when an act of Parliament was passed authorizing a canal about eleven miles long from the mouth of Sankey Brook, on the Mersey, to Gerrard's bridge and St. Helens. Then came the Duke of Bridgewater with Brindley and his great schemes. After the making of the Worsley to Manchester Canal the navvies were busy in all parts of England, so that in about fifty years more than 2000 miles of waterways had been made. It was now the boast of the inland navigator that "south of Durham there was no spot more than fifteen miles distant from communication by water." Many among us of a roving disposition would be glad if that were once more made possible.

LONDON'S LYCURGUS.

His Job is to Disarrange the Taxicabs' Windows to Get the People Used to Discomforts.

[Punch:] He was a saturnine-looking man with a distinctly anti-social suggestion, but after a while he began to talk. We discussed one thing and another, and casually he remarked that he was connected with the motor industry—as indeed all men whom one cannot immediately place now are.

He did not build cars, he said, or design them, or sell them. What then did he do?

"My task is a peculiar one," he said, "and you might never guess it. It is wholly concerned with taxicabs. I am an inspector of taxicab windows."

He looked at me as with a challenge.

"It is your duty," I inquired, with a horrible feeling that I could not congratulate him on his efficiency, "to inspect the windows and see that they are in good order?"

"To inspect the windows—yes," he replied, "but not for the purpose you name."

"Then why inspect them?" I asked warmly. "What is wanted is someone to see that the wretched things can be manipulated. I would bet that out of every ten cabs I am in not more than two have windows that will work."

"Two!" he mused. "That's a very high percentage. I must see to that."

"High!" I exclaimed.

"Yes, high," he repeated. "You see, my duty is to visit the garages all over London before the cabs go out and see that the windows won't work. If they do work I disarrange them. That's my job."

"Wut why?" I gasped.

"Haven't you noticed how much worse they have been lately, and that, when you take a cab off the rack, the windows are always down when you get in, however bad the weather?"

"Yes," I said. "Everyone must have noticed it."

"Well," he continued, "that's my doing. That's my job."

"But why?" I repeated.

"Just a part of the general scheme of getting the war into people's minds," he said. "The darkening of London, the closing of houses, the defective

"How?" I asked.

"Well, it hardens you accustoms you to cold and that's all to the good."

Easter in sunny Southern California.

The new Metz 22 touring car, driven by Miss Rita Robertson of Pekin, Ill. This is her first year in Southern California and she is used to hot-house lilies at Easter, so that gathering them from her own car is a novelty.

In the face of later returns, Scoggy gets credit for the victory. He skunked the Beavers for the rest of the afternoon, whereas Pa's athletes made five more runs off a couple of Mac's assorted pitchers.

SCOGGY LOOKS GOOD.

Scoggy looks good. With any kind of luck he would have kept Portland away from the plate at all times. His arm is not yet in the pink of condition, and yesterday he experienced more or less fatigue in the elbow as a result of having pitched to the Angels in batting practice shortly after the noon meal.

CALIFORNIA DEFEATS ILLINOIS IN TRACK MEET.

BERKELEY (Cal.) April 3.—Weakness in the sprints and field events caused the defeat of the University of Illinois by the California varsity today by a score of 71 to 51.

Illinois captured first places in all the distance runs and in both hurdle races, but was unable to break into the five-spot class in the sprints. Stanton and Todd brought the fifteen points in the sprints to California, Stanton taking first in the hundred and 220 and Todd winning the quarter.

WEAK ON FIELD.

Field events proved Illinois's great stumbling block. She took no firsts, although Shoebinger tied for first honors with Gibbs in the pole vault. California made a clean sweep of the high jump with the comparatively low height of 5ft. 10⅜in. The hammer throw brought "Illini" athletes but one point, but second place was won in the shot put and broad jump.

Drew again proved to be the feature of the day. He equalled the 100-yard-dash record made twenty-two years ago by Henderson, an Olympic Club sprinter, the time being 11 4-5s.

This is the Pacific Coast record, and has not been equalled since 1893. Incidentally, Drew was handicapped four yards against such men as Campbell, Murray and Nolin, and at the finish of the event of 100 yards led them by two full yards.

CONFIDENT JOHNSON NEVER EVEN DISCUSSES WILLARD'S CHANCES.

BY W. B. ("BAT") MASTERSON

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

HAVANA, April 3.—Jack Johnson plays to an audience that averages a thousand daily at the Stadium where he does his gymnasium work in the afternoon. Twenty cents admission is charged for the privilege of seeing him work. Both men are to all outward appearances in fine fettle. There is no doubt about Willard's condition.

As has been the case in the past optimism fairly radiates from Johnson's camp. The negro fighter is all smiles as he goes through his daily exercises and there is little doubt in the minds of those who see him work that he has little fear of relinquishing his title to Jess Willard.

NEVER THINKS OF JESS.

The latter is scarcely ever mentioned by Johnson and his followers. Whether Willard has reached top form and is prepared to put up a desperate battle for the championship crown or is woefully behind in his training is a matter of complete indifference to Johnson if one is to judge by the lack of interest the latter is displaying in the matter.

NO NERVOUS TENSION.

There is not the nervous tension evident among the champion's cohorts that is usually felt in the training camp of a fight just prior to a decisive battle. Rather the air is laden with laughter and more or less witty jokes serve to intersperse the thud of the punching bag and the wrestling apparatus. To Johnson the training game is an old story which lost its thrills long ago. With Willard, however, it is an entirely different matter. Smiles have no place in the serious work of preparation which the cow puncher and his assistants are completing for the big fight. On the contrary, Willard fully realizes how much he has at stake in the coming bout and this knowledge certainly has not tended to ease his mind.

Constant inquiries couched in a nervous, at time querulous tone of voice as to how Johnson's training work is progressing, keep the attendants of the camp busy thinking up adverse reports from the negro's quarters.

WILLARD WORRIED.

It is plainly evident that Willard is worried over the fight and as the hour for the first gong draws nearer, a corresponding realization of the prowess of the man he is scheduled to meet is stamping itself on Willard's mind.

Big Jess reiterated his absolute confidence of bringing the championship back to the white race.

"People have underestimated my

CRITICS DOPE OUT FIGHT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, April 3.—The pugilistic experts who have been in Havana studying the conditions of Johnson and Willard are somewhat divided on the outcome of the battle Monday, but the majority agree that the champion isn't fit to wage a long, hard contest. Here are some opinions:

Ed W. Smith: Johnson too fat to go any distance. If battle goes over ten rounds Willard's chances grow.

Mike Gibbons: If Willard is game enough to stand the gaff for ten or twelve rounds, Johnson will blow up.

Frank Menke: Willard's youth, strength and confidence should return him the winner. But he must be careful early.

Tom Andrews: Willard in far better shape than Johnson. Is best of white hopes. Has great chance. If he doesn't whip Jack, no white hope ever will.

Bat Masterson: Willard has a wonderful chance. His youth and size will be big assets. The lack of enthusiasm in Johnson's trainers and Jack's high flesh indicate Willard the winner.

Billy Rocap: Johnson isn't fit for the tough battle he is confronting and if Willard can keep himself together and fight a real battle he should win.

Bat Nelson: Johnson is only a shell of his former self. He'll collapse if the fight goes any distance and at any speed.

Bob Edgren: On Johnson's endurance rests the result. Jack has much of his old trickery, speed and cunning, but he is plainly overweight, fat, and if the fight goes over fifteen rounds his chances will fade.

Walter St. Denis: Johnson isn't fit for a hard fight. He will worry Jess for a few rounds, but Willard's youth and strength make him a strong choice in my mind.

LAMPORT MAKES PREP RECORD.

FRESNO (Cal.) April 3.—H. Lamport, carrying the colors of the Manual Arts School of Los Angeles, clipped four-fifths of a second from the world's high school record in the 220-yard low hurdles here today in the first annual track and field meet of the California Interscholastic Federation of High Schools.

Lamport's time was 24 2-5s. R. Thompson of San Jose High School was second. Beckes of Bakersfield High School was disqualified this afternoon because he had participated in high school athletics for more than four years.

R. Thompson, San Jose, won the 120-yard high hurdles. His time was 15 3-5s.

APRIL WEATHER IS PACKARD WEATHER

This is the beginning of the touring season.
Get your Packard now.
The highways and by-ways are open.
The mountains and deserts await you.
The Packard is the "Boulevard Car."
It is also, and more truly, the "Desert Car."
The bulk of the Packard test work is done on the deserts of California and Arizona.
It is therefore, more built to YOUR order than any other car.
It is the only car tested for OUR country—our desert and mountain trails.
It is the car of sturdy "standupishness."
It is the car of stamina.
It is the "rough-neck" of service.
It is the Pride of the Boulevards.
It is the Boss of the Road.

The most important service announcement ever made in connection with a motor car will appear next Sunday. A DEFINITE, TANGIBLE contract between dealer and owner. A copyrighted innovation so radical, so far-reaching, that we expect it to be imitated by EVERY motor car dealer.

HEAD OF BIG FACTORY IS GAINING KNOWLEDGE.

WHEN H. M. Jewett, president of the Paige Detroit Motor Car Company, returns to Detroit he will know more of the actual conditions in California and the country itself than the head of any other concern of such magnitude.

President Jewett is not one of these "arrive in the morning, leave in the evening" officials. When he goes into a subject he goes into it thoroughly. He has come to California to learn what he can about the State and he is not getting that knowledge simply by talks with a few of his principal agents. Don Lee is the State distributor for the Paige and in company with Lee the Paige head is touring the State, visiting the smallest of dealers, looking over their garages and studying conditions in their immediate vicinity.

President Jewett has the wonderful faculty of riding into a city and immediately estimating its population and he is usually right. He can look at the homes and tell about the number of cars a town should use.

Wednesday he started on his tour of Southern California. His first stop was Pasadena. From there the party which consisted of the president, Don Lee, H. M. Groff, J. E. Brown, A. E. Landman and Lester Patee went to Monrovia and Pomona. They travelled in a Paige Six.

As the car was rolling into Pomona over one of the well-paved streets, lined with beautiful homes, Jewett remarked that a great many cars should be sold in such a prosperous-looking city.

After a visit with the agent the party continued on to Riverside, making the run over the new boulevard in forty minutes. The Detroit man was greatly pleased with the magnificent boulevards. From the time the car left Los Angeles there were perfect roads. A stop was made for luncheon at Riverside and a fast run made to Redlands. The party spent an hour with J. C. Clem, who has the largest place in Redlands. Clem had a party of prominent Redlands citizens on hand to give President Jewett the proper greeting.

The party was back in Riverside by five in the evening and decided then that instead of returning to Los Angeles they would make a fast run down the valley to San Diego. This was done. The return trip was up the coast with a stop at Santa Ana to visit Kelly's big new establishment.

President Jewett will go East from here. He was in San Francisco last week. Leaving San Francisco he drove to San Jose. From there he went to Stockton and was forced to travel through rain for fifty miles. On account of highway work the Paige was forced to buck hub-deep mud in making detours.

Want the Goods.

BUYERS OF CARS FIGURE CLOSELY BEFORE BUYING.

NOW that prospective purchasers of automobiles are figuring closely on what expense is incurred in owning and operating a machine, it is interesting to note how closely they are investigating the mechanical construction of cars. This point was brought out yesterday by R. D. Maxwell, handling the Studebaker automobile. Mr. Maxwell has experience with buyers who have driven expensive cars and now seek the same looks and comfort at a lower figure, and also with that vast majority of automobile buyers, the army of men who take care of their cars themselves.

"These days the man who is to pay the bills wants to know what the bills will be," he explained. "Those who have enjoyed high-priced cars want to know what they will save on tires and gasoline by using a machine like the Studebaker, which, although it appears massive, is really a light car. Then they inquire about increased repair bills. But there is no argument on that score after I call to mind what they already know, the high standard Studebaker demands of its engineering and manufacturing departments.

"I emphasize it not only by showing what little repairs have been necessary on cars I have sold right here myself, but also by the fact that less than $2 per car is the average in a city of 300,000 of the Middle West since last August, on 1915 models. This was an exact factory check.

"The questions of the man who will take care of the car himself, while dealing also with gasoline and tires, I find, are concerned largely with accessibility. There are two reasons for this. The first is: he wants to know how much trouble he will have in going over his motor and transmission himself. He knows there are inevitable adjustments to be made, and he wants a machine that will give him the maximum of accessibility.

"The other reason is that if he is paying a garage mechanic to make some repairs he does not wish to pay for an hour spent in unscrewing plates and parts of mechanism, for work slowly done because of difficulty of reaching, and for another hour spent in screwing on the various parts again. What he wants is to remove three screws, lift something out, and be at the seat of trouble.

"We have even figured it down to a matter of minutes for each operation. When a mechanic turns in a time card showing ten minutes to take off a generator, I go out myself to see what is wrong with the man or machine, because I know it should be done in seven minutes. It is the same with every other operation. I take care of my customers in my service department on the time schedule that factory and garage experience has established."

WHITNEY IS WITH REGAL.

R. A. Whitney, who has represented the Glide line on the Pacific Coast for the past year has joined forces with C. S. Anthony, Regal distributor for Southern California.

Mr. Whitney has been in the automobile game for fifteen years as factory representative in various capacities. The Regal light four models are already on the way here and the Regal light eight, so long expected, will get here about the first of next month.

Something New.

SUCH a steady demand from different parts of the country has reached the Cadillac factory for eight-cylinder cars with drive on the right hand side that last week Don Lee, California distributor for the eight, was advised that right hand drive would be supplied on special order.

The Cadillac Company makes an eight-cylinder car with right hand drive for foreign trade, and the officials of the company decided it was no more than fair to offer this car to those of the American buyers who preferred the right hand drive. However, the right hand drive is not optional, but will be supplied on special order only.

Deliveries of the Cadillac eight continue rapidly in California. To date more than 375 cars have been delivered to California owners, and as rapidly as cars can be secured they are being delivered to the long list of waiting buyers. While the deliveries are rapid, they do not reduce this list as rapidly as Mr. Lee would like to see them, for the new orders received almost keep pace with the deliveries made, and this in spite of the fact that California is receiving many more than the scheduled allotment at present.

Among the new Cadillac owners is Hobart Bosworth, the motion picture man. Bosworth, formerly well-known to the speaking stage of Los Angeles, where he was one of the foremost character actors, is a great champion of all out-of-door sports and an ardent motorist.

Bosworth has been driving motor cars for many years and declares he has found the perfect car in the new Cadillac. He will use it mostly for his own touring, but may bring it into play in some of his moving picture stunts.

Mary Pickford, known to the film world as America's sweetheart, is another photoplay star who rides in a Cadillac. She owns a Cadillac convertible.

Vincent Astor is having a motor boat constructed.

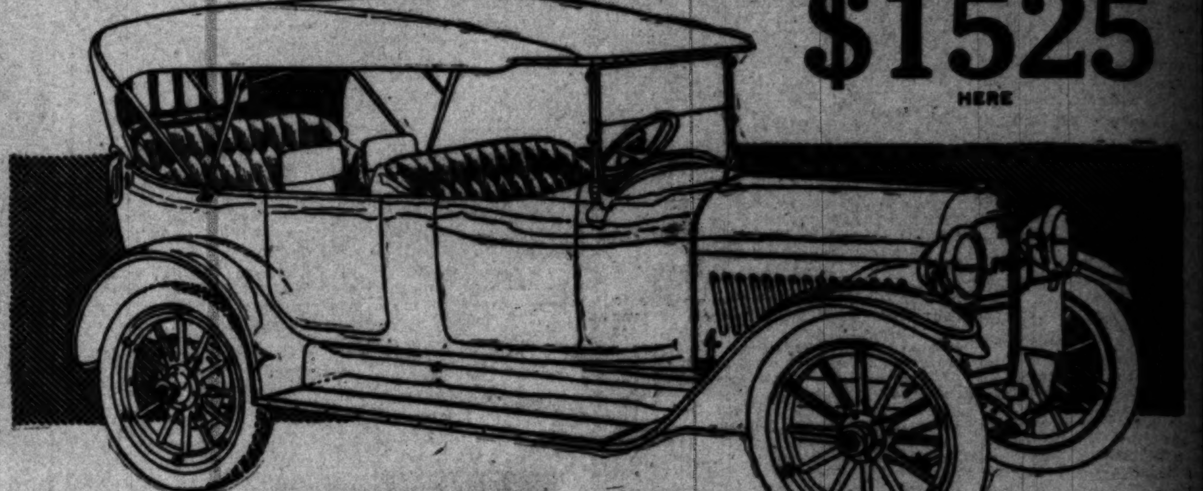
PAIGE

"The Standard of Value and Quality"

Here Is The Epoch-Making Car

$1525 HERE



Model Fairfield—Six-"46"

This new Paige Six is a magnificent seven-passenger touring car, beautiful in finish and design, modern and high grade in every mechanical detail, a car that we believe is the best six cylinder value on the market.

In this advertisement we cannot begin to describe the car. You must come to see it in order to appreciate what a really great achievement has been accomplished by the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company. Bring along any engineer, any automobile expert, that you know. Let him go over the car carefully and give you his opinion. Beyond any question of doubt he will confirm our statement that this is an epoch-making car—a car that will establish a new understanding of "value" in the six field.

A Big Car

Note that this is a big car—124 inches of wheelbase—meaning luxurious, roomy comfort for every passenger. This is not a "make-shift" seven-passenger automobile. It seats seven full-grown persons without crowding and without cramping. Two auxiliary seats fold into the back of the front seat when not in use. The body design is a masterpiece in coach building—the last word in grace and distinction.

Bosch Ignition

Everyone concedes that Bosch is the standard ignition of the world. You will notice that the Paige "Six-46" is equipped with this world-famous system and you will then begin to understand the meaning of Paige "super-value."

Alive with Power

The 3½ by 5¼ Paige-Continental motor takes this car fairly flying over the hills. It is alive with power—responsive power that obeys instantly the slightest movement of the throttle. Sixty miles an hour is play for the Paige "Six" and it slackens its pace to two miles on high gear when you want it. Perfect carburetion is insured by the unexcelled Rayfield Carburetor.

Lubrication

Efficient lubrication is absolutely essential to the life of any motor car. The Paige "Six" is lubricated by a plunger pump which forces a steady stream of oil to all main bearings, pistons and cylinder walls are lubricated by splash from constant level oil in pan.

Cork Insert Clutch

This is the most expensive clutch construction used in the motor car industry, but it is well worth the many extra thousands of dollars that the Paige Company is obliged to pay. Investigate for yourself the number of high-priced cars using this clutch where cost is not an item.

Gray & Davis Equipment

Practically all reputable automobile engineers are unanimous in agreeing that the Gray & Davis separate unit electric starting and lighting system is the most perfect system on the market today. It has been used on the Paige for two years with wonderful results, and of course is retained on the new Paige "Six-46." It is the newest, lightest type, and turns over the motor faster than any other cranking system. The 90-hour Willard Storage Battery is used.

Paige Cantilever Spring Suspension

The action of these Cantilever rear springs is little less than miraculous. The sensation of riding in a Paige "Six" is only to be compared with the easy, undulating motion of a staunch power boat. Cantilever springs make the roughest roads smooth boulevards. And you cannot know how a car should ride until you have had a demonstration in the new Paige "Six."

WE have mentioned only a few points of supremacy found in this magnificent car. There are many, but when you stop to weigh them all and think of them all together, there is but one answer—a great "Six," a truly triumphant "Six."

AL FAULKNER ORDERS ONE HUNDRED NEW FIAT CARS.

SO ENTHUSIASTIC over business conditions did Al G. Faulkner of the Carlton-Faulkner-Bowles Company become after a trip through the East that he placed an order for 100 of the new small Fiats to be shipped as soon as possible.

Faulkner returned from the Jeffery and Fiat factories last week and tells stories of the wonderful wave of prosperity that is sweeping the country.

The local dealer went first to the Jeffery plant and from there to New York. It was in New York that he became so enthusiastic over the new Fiats. Everywhere he saw these cars. They were in all colors, the fad at the present time in New York having turned to bright colors in motor cars.

Bowles of the firm of Carlton-Faulkner-Bowles Company was also in New York, and he agreed with Faulkner that the local company would have no trouble marketing a hundred of these cars, which are proving so tremendously popular in the East.

"I was amazed at the popularity of this new model in New York," said Faulkner. "I saw them everywhere, and the various colored models, with their pretty Victoria tops, were as stylish and rich as anything on Fifth avenue. It was with a feeling that nothing is too good for Los Angeles that I placed the order."

Faulkner also stopped several days at the Jeffery plant, and found this factory working every hour of the twenty-four. Three shifts have been constantly on the jump supplying the heavy demand for the various Jeffery models.

The local man stopped over in Chicago, Detroit and New York, and everywhere was impressed with business conditions. "I never saw New York more alive than it is today," said Faulkner. "In every line business seems to be booming. I know this talk of prosperity is getting to be a chestnut, but I am really sincere when I say that I found business better in the East than it has been for five years.

"I not only studied conditions among the dealers but looked into factories as well, and I was amazed to see the shape things were in. The Jeffery plant cannot turn out cars fast enough and dealers all over the country are clamoring for shipments. This is the cause of the three shifts. I was told that the factory had orders from dealers for all the cars it could make during the next three months, and I understand that many of the other leading factories are in the same position.

"In other lines of manufacture the same conditions exist, and unless I am very badly mistaken this country is on the threshold of one of the greatest business booms it has ever known."

The motor truck convention, which has been scheduled for May 5 and 6 by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, will be held at the Hotel Statler, Detroit, in the banquet hall. Members of the Commercial Vehicle Committee are now busy preparing the programme for the meeting, which is to be attended by both members and nonmembers of the N.A.C.C.

There is no guess work about the second-hand department of a big automobile firm. When a reliable dealer takes in a second-hand car, you may depend upon it he knows exactly what that car is worth.

"Before a car is taken in by this firm, for example, every part of that car is gone over by the inspection department. We inspect the rear axle, examine the transmission gears, and 'stethescope' the motor, as well as trying the car on the road. The condition of every part of the car from the radiator to the tail lamp is carefully noted on our inspection chart, and the appraisal of the car's value is made from that.

"After we accept the car it goes to our shops and our mechanics go over it thoroughly and put it in first-class mechanical condition. And when it is sold it carries the name plate, 'Earle C. Anthony, Inc.' just the same as a new car that is sold by the firm.

"By this policy we have built up a second-hand trade that has become a recognized feature of the business just as the sale of new Packards and Chalmers. Agitation on the topic is increasing everywhere and the wave of enthusiasm that swept Mobile, Ala., several weeks before we left was backed by every faction.

"In this connection I might add that Mr. Harrington, the Hupmobile distributor in the southern city, earned a name and great deal of publicity for himself by a unique window display on the popular movement. A camping scene at the side of the road that was really 'good' was staged in his large show window and with the Hupmobile taking an important part in the picture the attraction proved one of the most powerful arguments of the campaign for better roads."

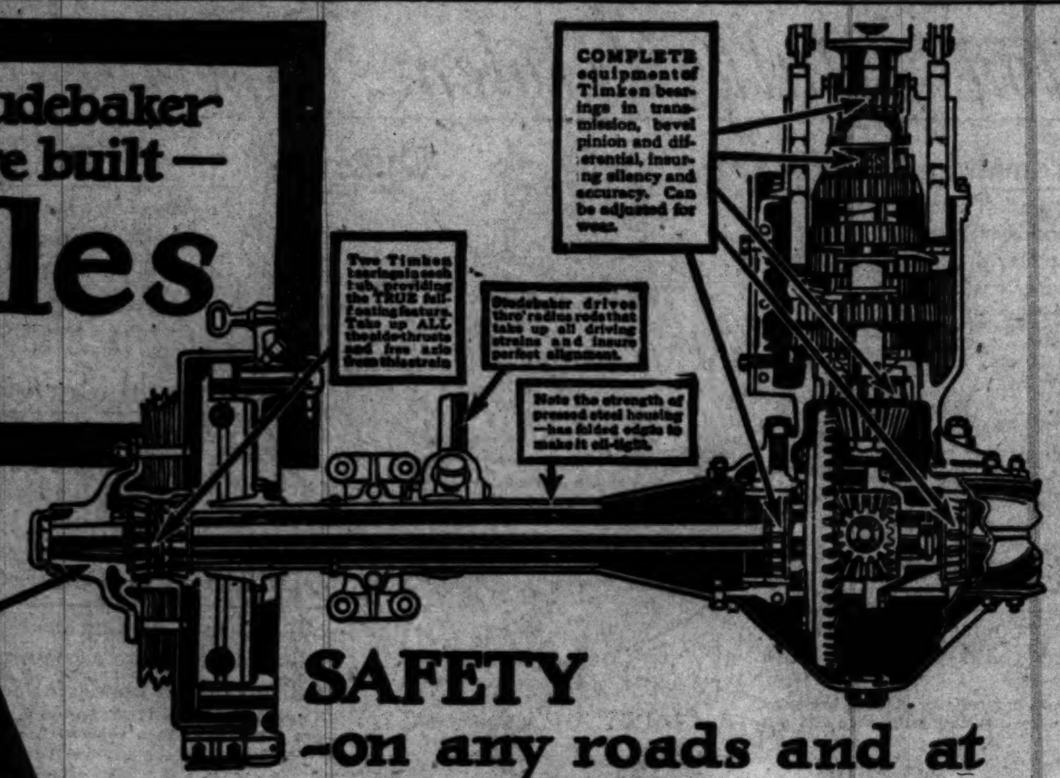
How Studebaker cars are built—axles



COMPLETE equipment of Timken bearings in transmission, bevel pinion and differential, insuring silency and accuracy. Can be adjusted for wear.
Two Timken bearings in each hub, providing the TRUE full-floating feature. Take up ALL the side-thrusts and free axle from this strain.
Studebaker drives thro' radius rods that take up all driving strains and insure perfect alignment.
Note the strength of pressed steel housing—has folded edges to make it oil-tight.
Shaft can be easily removed by unscrewing bolts in the driving flange. No disturbance of differential or wheels.

SAFETY —on any roads and at any speeds.

Can't be too careful, you know, about the rear axle on your car. For the simple reason that on it depends the life of the car—and sometimes the life of the folks that ride in it.

For you take one of the cars that uses the old-style and less expensive "semi-floating" types or perhaps a "three-quarter floating" type of axle that makes the axle shaft do EXTRA work—and if that shaft ever breaks, OFF flies the wheel. And you can imagine what that means.

So you owe it to yourself to study this FULL-floating Rear Axle Studebaker builds for Studebaker Cars—and to see what other car offers as good a rear axle as the Studebaker.

Notice its simplicity—how EASY it is to get at—and then, most of all, its SAFETY. That axle shaft is made so strong that, slender as it is, you can swing a 75-ton locomotive from it. And yet, as the illustration shows, the axle is so designed that if the shaft ever did break, the wheel can't come off. For the car rides on the axle housing—NOT on the axle shaft. And even the side-thrust that comes when your car turns a corner fast or skids, is taken up NOT by the shaft, but by TWO Timken bearings on the housing. So that the only thing the shaft has to do is to turn the wheels. Costs much more to manufacture such a rear axle. But it's SAFER. And you find this SAFETY-insuring axle on every Studebaker that's built. But why not come in and see it? That's the only way to appreciate the simplicity of its design and how easily the shaft can be removed, and how EASY it is to get at the differential. And besides, we want you to ride in a Studebaker and KNOW the comforts and the conveniences that are built into its every detail. Can you come tomorrow? If not, write for the Studebaker Rear Axle Book.

—because it's a Studebaker

CARRIER PIGEONS WILL ANNOUNCE CLUB'S TOUR.

CARRIER pigeons from the Plaza de Panama at the San Diego Exposition will announce the start to the fair city of the "run" of the Automobile Club of Southern California, to be held this month.

Included in the final preparations for the long trek in celebration of the rapidly completing system of boulevards of Southern California, is the carrier pigeon race, to start from the club headquarters on the morning of the departure of the first relays from this city.

With the arival of the birds in San Diego, the club members of that city will meet at the Plaza, or other centrally located point to be announced later, for the quick run to the city limits as a committee of reception. At this meeting point will converge the three main sections of the tour.

Those moving over the inland route will leave Los Angeles at an earlier date than those touring southward along the coast, but all will assemble at the San Diego city limits, where the entire force of the cavalcade will parade to the exposition gates.

For the first time in the history of the exposition, the grounds will be thrown open to automobiles, for those taking part in the "run." Massing on the east end of the Puente Cabrillo, the gates will open at a given signal, and preceded by the Exposition Band, will move across the bridge, through the arch and about the grounds, giving club members and their guests the only possible opportunity this year to see the fair from the tonneaus of their own cars.

A battery of moving-picture cameras, grouped on the bridge above the entrance, will take views of the motor display for use in the weeklies operated throughout America and England.

No lengthy reception speeches will take the time of the trekkers, for as much opportunity as possible will be taken during the week-end for the seeing of the San Diego system of roads. Tentative dates for the "run" have been selected as April 23, 24 and 25.

Supervisors of construction work on both the coast and inland roads will have the highways in excellent condition. Service trucks both from the club garage and from the accessory dealers will accompany the motorists, carrying tools and tires.

RUNS TRUCK FOR NOTHING.

OWNER FINDS WAY TO KEEP DOWN EXPENSES.

Leases His Truck Four Hours a Day and Gets Enough Money from this to Pay for its Upkeep When He is Using it in His Own Business—This is Real Efficiency.

"Many KisselKar truck owners are making their deliveries for less than nothing," says C. B. Handerson of the KisselKar.

"Sounds rather incredible, doesn't it? Well here is an instance: H. P. Kantzler of Detroit owns a 1500-pound KisselKar truck which is kept going in his plumbing business from 7:30 o'clock in the morning until 3:45 o'clock in the afternoon. Its superior speed and reliability gives it a ground covering advantage over three ordinary horse-driven rigs. This is a record which in itself handsomely justifies the truck.

"But Kantzler has found that a good truck not only saves time and money, but can be turned into actual cash profits as well. Every morning from 4 to 6 o'clock he leases his truck to a newspaper for wholesale deliveries and in the afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock to a packing company, which requires extra haulage equipment during those hours. The amount received for this service more than pays the running expense of the vehicle."

A Demonstration.

GLASS HOOD HELPS SALE OF NEW EIGHT-CYLINDER.

CLARENCE ENGLISH of the English Motor Car Company last Monday introduced an innovation in demonstrating cars when he appeared on the streets with a hood of plate glass on his King eight. Through this hood the occupants of the front seat can watch the operation of the motor during all sorts of stunt tests.

The glass hood protects the working parts of the car from dust, as well as providing a good view of the power plant. Then, too, it does away with stopping the car and lifting the hood when a prospect desires to see the motor in operation. The lighting of the motor through the glass is perfect, and every part ordinarily exposed to view when the hood is removed is shown through this new glass bonnet.

Whenever the King stops it is surrounded by an admiring crowd, for every one is studying eight cylinder construction these days, and they are afforded an unusual opportunity on the new King, the first popular-priced eight to be placed on the market anywhere in the world.

The eight-cylinder motor marks the greatest advance in automobile construction in the last decade, and naturally all students of mechanics are intensely interested in this type of power plant. The fact that the King company has always led in improving their product has given them a high place among the manufacturers of the United States.

Demand for King cars still holds strong. The shipments which arrive each week are being delivered as fast as they are brought to the salesroom.

17,000 Miles.

HOTEL BUS GETS GREAT MILEAGE FROM CASINGS.

C. H. STILLWELL, Stillwell Hotel, Ninth and Grand, drove his seven-passenger Studebaker up to the office of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company, Eleventh and Olive, and asked for Manager Carroll of the Goodrich Company.

"I want to show you the kind of service your Safety Tread tires are giving me," said Mr. Stillwell; and indicating the tire on the right front wheel, continued: "That tire has given me over 17,000 miles and has never been off the rims. I am wondering now whether I will be able to get it off when we get ready to replace it.

"I have used Goodrich Safety Tread tires for several years now, and they always gave me the greatest satisfaction, not only as to their durability and wearing qualities, but also with regard to the safety quality, as the tires positively prevent a skid.

"During the last rain I went down to Santa Monica, and noticed that while other cars were sliding back and forth in the road, and all of them had various types of non-skid tires, our car, with the Goodrich Safety Treads, held the road as well as if it were dry, and there was never a sign of a skid.

"The other tires on this seven-passenger car have given excellent satisfaction also. One of the others has exceeded 13,000 miles, and two of them did better than 7000. The car has been used as a sort of bus to carry our patrons to and from the hotel, and has been subjected to usage which naturally would be hard on tires. When one considers the mileage that the Goodrich tires are giving day after day, it counts more with a motorist than talk about mileage guarantees."

CONSOLIDATION OF TIRE FACTORIES A BIG HELP.

WITH the coming of better methods in handling rubber and fabric, there have been marked improvements in the construction of automobile tires in the last three years, declares Manager Tom Wilkinson, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the United States Rubber Company.

The consolidation of small factories under one general head, as was the case with the United States company, brought about a better concentration of effort, and with it better methods in caring for all sorts of work. The result was that in the three-year period which closed January 1, the construction of all classes of tires had been brought to a standard near perfection.

The tires are giving better service, and fewer adjustments are necessary on account of defective rubber, fabric or workmanship. But the advancement has not ceased. One of the most important moves in the history of the tire industry was that made by the United States company in January when the construction of different kinds of tires were segregated, two factories of the four operated by the company being reserved for automobile tires, one for motorcycle tires and another for truck tires.

This has brought about a higher specialization than ever, and is one of the big reasons why the United States company was able to reduce its prices recently.

The new Chain Tread, the Nobby Tread and the plain tread tires all are giving better service every season. Several instances have come under the eye of Manager Wilkinson in which a chain tread had gone 7000 miles before the non-skid surface was worn away.

Too Short.

DAYS AREN'T LONG ENOUGH.

TWENTY-FOUR HOURS ARE NOT SUFFICIENT.

Paige Factory, Working in Three Shifts, is not Able to Keep up with Orders so an Addition to the Factory is now in the Process of Construction.

Selling records of the Paige Motor Car Company of Detroit indicate an increase of more than 60 per cent. over last year for the first three months of the 1915 season, according to advices received last week by Don Lee, California distributor for the Paige four and six. January, February and March were by far the busiest months in the history of the company. It was found that even by working three shifts a day, and keeping the factory in operation twenty-four hours every day, the company was unable to meet the production demands, and work was started at once on an addition. As soon as possible machinery will be installed and work will commence in the new plant before it is entirely completed.

The Boston show, the last of the big automobile shows of the 1915 season, maintained the record of the Paige for rapid selling. Eighty cars were disposed of from the floor. In the New York and Chicago shows $1,000,000 worth of cars were sold.

In California the car is selling more rapidly than at any time since it was first introduced. Since Don Lee took over the agency he has built up an immense business here, and the records of the car in difficult road stunts, as well as in service of hundreds of owners, has gained for the four and six a wonderful clientele.

The addition of the Paige Six, with its handsome stream line body, and foreign construction, has been one of the most popular moves of the company. It has opened a new field, that of the owner desiring a medium-priced six-cylinder, to the Paige organization, and already the Paige six is a leader in this field.

The New Haven (Ct.) Automobile Club has finally decided not to rejoin the American Automobile Association. Objection is made to paying national dues of about $500 a year.

The simple pressing of the small button operates a magnetic brake which prevents skidding, as it locks both wheels equally.

They proved use- [illegible] themselves in the [illegible] had to be towed out. [illegible]-one-half ton worm- [illegible] was prepared for a [illegible]. The only devia- [illegible] stock being short- [illegible] single rear tires. [illegible] Torona the Moreland driver was somewhat surprised to meet the mine directors who were waiting to accompany the truck on its initial trial.

The start from Torona was looked on by old settlers of the little desert hamlet as sort of a joke. Several suggested that it would be advisable to make towing arrangements before getting out of civilization.

The first sixteen miles took the truck over a continual grade of from 5 to 20 per cent. Reaching the mountain summit, a steep four-mile descent brought the party into the Panamient Valley.

Here the real test was commenced as the next eighteen miles was over the old dry bed of the Borax Lake. The sand was often axle deep, but the truck plowed through. Entering the Wild Rose Canyon the mine was still twelve miles away, but the worst of the journey had been covered.

Arriving at the mine 4200 pounds of ore was loaded on the truck and after taking on a large portion of hard tack all hands began to wonder what the return trip that meant so much to the Moreland Truck Company would develop.

Down the canyon and into the treacherous sand the ore was moved as it had never been hauled before. Coming into the Slate Range grade the directors began to take the matter seriously; success seamed evident.

Over the grade, down the mountain incline and into Torona the truck was brought to a stop and the successful initial round trip of 102 miles had been made in thirteen hours and twenty minutes.

Water and distillate was hauled and dropped off at several places along the run and trips were made daily for more than a month. Orders were then placed with the Moreland company for six additional trucks. They were equipped with convertible bodies and are now running on regular schedule between Torona and the mines.

The sandy descent is so broken up by boulders it is impossible to make a run for it, and Dillon says the only reason his Saxon made it was because it has a motor sufficiently powerful to jump the car ahead with a lurch.

Nothing is to be gained by the risk in fording the stream, the Saxonist declares, as it marks the end for motor progress. The wisest plan is to abandon the car and proceed by foot or on horseback. There is no prettier canyon within twenty-five miles of the city than Tejunga. The entire region is a national forest preserve, and signs on almost every tree warn campers to be sure and extinguish their campfires, and not to build any without a permit from the ranger.

Barren granitic cliffs extend almost perpendicularly from the water's edge 300 feet into the air on one side. The opposite bluff is covered with mountain brush. Trout are said to be quite abundant, as the stream is less frequented than those accessible to motor cars and other methods of transportation.

HERRICK IS GRANT BOSS.

Harvey Herrick last week severed his connection with the Los Angeles Apperson branch to assume the position of Grant sales manager with the San Francisco branch of Earle C. Anthony, Inc. Herrick has made an excellent record selling automobiles since he ceased his activities in getting speed out of them, and the two-times winner of the Phoenix race is expected to put the Grant line emphatically on the map in the northern part of the State.

LARGE BARRACUDA CAUGHT AT AVALON

AVALON, April 3.—One of the largest barracuda ever caught on a rod and reel was landed this week by Isaac Guggenheim, while fishing near Seal Rocks in the launch, Leta D. For fifteen minutes both the angler and the boatman classified the fighting fish as a large yellowtail, but when the catch was finally brought to the surface it was found to be a barracuda. Fishing with Mr. Guggenheim for the past three days was his physician and Mr. and Mrs. J. Jefferson of New York City.

Announcement was made today that a number of Avalon property owners will counter-petition the State Railroad Commission to leave the San Pedro to Avalon freight charges at their present schedule. The date set for the hearing of the case of Miller & Donaldson vs. the Wilmington Transportation Co., was also announced for May 18, before President Max Thalen.

Nearly 20,000 men have applied to the Board of Commerce of Detroit for employment. They represent some thirty different nationalities, and a large percentage of the skilled workers came under the automobile and its allied trades classification.

Thorough.

TOUGH TEST OF ECONOMY.

Car to be Kept Busy for a Week's Time.

Doing the Work of Various Business Men.

Observer will be Right on the Job.

"It is not the exceptional case that vitally interests the automobile buying public," says Harry Lord, of the Lord Motor Car Company. "It is the cost of actual operation of an automobile that really means something. 'What will it cost me to run your car?' is the question that we are asked every day.

"With this very thing in mind we are right now in the midst of a combined utility and economy test. The test will comprise seven days of hard and diversified work by a 1915 Maxwell '25' touring car.

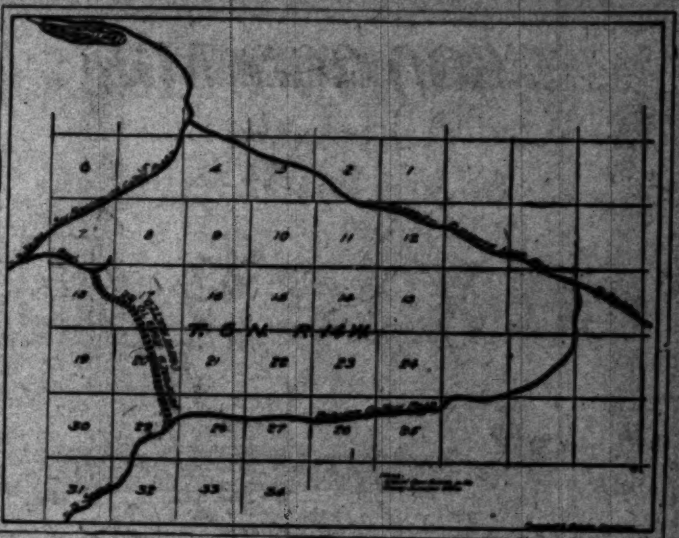
"This is in no sense of the word a 'stunt,' but is in every possible way being made an accurate reflection of the car's ability and efficiency under ordinary conditions. For a day the car will be used by a city salesman for some local wholesale house, for a day by a collector. A day will be spent in the service of a physician. The other day's work will be equally representative, with a sprinkling of touring work and pleasure riding.

"An outsider, possibly some prospective purchaser of an automobile, will act as 'observer' to testify as to the amount of gasoline and oil required to re-fill the tanks at the end of each day's work and as to other detailed information of the trip. And we will not make any special effort to break any records. We want our customers to know that they will be able to duplicate every performance which the test car makes. Only in this way can such a test be of any practical use.

"Some figures on actual operation have just come to us in a report made by T. C. Souden on a Maxwell '25' which we sold him on April 2, 1914. This car had already been driven 5000 miles before Mr. Souden bought it. His business as representative of the Dayton Scale Company takes him all over the southwest. He has just returned from a trip covering all of Southern California, all of the State of Nevada, Utah and a part of Wyoming, going up and down through the entire territory and back and forth across it. According to Mr. Souden, he encountered some of the roughest, toughest roads he has ever travelled, and he had driven 35,000 miles by automobile in California before he purchased his Maxwell. His speedometer shows that he has covered over 10,000 miles with this car and he has kept accurate account of gasoline consumed, and the total amount is 535 gallons, or an average of 18.7 miles to the gallon, which can be considered the maximum consumption of gasoline for a Maxwell '25' under the hardest, most unfavorable conditions. This is a remarkably good mileage when you consider the fact that Mr. Souden's trip, as he states, was for the most part over roads that were never intended for automobile traffic—in fact, he tells of one experience where he was eight and one-half hours going forty miles, and when he finally did manage to pull into his destination he was informed that the road he had traveled was nothing but a 'cow trail' which had formerly been used for wagon travel, but in recent years had been abandoned altogether.

"The two rear tires on Mr. Souden's Maxwell had gone over 7000 miles when he got back to Los Angeles—and that without even a puncture. He has only had them removed and placed on the front wheels this week.

"These tests in actual use do not always figure out astonishing results, but they give good sound facts for those interested in upkeep costs."



Proposed short cut to Elizabeth Lake.

At present the San Francisquito Canyon road beyond Saugus is in bad shape and autoists to reach Elizabeth Lake must go by way of Bouquet Canyon road, losing thirty-two to thirty-six miles on the round trip. The proposed road only two and one-half miles long would shorten the distance nearly fifteen miles each way.

HAMLIN HAS A BUSY WEEK.

Ralph Hamlin put in a busy week at the end of March selling six Franklin air-cooled cars and also three Rauch & Lang electrics. The three electric sales, coming at the season when the enclosed cars are not selling very fast, were a nice surprise.

GOODYEAR ALL-WEATHER TREAD

The Promise of A Better Day in Tires

Years ago—in the dark days for tire users—there loomed up in that gloom this Goodyear Fortified Tire.

Armies of motorists, in a short time, flocked to it. It soon became the largest-selling tire in the world. And ever since, amid all tire betterments, this tire has held first place.

It gained in its lead, until last year we sold 1,479,883 Goodyear pleasure car tires alone.

Don't Over-Expect

When you adopt this tire—as we hope you will—don't expect a magic tire. It is not trouble-proof—not exempt from mishap and misuse.

It won top place because countless men proved that it averaged best. It did that because in five great ways—in five exclusive features—it excels every other tire.

Be content with the best—don't expect the impossible—and you'll always be happy with Goodyear Fortified Tires.

Five Protections

We protect you in five ways, used by no other maker, against these major troubles:

Rim-Cuts
Blowouts
Loose Treads
Insecurity
Punctures
Skidding

One way—our "On-Air" cure—costs us $450,000 yearly. One requires us to form in every tire hundreds of large rubber rivets. One compels us to vulcanize in each tire base 126 braided piano wires.

One comes through our double-thick All-Weather tread, with its sharp, tough, resistless grips. Together they mean a super-quality tire.

Three Reductions

In the past two years we have made three price reductions, totaling 45 per cent. The last was on February 1st. Now these premier tires, despite these extra features, cost less than many others.

Never has any tire given so much for the money as Fortified Tires do now.

These are the best tires built. These exclusive features prove it. The verdict of Tiredom proves it. We ask you now, for your own sake, to prove it to yourself. Any dealer will supply you. ([illegible])

ANTHONY TO "SHOW THEM."

Will Test Packard 48 to the Limit.

Doing All Kinds of Stunts with It.

Color Scheme is Going to be Startling.

Earle C. Anthony, Packard distributor for Southern California, last week dedicated a big new Packard "48" just from the factory to the cause of education. The particular phase of education to which Anthony proposes to devote the car is to demonstrate in lasting fashion that the Packard is not merely a "boulevard car," but that it has stamina and endurance to spare for the roughest work that a motor car can be called upon to do.

"Even the average Packard owner, enthusiastic as he is about his car, never has occasion to find out really what the Packard can do," said Anthony last week. "We are going to send this car out on the roughest trips we can find in the Southwest, to conquer roads that are passable for any type of vehicle. First of all, we have turned the car, a four-passenger '48,' over to the paint shops and I will guarantee that when it comes out it will be as distinctive in appearance as it is in purpose.

"We know what the new Packards are called upon to do successfully before they are offered to the public, but the average man does not. There is no car made in America that is subjected to test work as severe as that the new Packards are called upon to perform. The yearly testing trips include a little jaunt from Detroit to San Francisco, Los Angeles and return, and the cars are punished every foot of the way. The highest officials of the Packard engineering force pilot the cars on these trips, and if there is any weak point in the new models, they are quite certain to discover it in 6000 miles of the roughest sort of road work. And a single year does not suffice to produce a new Packard model. Three years of forework, and an expenditure of a million dollars enter into the making of a new model.

"We know what a Packard will do, but the average man does not, and we want to show him. That is why we are going to send this brand new Packard out as a 'stunt' car. And I think we will be able to gather some convincing evidence as to whether a Packard is a 'boulevard car' or not."

FORTY-THREE TRUCKS SOLD.

Watt Moreland's selling force set a new record during the month of March by taking orders for forty-three Moreland distillate trucks and delivering them, all in Los Angeles or close-in. The factory is working overtime now in order to keep up with the growing demand.

A Great Idea.

NEW HIGHWAY WILL BRIN TRAVELING AUTOS HE

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA in general, and Los Angeles in particular, will benefit by a new commercial and motoring highway to be developed from Los Angeles to Salt Lake City.

The project has been quietly but vigorously worked up by Harold L. Arnold, dealer in [illegible] Brothers motor cars, and [illegible] ful has been Mr. Arnold's [illegible] the big commercial bodies [illegible] town along the route [illegible] the proposition.

One of the features of this commercial route is its [illegible] a touring route for tran[illegible] travel. It will tap the Lincoln [illegible] way at Ely and the Midland [illegible] Salt Lake City. Automobile importations into the Union of South Africa amounted to $4,741,862 in the calendar year 1913, according to a report just made public. The United States, with a share of $1,893,245, ranked second after Great Britain.

Winton Again.

CHAUFFEURS' ECONOMY WILL WIN THEM MONEY.

CASH prizes amounting to $3500 will be paid the twenty-five chauffeurs making the best records in the eighth annual Winton Six repair expense contest. Also, the best record made by a "New-Size" Winton Six will win for its owner a brand new car in even exchange for his old one.

The purpose of this contest is to prove that Winton Six cars are so well made that, even when they are driven hard and long, their owners need never worry about breaks and repair expenses. Experience covering seven years of contest reports shows that the winning cars ran more than 1,500,000 miles at an average repair expense of 22.7 cents per 1000 miles.

The 1915 contest will start May 1 and end October 30. If prior to October 30 any contestant has driven 12,500 miles, his effort ends at that point: he will not be required to continue. This does not mean that 12,500 miles is certain to win first prize. On the contrary, the purpose of the 12,500-mile limit is to equalize chances. A few drivers have opportunities to run as much as 20,000 miles during a season. If big mileage alone were the object, these drivers would easily carry off the big prizes. By the new rule, each contestant is assured that no record beyond 12,500 miles will be considered, and that contestants who are not able to reach great mileage will have an opportunity to share in the prize money.

First prize will be $500, second $400, third $300, and fourth $200. Sixteen prizes of $100 each and five district prizes of $100 each will be awarded. District prizes will be awarded for the best remaining record in each of five sections, after the first twenty prizes have been awarded. These prizes are intended to encourage chauffeurs who would otherwise land "outside the money."

In the seven annual contests already decided, the Winton company has paid to eighty-two winning chauffeurs a total of $21,500. This year's prizes will increase the total to $25,000.

According to careful estimates made by the Lincoln Highway Association, about 5000 motorists will tour to the Pacific and back over the Lincoln highway this season. This makes 10,000 transcontinental motor trips over the highway. Of the cars 3000 will come from east of the Ohio River, 1000 from between the Ohio and the Missouri, and 1000 from west of the Missouri, but not from California.

The cars starting east of the Ohio will cover 6000 miles each, totaling 18,000,000 miles. The 1000 cars owned in the territory between the Ohio and Missouri rivers will run about 4000 miles each in their trip, covering 4,000,000 miles, while the other cars will each run about 2000 miles, totaling 2,000,000 miles. This makes the total of car miles covered by these three groups of Lincoln highway travelers alone, without allowing for side trips, 24,000,000 miles.

OWNERS GET CARS OUT DURING SUNNY WEATH

WITH the lid off the baseball season, streams open to trout fishing, wild flowers in bloom and orchards putting forth their blossoms, those few motor cars that have been in the garage a large part of recent months will be out on the road again within a few days. Southern California is regarded as the one section of the United States for year-around touring, but nevertheless, motor car men assert, there are many owners who use their cars but infrequently from January 1 to the first part of April.

Even those who make use of their cars constantly are in the custom of "laying them up" for a week at about this time of the year for overhauling and repairs. The car that has seen service for a year or more usually is put in the shop once in twelve months for adjustments, cleaning and tuning up.

several years there was a con- exchange of players between the and Portland clubs, but that these close relations no longer exist. This statement appears to be borne out to a certain extent by the fact that out of the three players sent up last fall, but one of them went to the Naps. This was Rodgers. Bancroft went to the Phillies and Kores to the Giants.

Mac rates Mitchell as the best outfielder that he ever turned out.

Chadbourne, of course, was not in Mitchell's class, but he played wonderfully consistent ball for Portland, both in the field and at bat, and Walt gladly includes him in his all-time, all-star aggregation.

Graney came to Portland as a pitcher, but his control was bad, and Mac converted him into an outfielder, where his great hitting made him a valued citizen.

Olson is selected for the job at third because that was his original position, and he outclasses anything that Portland ever had at the difficult corner. Mac had Ote Johnson at third, and, being minus a shortstop, switched Olson over to that position.

GREGG MASTERPIECE.

He has had so many good men working for him at short that it was difficult to make a selection. He regards it as a toss-up between Sweeney and Peckinpaugh for the all-star job.

Mac regards Gregg as his pitching masterpiece.

"Unquestionably Gregg was the greatest pitcher ever seen in the Coast League," said McCredie. "Joe Corbett alone could be mentioned in the same breath with him. When Gregg was at his best, it is a question whether a greater pitcher ever lived."

RIFLE CLUBS OPEN SEASON.

LOCAL BULLSEYE SHOTS TO MEET BUTTE CRACKS.

Practice Today for Match Next Sunday, When Famous Shooting Organization Hooks up with Off-hand Sharks Who are Thought to be Rusty at Their Long Suit.

The Los Angeles Rifle and Revolver Club tackles trouble with both hands in its first match of the season to be shot April 4. A telegraphic challenge from the Rocky Mountain Rifle Club has just been received and accepted for that date by the locals.

The conditions asked for by the Butte (Mont.) Club, call for thirty shots per man at 200 yards off-hand, "A" target, any rifle without telescope. Any number to fire, and the ten high men make up the team.

The locals have sent word, asking the Butte team to modify the conditions to twenty shots off-hand and ten at 200, sitting. In either case, unless the local men get out and work hard today, they will be trimmed, for the Butte club has been praticing.

The off-hand course is ordinarily the strongest game of the local men. Last season the riflemen with their heavy, hard kicking Springfields, defeated the local Turners in three straight matches in spite of the fact that the Turners specialize in off-hand work alone, and use the finest of special target rifles with hair triggers for this game.

Owing to the season being just started, the Los Angeles men are very rusty in the off-hand department, most of the work done during the winter being merely cursory practice prone at the long ranges.

Last year such men as Gardner, Wotkyns, Willard Smith, the giant police sergeant, Bob Fraser, Jackson and Felsenthal, were the off-hand sharks, and if "Big" Smith can get away from Chinatown long enough, probably the same squad will make up the high ten men to represent the club next Sunday.

Any rifle, barring telescope sighted arms, is allowed.

The Rocky Mountain Club is one of the most famous in the country. In the indoor shooting its men led the entire country for two seasons, putting up such shooting as to establish new records for this game. Their outdoor class is unknown, but it is not likely they are any less to be feared than they are indoors.

"ROAD HOGS" TO HAVE TIRES SHOT.

CLUB ORGANIZES TO PROTECT MEMBERS AGAINST AUTOS THAT CROWD THEM.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN BERNARDINO, April 3.—That autoists have justification in shooting the tires of "road hogs'" machines full of holes when they race their cars so close to the conservative driver that he is forced to take to the dust at the edge, is the fundamental principal in the Automobile Self-defense Club which is now being organized here.

The promoters of the organization declare that action of the so-called road hogs, which infest all boulevards and county highways, is akin to assault and that in taking a pot shot at the speeding tires it is merely a means of protection, self-preservation and a retaliatory measure that should be excusable by the courts. The club will hire an attorney to handle all cases which may arise from the putting into practice of the club theory.

The members declare that even though a "road hog" does not strike them an attempt to force them out of the road by driving at reckless speed within a few inches of their automobile amounts to the same thing in the eyes of the law as when a man threatens another with bodily injury or draws a knife or other weapon.

Once in the local courts it was declared that an assault with a deadly weapon could be made with an automobile and acting on the precedent that an auto is a deadly weapon and that a driver of such a machine may be guilty of an assault, promoters of the club believe that they have the basis for getting even with "a pest that ought to be lynched."

RACE TODAY.

Bob Burman, Earl Cooper and Louis Disbrow are to meet at Ascot Park today in a fifty-mile race for the world's dirt track title.

Arthur Duffey, the ex-amateur sprinter, remarks: "Howard Drew has added low hurdling to his already long list of accomplishments in the athletic game; but Drew would do well to keep away from such a specialty. At the most, a sprinter's athletic life is none too long, and it is the easiest thing in the world to overstretch in a hurdle race, which has killed more than one champion in the sprint line."

Good Business.

TRUCK TIRES HAVE COME TO STAY; THEY SELL FAST.

"TIRE dealers everywhere are now wide awake to the substantial possibilities that lie in the handling of truck tires," says C. W. Martin, manager truck tire department, the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company. "The truck has 'arrived,' just as the pleasure type automobile 'arrived' a few years ago, and the dealers everywhere are equipping to give truck accessories a distribution worthy of the industry.

"Up to a year ago truck tires were regarded by the average dealer as a 'necessary evil,' something that concerned him only remotely. It was not readily apparent to him that truck use was becoming so widespread that solid tires would soon become an important and busy line for dealers.

"Within the year the whole situation has changed. We find it comparatively easy to close deals with dealers—and the whole truck industry is benefited by the readiness with which tires can now be obtained by users.

"In small towns, in the past, truck users have had to buy tires 'out of town.' This meant delays. By buying his tires at home the truck owner gets service, eliminates costly delays and patronizes a home industry.

"The dealer is strengthened by increased sales, and we, as manufacturers, benefit because we no longer need be retailers, in competition with legitimate dealers everywhere.

"A truck uses an average of $175 worth of tires a year. A town of ten trucks alone has $1750 of possible solid-tire business, and the future of the truck is unlimited. Truck sales multiply every year—and the dealers who are in on the ground floor now will have a big advantage as the business grows.

"Dealers selling Goodyear motor truck tires are this year centering their efforts on the Goodyear S-V tire, with remarkable success. In towns where processes for applying are not available, the demountable type is the favorite.

"We are greatly pleased with the progress thus far, and predict that soon truck tires will be sold as universally by dealers as are pneumatics at the present time."

Savage Tires.

NEW SALES PLAN MAKES MORE SPACE NECESSARY.

FOLLOWING close on the heels of the announcement of the new direct-from-factory-to-you sales method of the Savage Tire Company comes the word of two important additions to the Savage factory, made necessary by the large amount of new business already in hand.

A handsome new office building will be erected, a portion of the ground floor of which will be utilized for enlarging the shipping-room. The second large building will provide additional manufacturing space needed by several of the factory departments.

The experimental department also will be greatly enlarged and many additions made to the present testing and laboratory equipment. A fine new drafting-room also is planned.

Reports from the various branches are most enthusiastic and clearly show that the new method of selling has met with far more than the expected success and has the approval of motorists in general. By selling direct from the factory to the car owner the manufacturers are enabled to effect many economies due to the elimination of unsatisfactory and costly sales methods, the avoidance of poor credits and the simplification of accounting.

All these economies make it possible to sell the same high-grade goods at a much lower price, and car owners everywhere are taking advantage of the reduction of 30 per cent. or more. The car owners can buy Savage tires from the factory branches or factory distributors. These distributors are not ordinary dealers, but are members of the Savage sales force, each having exclusive territory and their customers actually deal with the Savage Tire Company itself. Mail orders are handled very satisfactorily.

Another innovation that forms a part of this new selling plan is the system of inspecting all stocks frequently. Each sales territory is under the supervision of an inspector who travels from one distributor to another, carefully examining all stock. The slightest indication of deterioration causes a tire or tube to be replaced by fresh goods.

Some Record.

TIRES GO FOR 20,000 MILES.

AND NONE OF THEM EVEN HAD A BLOWOUT.

Driver of Husky, Heavyweight Car Buys New Set of Tires for an Emergency After His Four Regulars had Gone a Terrific Distance Without Leaving the Rims.

One of the most remarkable records of tire service which has ever come to the notice of Manager C. A. Jessup of the Los Angeles branch of the Kelly-Springfield Tire Co., was reported last week by Rudd and Opp, local agents for Kelly-Springfield tires. J. C. Kays, who drives a Pierce Arrow 66, over a year ago equipped his car with Kelly-Springfield Kant Slip tires. Last week he had the tires taken off the rims after they had traveled more than 20,000 miles.

Mr. Kays drives his car close to 2000 miles a month, and reported that he formerly has been getting from 2500 to 4000 miles from casings. It was the exceptional tire which exceeded 3500 miles, he said. With so much travel, he determined to cut down his tire bill if possible, and was advised by Rudd and Opp to equip his car with 39x6 Kellys. He took their advice and the result was a record for tire service which surprised even the makers of the tires, strong as their faith in the Kelly hand-made construction is. Not only did all four of the tires exceed 20,000 miles, but they went the entire distance without a blowout.

Of course Mr. Kays re-tired with Kellys, and he purchased two extras for emergencies on the road.

Manager Jessup declares this to be the best record he has ever had come under his notice. He has had several cars on which all four tires exceeded 18,000 miles, and has had one tire go as far as 24,000 miles.

Some Slow Record.

NEW EIGHT TRAVELS 1.86 MILES PER HOUR IN HIGH.

MOTORS which would throttle down to a speed of less than two miles an hour in high gear and maintain it indefinitely, have been dreamed of since the first days of the automobile. It remained for Cadillac engineers to produce such power plants in their new eight-cylinder types.

One of the favorite demonstrations of Don Lee's salesmen is to place the Cadillac in high gear, throttle it down to the lowest possible speed, and, leaving the seat, walk backwards in front of the car for a distance of a block or more.

In making this demonstration the speedometer indicated speeds varying from one to three miles an hour. M. S. Brigham, Seattle dealer, has ascertained just what the average speed for 1211 feet would be in such a test.

With three observers and a salesman with him, he drove the Cadillac eight to a long, smooth stretch of pavement in Seattle, and throttled it down as low as possible. Riding was too slow, so he got out of the car, walked backward in front of it for a block and walked completely around it several times. The observers timed the test, and found that the car required 8m. 8 3-5s. for the 1211 feet, an average speed of 1.86 miles an hour. Throughout the test the Cadillac was in high gear.

Another favorite test with Cadillac dealers throughout the country is to select a rather steep grade, up to 6 per cent., throttle the car down in high and let it climb the hill at three miles an hour. Don Lee, California distributor, first performed this feat on the Alvarado-street hill, between Tenth and Eighth streets, and since then it has been done in all parts of the United States.

That these demonstrations are proving to prospects the worth of the car is indicated by the sales record of the company. The Don Lee sales force have delivered 358 cars to date, while in the United States more than 5000 cars already have been delivered, with the season for the Cadillac eight only begun.

Practically all these deliveries have been made in the last two months, and the production schedule indicates that the next two months will see probably three times as many Cadillacs on the road.

ROADS ARE CUT UP DURING WAR.

The war is ruining France's famous roads, according to a letter written to the Indianapolis Motor Speedway by Georges Boillot, who drove in the last 500-mile race. Boillot is now at the front, driving a car for Gen. Joffre. He says: "The driving of cars inside the fighting area has become a tremendous work, as well as a dangerous one. With cannons and artillery, with lorries carrying food and busses carrying troops, the roads have been unable to stand the strain. So with the rain we have been having lately it looks as if we were touring in the bed of a river instead of on a road. You can imagine what it feels like to have to be at such a place at a given time and to be held up time after time by mud up to your rear axle."

THE VISITORS.

Fulfilling the predictions of officials of the Automobile Club of Southern California that 25,000 visiting motorists would find local boulevards the finest in the world during 1915, the beginning of early spring touring has definitely begun. See if any of your eastern friends are among those registered at Auto Club headquarters:

S. B. Bennett of Oklahoma City, Okla., is among the first to plan an extensive tour of the State preparatory to settling in Southern California.

Charles H. Anderson, prominently connected with large business interests in Boise, Idaho, has arrived for motoring pleasure in Southern California.

Mistress C. M. Hobbs of Denver is now an enthusiastic traveler on State and county highways, which she says are better than anything offered in Europe.

W. D. Smith and party of Vancouver, Wash., will spend some time in Southern California, following Auto Club directions for what is to be known as the mission tour.

From Pittsburg comes R. S. Gillespie for a prolonged pasear over everything the State has to offer in the way of good roads.

Dr. F. H. Wallace, a prominent member of the Chicago Motor Club, has taken headquarters in Los Angeles while making an exhaustive study of local boulevards and everything to do with motoring in the southern part of California.

John G. Shedd, president of Marshall Fields interests, is among those who are going into the Imperial Valley to see how the wonderland was made to grow on the desert by combining the little drops of water and the little grains of sand.

W. M. Potts of Philadelphia, is touring the fairs, with some particular interest given to Santa Barbara, which territory he hopes, will pass the highway bonds.

George W. Metcalf, president of the Commercial Bank and Trust Company of Douglas, Wyo., with party is to remain in Southern California until the 1st of May.

S. J. Schnorenberg of Minneapolis, is touring the Senate for the spring, and expects to remain into the summer.

Bob Hughes of Shreveport, has bought a car in Southern California and will give over sixty days to seeing as much of the highway system as possible in so short a time.

J. C. Sherwood of Columbus, O., E. A. Rogers of Elgin, and S. K. Brown of Washington, D. C., are at the heads of three parties getting the most out of the $30,000,000 Southern California boulevard system.

H. B. Anderson and S. F. Emery are two of a party of four who are planning to take the San Francisco round trip by motor.

J. H. Fickhardt with a party of seven is a motoring enthusiast of Seattle, who is doing his share toward burning up the atmosphere on the high-roads.

C. E. Plimpton, ex-president of the Seattle Automobile Club, will spend five or six weeks in getting acquainted with the fact that there are some thousands of miles of sign-posted highways in the southern part of the State which are well worth looking into.

Another Indianapolis enthusiast is J. C. Schab, who will give all the time he can to highway work, and hopes to come back for more.

Manager A. Kiefer of the Kiefer Drug Company of Indianapolis is representing his State as a place where motorists know how to get the most out of road opportunities.

SMITH TO THROW SIX WRESTLERS.

Pleasant Smith will attempt to throw six men in an hour this afternoon at Jack Doyle's camp. There will be several other matches in addition. Earl Neuman will grapple with Tony Anderson. August Smith will attempt to throw Young Coffey twice in twenty-five minutes. Two twins wrestle two falls out of three. The bouts are scheduled to begin at 2:30 o'clock and women are invited to attend.

The annual expenditures for road improvement in the United States now amount to about $204,000,000. Automobile license fees amount to about $8,000,000 annually. County, township and district road bonds were voted in 1913 to the amount of $50,625,000.

Don Johns and Dave Kinney are favorites in the doping of the classic. The big, yellow Cyclone machines have never been beaten, and their riders who are both local men, declare that this race will be no exception to the rule. Both Johns and Kinney are rated among America's crack riders. After one or two mornings of practice the Cyclone machines were put under lock and seal until this morning, both men declaring themselves thoroughly familiar with the course.

The Harley Davidson team is expected to show up strongly in the running, with such riders as Joe Wolters and "Red" Parkhurst as stars. Otto Walker, another of the Harley cracks, has been averaging fast time in practice and is also touted as a possible participant in the big purse.

Dark horses galore will be among the starters this morning. Comparatively unknown riders who have quietly and in an unostentatious manner taken what practice they have needed have kept the clockers on the sidelines guessing. Among them are Guiseppe, Bozzani and Basso, Italian riders of Indian machines. Who they are seems to be the mystery of the racing camps. That they are famous European riders who have scalps from the greatest contests of the old world at their belt is the current rumor.

Dr. Byron Palmer of Venice and his hospital corps will have emergency camps on various portions of the course to care for participants in possible spills. In practice with not more than twenty machines taking the spectacular curves, tumbles have not been infrequent. Just what will occur when fifty drivers try to take the 'dromed turns in a bunch, is perplexing the race officials, and preparations are being made for all necessary first aid.

Anthony Drexel, wealthy sportsman of Philadelphia, has commissioned Bowes & Mower to construct "the fastest and most completely equipped express cruiser in the world" for his use along the Atlantic coast, and according to word received here from the east expects to travel with it to California waters. R. Fred Vogel, recently arrived in San Diego after his trip in his trim cruiser from New York and will cast anchor at the Los Angeles Motor Boat Clubhouse the latter part of this week.

James M. Shuck, vice-president of the Marine Engine Engine and Supply Company of Los Angeles, returned yesterday from a trip to eastern engine works and boat building concerns. Inquiries made by Shuck elicited the fact that western boat builders are enjoying a period of growth far superior to that of the eastern companies.

"Western boatmen, owners and builders are to be congratulated upon the progress motor boating has made on this coast during the past few years," said Shuck. "The motor boats that are being turned out here have nothing to lose by comparison with the class of craft one sees on the eastern lakes and rivers. The style on the Pacific coast is running to V-bottom runbouts of moderate speed, and raised deck cruisers; in the east high power, high speed runabouts and express cruisers are the rule, this difference being accounted for by the open waters of the west, where comfortable, sea-going craft are desirable. Our western shops are as a rule busier than those in the east, running sometimes double shifts."

BARNEY HELPS START CLASSIC.

RIDERS WEAR HEDMETS TO KILL SOUND.

Adair Calls for Assistant and Referee Gates Appoints Master Driver, Who is to Pilot Automobile Which will Pace Motorcycle Racers on Lap of Course to Start.

Barney Oldfield is to officiate as a starter at the Venice International Motorcycle Grand Prix today. There are to be thirty-seven machines in the lines at the start and Referee Charles Fuller Gates selected Oldfield to assist Starter George Adair.

It will be necessary to pace the field once around the course with a fast automobile, from which the starter can keep the riders lined up for the dash across the line. As the riders wear head helmets which deafen them to the popping of their machines, they could not hear the motorcycles behind them and it would be almost impossible to keep the rows of riders in position.

With Oldfield driving, Adair will signal the men in their positions on the pace lap and at the line, drop the red flag, giving the machines the get-away. At the pits ahead of the motorcycles, Oldfield will drive the automobile out of the way of the riders, giving the machines the right-of-way in the battle for the purse.

Yesterday's practice at Venice was full of thrills for there were larger fields and closer brushes than any time previous. "Dutch" Myers and Glen Stokes had a couple of scraps while going seventy miles an hour, negotiating for positions and both Tobey and Sexton had falls while at high speed.

Harry Sexton, one of the very few pure amateurs in the big race, was lining it out yesterday on his fast Flying Merkel and struck the lumber yard turn too fast, so he spun around like a top and gathered a choice assortment of slivers before coming to a stop.

The thrills were worth seeing for every rider was very much in earnest and when five at a time bunched, sailed by the pits at sixty-five to eighty miles an hour with smaller groups trying to pass the five, it was exciting.

Clodian Moias, with a strange-looking machine, which he calls the Henri Special, and who has No. 13, appeared at the Venice course yesterday for practice. He has an Excelsior engine, an Indian frame and parts of other makes combined, his engine being the famous old six horse power which won everything on the dirt tracks here about three years ago.

Earl Cooper is said to be considering the boating game seriously. If the race pilot enters the speed boat field it is a safe bet that his hydroplane will be No. 8, and will turn off not less than 48 knots. Ralph Hamlin, it is rumored, may also join the ranks of the boatmen.

Harry Vorhauer, owner of the Bull Pup which has run in southern waters for several years, though stating that he is through with the racing game, is expected to have an ace up his sleeve, which he will spring in the way of a 100-horse-power motor for his hydroplane and therewith cop the prizes in the regattas planned for the summer.

E. A. Featherstone and Billy Busch have purchased the Edna, a forty-foot cabin cruiser, from A. L. Loftus. With it they intend to make a number of trips to the channel islands, San Diego and ports north.

The loss of the Lasata will not deter Morgan Adams from enjoying the summer on the water, according to reports from the Los Angeles Motor Boat Club. A boat owned by Mr. Adams in the east, it is expected, will be brought around and put in service at an early date.

AUTO CHEAPER THAN WALKING.

NEW DEVICE PUTS CAR WITHIN REACH OF ALL.

By Lengthening the Life of Tires and by Outlasting About Five of Them, Subcasings Cut the Cost of Upkeep Down Until it is Exceedingly Small.

That it is now cheaper to ride than walk, was the statement made this week by H. S. Nettleton, general manager of the Western Auto Sub Casing Co., Inc., of No. 1044 South Los Angeles street.

In summing up the evidence which led him to form the above conclusions, Mr. Nettleton said:

"For some time past, motor cars have been within the reach of almost everyone—the day when the old proverb—if wishes were horses, then beggars might ride—is being rapidly approached in fact, and people in very moderate circumstances can now reap the benefits which a motor car gives.

"Although the cost of many motor cars has been extremely low, still other factors which entered into the upkeep or maintenance of a car has made it somewhat hard, if not impossible for the majority of people of small means to own a car. Late events, however, have changed upkeep costs materially.

"The prices of oil, gas and even tires have been lowered; and our product, the Fisher "Rim Grip" Sub Casing has had not a little to do with putting the ownership of a car within the reach of everyone.

"For instance, we will assume that a gallon of oil costs 60 cents and will furnish lubrication for 250 miles. Gas at 11 cents a gallon gives 16 miles to the gallon. A 34-4 tire costs $20.00 and gives possibly 5000 miles.

"Now then, the installation of a Fisher Sub Casing of the above size costing $10.00 will enable one to get 9000 miles, conservatively estimated, from every tire it is used in. The sub casing, properly cared for, should outlast more than five tires; so it can be plainly seen that for ten per cent. additional expenditure the increased service given averages at least 80 per cent. That makes for great economy and lower cost of upkeep.

"At the same time, our product decreases tire troubles in the same ratio as the mileage service is increased.

"Who would go back if they could and live in the old days when motoring pleasures can be had for less than two cents per mile in Southern California."

RUCKSTELL IS SPEED DEMON

WHEN IT COMES TO CHANGING HIS VALVES.

Record of Making the Change in Six Minutes is One of the Best Ever Made—Disbrow with His Simplex is to Stay on the Coast for Some Time in Racing Meets.

John G. Dale, sales manager for the Simplex Motor Car Company, left Los Angeles Thursday for the East after a tour of the Pacific Coast territory. Mr. Dale, just before leaving, expressed himself as more than satisfied with the way the new Simplex models have been received on the Pacific Coast. The first of the 1915 cars was seen in San Francisco a month ago, and was immediately purchased by Herbert Payne.

Mr. Dale was on the Coast primarily to watch Lewis Disbrow in the San Francisco and Venice races, but he made a close investigation of trade conditions while here, and said 1915 promised to be the best year in the history of the industry on the Coast.

The Simplex racing car and its driver, Lewis Disbrow, will remain on the Coast for some time. He will participate in several track meets in California and Arizona.

George Bentel of the Pacific Coast Simplex and Mercer agency was pleased with the work by Guy Ruckstell in the Venice race. Ruckstell's feat of changing a valve, an operation which required six minutes, and still finishing in third place, pleased Mr. Bentel.

Ruckstell had a three-lap lead when he met with valve trouble, and was expected to win "in a walk." It was the first time that the valves had ever gone wrong on a Mercer racing car.

REDLANDS HIGH IS WORKING AT BALL.

COACH CUNNINGHAM HAS FINE MATERIAL FROM WHICH TO PICK TEAM.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, April 3.—The leading question at the High School now is "What kind of a showing will Redlands make in baseball this year?" Coach A. Cunningham is busy with his squad of raw recruits and this week has pruned the thirty or more candidates to two full teams. Redlands' first Citrus Belt League game will be with San Bernardino, April 10.

Cunningham has a real job on his hands, although prospects are brighter now than they have been. Two men are working for the job of catcher. They are Wells and Cattell. It looks like Zeke Mendenhall will be depended on to do the twirling this year. Roland Crump will probably land at first base, although Winters is showing up well in the practice there.

For second Cunningham has two good men, Miller and Inglis, with the former having a shade of vantage. Freeman will probably make short, although Rusty Edwards will give him a run for his money. Lamb and Chestnut are both working hard for third.

For the field Cunningham has Frenzell, Osbun, Patrick, Willis and Gass to choose from.

FEDERALIZATION

Get into your haulage costs—find out what they really are—you will find that horse equipment is quite expensive.

Federalized transportation is solving the haulage problem for a great many bakers throughout the country. It is on the job and stays there, giving a steady dependable service that insures prompt delivery, satisfied customers and more of them.

Federalized Transportation is a safer, quicker and cheaper means of delivering the goods on time. It means the efficient application of Federal Trucks to your own particular haulage by experts.

The reason lies in the truck itself—it is built right—by an organization that is the largest builder of motor trucks exclusively in the country.

The price is reasonable, the upkeep costs are low and you can get more business at less cost to you. Let us show you what Federalized Transportation means in the baking business.

VENICE AND SALT LAKE GAME POSTPONED; RAIN.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SALT LAKE, April 3.—A young hurricane and a shower which closely resembled a cloudburst knocked all chance for the fourth Venice-Salt Lake game sky-high this afternoon. The game was therefore postponed and, together with the postponed game of last Tuesday, will be played here when Venice returns for its second series with the Bees June 15. There will be but one game tomorrow afternoon.

MORGAN PURCHASED.

Manager Cliff Blankenship of the Salt Lake club announced this evening that he had purchased from the Chattanooga club Willis "Cy" Morgan, the young right-hander who did phenomenal work for Salt Lake in the Union Association in 1913 and 1914. The purchase price is said to have been $1000.

Morgan is a right-hander with great speed and a pitcher who can be worked every other day. He not only led the Union Association pitchers in 1913 and 1914, but he also pitched more innings than any other heaver in the league. Chattanooga bought him from Salt Lake at the close of last season and the youngster immediately made good until Charley Street and Bill Bernhard pronounced him "the best young pitcher who have gotten down here in an age."

Blankenship picked Morgan out of the bushes when Bill Orr broke in and has always been sweet on him ever since. Morgan will report immediately.

Tomorrow's game marks the end of the series with Venice here. If the weather is at all favorable another record crowd is assured. Even though the clubs have been forced to postpone two games thus far, the series will prove a grand success from a financial standpoint, for Happy Hogan will return home with a nice piece of money to spare, and Salt Lake will have enough to assure Portland's guarantee in addition, even if it rains every day next week.

BEES PEPPERY.

As far as the two clubs are concerned—if the Venice club affords any criterion as to the strength of the other Coast League clubs—Salt Lake will not be as far down in the running as some of the California critics have predicted. The Bees have played equally as good ball as Venice, even outplayed them at times, and always shown a great deal more pepper. Blankenship's crew needs considerable polishing, but that will come later. One thing has been demonstrated to a certainty and that is that the Tiger pitchers have nothing on Blankenship's hurlers.

FISHERMEN REPORT TROUT PLENTIFUL BUT SMALL.

TALES continue to be sent back by anglers who have gone into the mountains, of unprecedented success at the trout fishing game. Undoubtedly the present season opens with a greater supply of trout, better conditions for sport, and greater opportunities for the angler who does not wish to go a week's journey away from home, than for a number of years. The trout are small, however, and fishermen who are accustomed to the twelve and fourteen-inch trout of Lake Tahoe, the Truckee, Yosemite, Kern and other Sierra streams, find little attraction in the friers that are lifted out of the local streams.

VENTURA.

The Ventura, however, is supplying a limited supply of 4-pound trout. Dr. G. M. Freeman has placed a 27-inch, 4-pound steelhead on exhibition in one of the downtown sporting goods stores. At Camp Bonita Herbert Wilson and E. J. Kaplan reported two trout, 18 and 24 inches. H. R. Earhard returned with a 2 1-2-pound 18-inch fish from Deep Creek above the hot springs. Louis Breer of the Tufts-Lyon house reported with two trout 20 1-2 and 28 1-2 inches from the Ventura.

The Malibu is stated to provide but mediocre sport, the fish being small although there are plenty in the stream and in another month will be worth the effort to catch them.

G. W. Geyer reports limit catches at Matilija though with small fish, not over 7 inches; good fishing at Wheeler Hot Springs and excellent at Wheeler Cold Springs, several limit strings of average size having been turned in. Good sport is reported from Lathrop.

Official reports show the roads to the Sespe via Saugus and Fillmore to be in excellent shape; also the road east of Saugus to Big Rock Canyon. The road to Ventura via Conejo grade and Camarillo is good, although there is no thoroughfare through Camarillo ranch, around which a detour has to be made. The Sespe is fast clearing after the recent rains.

Dan O'Connell of the Hoegee Company landed a 27-inch steelhead within the first half-hour of fishing in the Ventura. The party with him comprising W. T. Dougherty, "Doc" Hayes, Lloyd B. Reed, and Will Hinderer, obtained limits of 7 1-2-inch trout.

OFF FISHING.

A number of local sportsmen have left the city to spend the week-end on the streams. Included among these are Al Reed, Sid Butler, Jr., and Frank Richards of the Dyas company to Camp Baldy in San Antonio canyon; Bob Paulson and party to the San Gabriel; Gene Long of the Universal Film Company and Dr. Stafford to the Sespe; V. E. Chace and G. R. Chace to the Ventura; P. E. Petersen and party to Bear Lake; Munroe Johnson to the upper San Gabriel; H. H. Wilson to Camp Bonita; George Cline to Matilija, and Bill Cline to Henley's; Harry Cline and Under-Sheriff Bill White to the Sespe; L. C. Davis and E. J. Endree to the Sespe; and Dr. Hastings, M. L. Halsted, and W. R. Wilson to the Sespe.

The Los Angeles Rod and Reel Club has scheduled a preliminary casting tournament at Exposition Park on Sunday, April 11; a meeting of the club is called at Blanchard Hall for next Wednesday evening.

FLYING SPARKS OF MOTORDOM.

The first union of jitney bus drivers has been organized at Rock Island, Ill., and includes twenty-two drivers in charge of cars running between Rock Island, Moline and Davenport. The union is under the jurisdiction of the International Teamsters, Chauffeurs, and Stablemen's Union.

Taxicab owners in Cleveland are preparing to fight the present city ordinance licensing their machines and charging $5 per taxicab and $1 for each chauffeur. With the legal struggle in mind, few of the operators have taken out 1915 licenses from the city, and the first arrest for violation of the ordinance is to be made a test case.

A purse of $20,000 is being raised in Omaha, Neb., for the 300-mile race to be held there July 5. It is expected that the leading drivers in the Grand Prix and Vanderbilt Cup races will participate. It is said that Ralph de Palma and Barney Oldfield have agreed to compete.

Milwaukee's jitney-bus industry has grown to comparatively enormous proportions, and hardly a day passes without the issue of at least one license to operate a bus. The jitney-bus owners have already formed an association for mutual benefit, and are even now planning a system of transfers for interchange of passengers.

Among roadster models there is a marked tendency toward a complete concealment of the spare tire. In carrying out this plan the automobile designer has almost without exception adopted the rear-deck construction. This offers the opportunity of making use of the compartment provided beneath the rear deck for baggage or tires.

With grain crops worth approximately $2,000,000,000 grown in eight States in the Mississippi Valley this year, and with even better crop prospects in these States for next season, the value of the farmer as a consuming factor in automobiles for the present season and also next season is apparent. In some of these States the farmer purchased more than 60 per cent. of the cars marketed in 1914. In 1915 he will, according to conservative estimates, purchase upward of 70 per cent. of those sold.

Motor trucks are to supplant the trolley cars at present used in mail distribution in Boston, according to the plans of Postmaster Murray, whose recommendations for the purchase of the machines have been approved by the department at Washington. Murray has estimated that about $45,000 can be saved annually by the use of trucks.

The National Highways Association is promoting a motor tour to the Panama-Pacific Exposition, to start about the middle of June. The old trails route will be followed. On the way west the tourists will visit the Pueblo, cave dwellings, Mexican villages, cross the Raton Pass, visit the petrified forest, and the Grand Canyon. Only new six-cylinder seven-passenger cars will be used, and only four passengers will be allowed in each car.

Yellowstone National Park probably will be opened to automobiles in 1916. The sundry appropriations bill provides $125,000 for road repair and extension in the park, and $50,000 for widening the roads so that they can be used for automobile traffic.

In 1913 the Tire Committee of the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders, England, established standards for twenty-three different sizes of pneumatic tire rims. It is now announced that there is shortly to be a reduction in this number to ten, while eleven different sizes will be standardized for tires themselves. Of this range of tires two of the smallest fit the same rim, but of the rest each has a rim to suit it.

One of the most remarkable developments in England resulting directly from the war is the rapidly growing demand for electric vehicles. Merchants, manufacturers and others making regular use of highway transportation have suffered a serious crippling of their traffic in consequence of the present conflict. Horses have been commandeered as well as motor trucks, with the result that haulage is badly tied up in many instances. Quick to grasp the force of the situation, the electrical interests have mustered in force to preach the gospel that the electric truck is not only reliant and efficient, but absolutely safe from molestation at the hands of the War Department.

Ample justification for the concrete road is to be seen in Wayne county, Michigan, in which there are more than 100 miles of concrete roads, some of the surfaces of which are now six years old. In all this distance there is not a single rut, and not one twenty-five foot section has ever been taken up since it was built. Roads of this type are becoming more and more popular, and it is estimated that cement roads costing $25,000,000 will be built in this country and Canada in 1915.

To further improve traffic conditions, a new device is being tried out on Woodward avenue, Detroit, where traffic is most intense. It consists of a seven-foot metal post, on top of which are mounted two metal cross-pieces, one painetd red, the other green, the former having painted on it in white letters the word "stop," and the latter the word "go," also in white. A handle placed at a convenient reach for the traffic officer in charge of the post permits him to turn the sign in whatever direction he desires, for either stopping traffic or having cars move on. At night the post is surmounted with a red light. The device will be tried out several weeks before it will be decided whether it is to become a permanent feature for the regulation of traffic.

The jitney bus idea has reached Bloomington, Peoria, Decatur and other Central Illinois cities, but it is doubtful if it will be permament, the business not being large enough to warrant the purchase of special cars.

It is surprising the amount of strain that is put upon the fastening of baggage under the stresses of a pitching car. Nowhere could this be seen more plainlyl than in a recent Glidden tour in which many private owners traveled the route with their baggage carried in various haphazard ways. All kinds of troubles were experienced from the start to the finish of the run by these owners, simply because a well-designed baggage-carrying space for this extra emergency had not been provided. For this reason many companies recommend that instead of depending on roughly-tied bundles lying loosely in the tonneau it is better on a long tour to sacrifice the streamline appearance of the car and to make use of the running board to carry suit cases in a suitable box.

The coming of the vacuum will make the proper straining of gasoline even more important in some ways than it has been in the past. Not that dirt could very well choke up the vacuum tank, but the latter contains certain valves that must work better clean than dirty. Every motorist has become accustomed to the idea that it is necessary to clean out the carburetor at frequent intervals, if trouble of the road is to be avoided, though there are a few who have fitted their cars with really efficient filters that trap all dirt and all water also. Such filters are not expensive, and are easy to attach in places where the filtering gauzes can be withdrawn for cleansing with great facility, and it is surprising that a much better filter than the average sort is not to be found on every automobile. A good filter is a petty detail, doubtless, but it is one of those little things that go to make the "class" of a chassis, and with vaccum feed it could be mounted inside the hood in a most accessible place.

CLOVER, PETERSON WIN AT TENNIS.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

FRESNO, April 3.—Clover and Peterson took the doubles of the State interscholastic tennis here today after a hard-fought match. The championship went to the winners after two long sets, which were won in 8-6 and 6-4, with Taylor as runner-up. Unusually fast play characterized the doubles throughout, Clover playing a driving-back court game and Peterson showing up well in speedy net play.

In addition to winning the doubles matches, Clover showed his ability by annexing the singles as well. The sets against Housten Peterson, which went to Clover by the scores, 9-7, 4-6, 10-8, were exhaustive in the extreme. Nearly every game went to a deuce score, and the heady playing of Clover was all that saved him from downfall. His steady work stood him well against the terrific drives of Peterson. Clover's consistent playing has placed him at the foremost of interscholastic tennis sportsmen for some time, and the victory that he gained over high school representatives from all parts of the State is considered well-deserved by the authorities of the Fresno meet.

SPORT SHORTS.

Montreal City Council has approved amateur boxing contests.

Yale University has eighty track candidates.

Jacksonville has just organized its first lawn tennis club.

Greek games similar to ancient contests will be a feature of the exercises at the opening of the University of California's new track on April 22. All the ceremony attached to the ancient games will be strictly adhered to, the scenic effects receiving attention as well as the rules of the games. Th contestants will be attired in Grecian costume and the officials will wear the flowing robes of the Achaean noblemen. The coveted laurel wreath of old will be the nominal goal of the contestants, while a more substantial trophy will be given the best all-round athletic of the university.

Indiana University's proposed new gymnasium will compare favorably with any of the modern structures recently built. It is to include an indoor football field, baseball diamond, several basketball courts and facilities for every kind of college athletic game on a big scale.

The famous Sheepshead Bay, Long Island, race course is to be turned into a park for motor races, automobile shows and athletic contests, according to the plans of a company recently incorporated which intends spending $1,000,000 in the improvements.

Col. Robert M. Thompson, chairman of the American Olympic Games Committee, thinks it would cost $1,000,000 to stage the Olympic games in this country, and believes the 1916 Olympiad will be abandoned in favor of the 1920 date.

The initial races of this season will be staged by the Cycle Racing Association at the Newark Velodome on Sunday, March 22. The chief event will be the "Brassard," named after the French word for bracelet or armlet, which is to be competed for every Sunday.

The work of erecting the big stands at the Boston National League grounds is about to begin. The stands will seat close to 45,000 and will be constructed of steel and concrete and will be completed in August. There will be but one stairway, that to the press boxes, all the other passages to the upper tier of seats being inclined planes. The main grand stand will seat 15,600 with 1400 box seats in addition, while the first base pavilion will care for 12,500 and that at third base 12,000. In addition there will be the 25-cent admission stand containing 3500 seats.

Experts Think Fight will E... Long—Endurance of Two ... Champion Expected to Play ... Men Guards Loosely.

[BY A. P. NIG

HAVANA, April 3.—Forty-eight hours before their battle for the heavyweight championship of the world, Jack Johnson and Jess Willard were declared to be in as nearly perfect physical condition as their systems of training could accomplish. They are fit to fight for their lives, they say, and will step into the ring Monday afternoon ready for the struggle, whether it be short and sharp, or drawn out to the limit of endurance.

There is ten years difference in the ages of the two men; Willard not only is the younger, but has the better of the height and reach. However, Johnson is exceedingly muscular and will weigh more than he did in any previous fight. Today he probably weighed 233 pounds, but will take off three or four pounds "drying out" tomorrow and Monday forenoon.

Willard wishes to enter the ring at 235; he is about five pounds over that now. Each will carry into the ring from five to seven pounds of superfluous flesh, in order to have something aside from muscular energy to draw on during the struggle.

ENDURANCE.

The apparent endurance of each is unlimited, neither having shown signs of exhaustion at any time during the past week in their work. There is a wide difference of opinion among the fight experts, regarding the probable length of the fight; the style of the principals and the advantages each possesses. It is generally admitted, however, that the champion is Willard's master in the science of offensive and defensive fighting and that he is faster on his feet and with the hands. Whether he can make this more effective, in the shape of blows landed in the right place, remains to be seen.

The negro's best blows are a left hook and a right uppercut, although he has a terrific swing with either hand when occasion offers. It is thought he may have difficulty in landing his left jab on Willard's face, owing to the five and a half inches advantage in height which the cowboy possesses.

POUND BODY?

The same may prove true with his famous right uppercut to the jaw and Johnson may change his usual tactics and pound the body at every opportunity, for Willard, so far as has been observed, covers his body in a rather loose and careless fashion. Willard, however, has learned to shoot a fine left to the face and body, which is extremely effective owing to his enormous reach. The negro can

GUNNERS MEET IN CLUB MATCH.

OPENING SHOOT OF THE TARGET SEASON HERE.

Members of Local Rifle Organization Meet Against Rocky Mountain Team of Butte, Mont., on the Glendale Range Today and Team Has Stood to Lose.

The Los Angeles Rifle and Revolver Club is to open the season today with a shoot against the crack riflemen of the Rocky Mountain Rifle Club of Butte, Mont. The Montana men are numbered among the best rifle shots in the country and with the little practice that the local shooters have had this winter they have an excellent chance to defeat the home club.

Twenty shots off hand at 200 yards and ten shots at 200 yards kneeling, is the programme. Every member of the club is to shoot and the scores of the ten highest men will count for the competition.

Last season, the local club, which numbers among its members some of the greatest riflemen of the country, was noted for high off hand scores. After a long winter, without practice on the range, the men will hardly be expected to show up to form.

Sergt. W. E. Smith of the local police department is looked upon as a probable high score man if he is able to get away from Chinatown long enough to pull the trigger a few times. Jim Fraser, Doc Louis Felsenthal, G. Watkins, A. L. Thompson, E. C. ...man, C. F. Seeney, I. O. Gaedicke, E. P. Price and C. H. Hubbs are some of the Los Angeles Rifle and Revolver Club members who are almost certain to get in the high score.

SKATERS GLIDE IN APRIL FOOL'S ROLL.

Harold Ingram as Charlie ... won the men's character ... Roy Burton took second character prize as a policeman, and W. McCoy as a hottentot was voted the most original men's costume. COMPARISON OF JOHNSON AND WILLARD IS MADE.

Experts Think Fight will Either be Very Short or Very Long—Endurance of Two Boxers Seems Unlimited. Champion Expected to Play for Body, Which White Man Guards Loosely.

negro's best blows are a left right uppercut, although terrific swing with either occasion offers. It is may have difficulty in his left jab on Willard's face, the five and a half inches in height which the cow look for trouble in this direction. The white man's swings and straight drives have more power behind them than Johnson's.

Johnson has the advantage of quickness and sureness of foot; although he shuffles about, he has the movements of a cat and is a fine judge of distance. Willard is slow and appears at times uncertain of the next step. Frequently he finds himself in an awkward, unbalanced position and if this happens in the ring, Johnson will be sure to turn it to his advantage.

SHORT OR LONG.

Expert opinion supports the belief that it will either be a very short fight or a very long one. In the past it has been Johnson's policy to have his opponent come to him. It is thought possible that on Monday he may change his tactics and rush, figuring on getting past Willard's comparatively mediocre defense for a knockout, while he is strong and fresh. If this is impossible, he is likely to resort to a crafty wearing down system.

Willard's best chance to win lies in a terrific smash landed in a mixup, in the early rounds, or the slow gruelling of the older man, although in the latter case much depends on the virtually unknown ability of both to stand punishment, such as only these giants can deal.

Willard is a better fighter now than ever before in his life, but the question is whether he is good enough to whip Johnson.

On the other hand, it is generally agreed that Johnson is slower than he was five years ago, when he fought Jeffries, but many observers surmise that he has not gone back much. This reduced the fight question to whether Willard has advanced far enough to meet Johnson going back.

A thousand sporting men here today would like the answer to that question, but no answer is possible until Monday tells the tale. All realize that there is a psychological as well as a physical side to the fighting game and many believe that in that respect Johnson has the advantage. He always has been confident in entering the ring and he has shown ability to keep his head in times of stress.

BIG CROWDS.

The championship will be settled before a gathering largely foreign to the fighters, although several thousand Americans have arrived in Havana in the last few days. All the Americans in Cuba seem to have come here. The two steamers which reached Havana today from Key West were packed and many were seasick from their rough voyage across the ninety-mile stretch.

The Cuban public will easily pay for the battle and make up the $30,000 purse Johnson is to get.

CARBURETOR HELPS SPEED.

BARNEY GOT MORE OUT OF HIS RACING CAR.

Fourteen Cars Started in Venice Race with the Master Carburetor and Nearly Every Car that Finished had It—Oldfield, Carlson, and Marquis Used it on Racers.

Barney Oldfield's recommendation to Paul Hale Bruske of the Maxwell racing team that the three Maxwell racers be equipped with Master carburetors bore fruit at Venice Wednesday when the Master-equipped cars finished first and second. Oldfield and Carlson, at the wheels of the winners, declare the carburetor had much to do with the success of the car.

"I am strong for the Master, and always have been," said Barney. "I showed my confidence when I insisted that my Maxwell be Master-equipped for the Venice race. The confidence that I had perfect carburetion and that my car was just enough faster than it ever had been before enabled me to drive my best race. The combination of Harroun-built motor and Master carburetor did the rest."

Of the eighteen cars which started in the Venice race, fourteen were equipped with Master carburetors. The only ones which were not were the two Mercers and the two Stutz cars.

The double victory of the Master carburetor in the races at San Francisco has given the drivers every confidence in the carburetor, and the fact that Barney Oldfield and Billy Carlson added another winning to the list of Master victories has made it more popular than ever.

Such drivers as Oldfield, Disbrow, Resta, De Palma, Carlson, Marquis, Rickenbacher and others equally well known have used and are using the Master on their racing cars.

COMPANY I WINS INDOOR BALL GAME

1000 PERSONS WATCH DEFEAT OF MACHINE GUN COMPANY AT ARMORY.

Before almost 1000 spectators the Co. I indoor baseball club defeated the Machine Gun Company team by a 2 to 1 score last night. This victory puts the Pasadena club in the lead of the Armory league, but Tuesday night the clubs meet in the final game of the league series and should the machine gun men win there will have to be an extra session to decide the championship and the possession of the Richard K. Fox trophy, which carries the State title.

In the game last night the machine gun men held a 1 to 0 lead until the eighth inning. Three errors and a walk gave the game to the Pasadena crowd.

The batteries were Collins and Mueller for the machine gunners and for Co. I E. Loftus and C. Loftus performed on the giving and receiving ends.

The machine gun men made two hits and five errors while Co. I's stars made but one hit and one error.

R. D. Maxwell, head high boss and chief poo-bah of the local Studebaker branch has just returned from a visit to the Studebaker factory and is much elated over the plans for next year.

Ed Harris of the Cole agency is agitated over the new "eight" which is due out here next week. That it is fast is proven by the fact that they have to use a seventy-five-mile speedometer rather than a sixty-mile register on their stock models.

Jack Stoner sold a Mack truck to the city which has gone 31,462 miles in eleven months without a replacement or a repair of any kind. The entire adjustment cost to date is $5.60. Jack thinks that this is quite an ad for his car.

The truck and service departments of the Goodrich Tire Company have been moved to No. 406 West Pico street where they will occupy the basement and two floors. This gives a total area for the local branch of 53,250 square feet.

ability because I was inexperienced at boxing. I will win this fight through sheer force of determination if nothing else," said Willard.

Willard's claim that he has improved 50 per cent. since he boxed in New York is confirmed by all of the Gotham fistic followers who have come here to see the big fight. To a man they have been amazed at the sight of the new Willard.

CHANGED MAN.

Jess has thought and dreamed nothing but this fight for the last year and to some of his friends he says he is happy and confident now that the time is drawing near when he is to have the chance to accomplish the ambition of his life.

Willard declares that he will go into the ring to win from the very first bell. There'll be no feeling out the champion for Jess. He will go right after Johnson in the first round and keep up the attack until he has won the battle.

BERKELEY DUCKS STRONG SWIMMERS.

LANGER'S TEAM DOPED TO WIN RACES IN WHICH MEN ARE ENTERED.

Preliminary arrangements have been made by Les Henry, chairman of the swimming committee of the Los Angeles Athletic Club and the Southern California branch of the A.A.U. for a meet Saturday night, April 10, between the University of California swimming team and the team of the L.A.A.C.

This will be the third meet in which the California boys have competed against the club men and as both teams have been considerably strengthened some great contests are promised.

The University of California team with Ludy Langer as captain is reputed as being the strongest college team in the United States and although they only bring from four to six men south they will give the speedy club men a run for the first places.

Last year the club team won over the college men by strength in numbers and by taking all the points in the diving, plunge for distance and relay race, and it looks as though they will have to do the same this year if they win, as Langer will swim the 220 and 440-yard events and unquestionably win them as there are no swimmers in the south who can come close to him.

Jim Reselure, the one-legged wonder who has not been seen in the south for several years, is reported as swimming better than when he competed in the club tank. Ernie Smith, who swims the sprints and Lindsay who is also a good short distance man, is another fast splasher. These four men can take first and second place in all the events from the 50-yard dash to the 880-yard grind against any college team in the country and the club team will have a hard time in breaking through their line.

The club will have to depend principally upon the diving, plunge for distance; breast and back stroke events for their large number of points and with the good men they have in these events should overcome the lead the college boys gain in the other events.

FREEMAN CATCHES BIG STEELHEAD.

SANTA YNEZ RIVER FISHING REPORTED GOOD BY THE SPORTSMEN.

When April fool's day ushered in the trout season there was one man spinning a line over the Santa Ynez river who put one over all the other anglers, and it was no fool's joke either. George K. Freeman of Prospect avenue, Santa Barbara, was the lucky Walton who pulled up the first big steel head trout of the year. The big beauty was twenty-eight inches long and on the balance he turned up 7 and 3-4 pounds. It took forty-two long hard-fought minutes to land the record fish, but the prize was worth the effort. Mr. Freeman's second steelhead weighed 4 1-2 pounds and measured twenty-four inches in length. Besides these wonders he trapped over a hundred smaller trout ranging from four to ten inches in length. He was assisted by several other sportsmen.

The party started from Santa Barbara in a Studebaker machine at 4 in the morning, and in an hour and forty minutes they had climbed the San Marcos grade and were down by Camp Comfort at the junction of the Hampton and Bear creeks with the Santa Ynez river, and had thrown the first teaser at 6:30. The limit had been basketed by 9 o'clock.

Mr. Freeman was accompanied by his brother in law, Fred Slathe, his son Ed., and Lou Raffour, a well-known hotel man of Santa Barbara. He reports that the roads are fair for mountain going and some of the steep places necessitate low speed, but that the trip is well worth the climb.

It is a twenty-mile run from the city. About thirty auto parties were up the Santa Ynez catching trout, but only a few other steelheads had been caught. Most of the parties were from Los Angeles, and some were prepared to camp for two or three days. General fishing is good, and the big ones rise to most anything. The big steelhead was captured with a No. 8 single gut leader hook, with a light tackle.

PELICANS SPOT SCHOOL OF FISH.

SANTA MONICA FISHERMEN GET POMPANO AND SEA TROUT OFF LONG WHARF.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA MONICA, April 3.—The presence of pelicans in unusual number near the shore, making spectacular dives into the surf, was the signal for beach fisherfolk to prepare their lines, rods and bait. Where the pelicans are, there the fish will be found, and the truth of this statement was exemplified today, for all who had the patience today to fish from any of the pleasure piers were well rewarded with a generous catch of pompano.

Sea trout were also among the catches of the day, the trout jumping for pompano that had already been caught and impaling themselves on the hooks as the captured fish was leaving the water.

T. Yakahi of Los Angeles was the most successful of the long wharf fishermen, he having succeeded in taking seventy pounds of pompano in two hours. The largest fish in the catch weighed four pounds. More than 500 persons were fishing on the local piers today, and almost without exception there was a reward for their energy.

History.

FIRST RACERS WERE WINTONS.

THREE "BULLETS" HELD ALL RECORDS.

Now the Company has Been Out of the Speed Game for Eleven Years, Having Made a Reputation for Speed in the Days When the Racing Game was Young.

A great many people not thoroughly posted on the past as to automobile racing have asked me at different times why the Winton is not heard of more in racing, says H. L. Owesney, Pacific Coast manager of the Winton Motor Car Company.

The reason is that the Winton company was one of the auto-racing pioneers; certainly the most famous racing cars of their time were the three Winton Bullets. No. 1, with four upright cylinders, reached its highest speed at Cleveland September 16, 1902, one mile in 1m. 2⅛s. No. 2, with eight horizontal cylinders, made a circular track record of 52 4-5s. at Cleveland August 22, 1904, and a straightaway record of 43s. on the Florida beach January, 1904. At the latter meet the Bullet defeated William K. Vanderbilt's foreign racer and won the mile championship in 46 2-5s. Bullet No. 3 had four horizontal cylinders and was the first car to beat one minute on a circular track, covering one mile in 58s. at Cleveland September 4, 1903. The Winton company retired from racing in 1904, having been up to that time a consistent winner of world's records.

Since that time our efforts have all been put toward the manufacture of pleasure cars, and as to the success we have enjoyed—well, just ask any Winton owner.

MIDWICKS WIN POLO MATCH.

Philadelphians are Outclassed from the Start.

McLoughlin and Webb the Bright Stars.

Handicap Doesn't Avail the Losers Any.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO, April 3.—In a game that was one-sided from start to finish the crack Midwick team defeated the Philadelphia four on the exposition polo field this afternoon. The score was 15½ to 5½, and the figures describe the match more eloquently than words.

It was the first game played on the grounds since J. Pluvius started to bring out the spring flowers with frequent showers, and the fine weather brought out a large gathering of society people and exposition visitors to witness the contest. The field was not in the best of condition as the tufts of earth flung up by the flashing hoofs of the ponies showed, but the players evidently did their best and it was a case of the best team winning.

OFF WITH RUSH.

From the tap of the bell Midwick started out to bury the five goals handicapped to Philadelphia, and from that time on the wearers of the purple proceeded to lead their opponents from the East a merry chase.

Philadelphia apparently was not in the form which has marked its previous showings. E. L. Stokes and Paul D. Mills were unhorsed in the mid-periods, but pluckily regained their mounts; but try as they would the eastern players were no match for Midwick, which proceeded to roll up a steadily-increasing score.

The two goals earned by Philadelphia were made by Mills and Stokes, but this was cut down to half a goal by penalties.

THE STARS.

J. Watson Webb and Frederick McLoughlin were the star players of the Midwick team. They seemed to be able to direct the course of the white ball at will and were responsible for the goals made for their side as the following summary shows.

Last season this Philadelphia team as individuals did so well that the handicap rating of every man on the team was raised. Mr. Phippe's was raised from two to three, Mr. S. Stokes from two to three and Mr. E. L. Stokes and Mr. Paul D. Mills each from three to four. They are all well-mounted men, nevertheless Midwick allowing them a handicap of five goals won easily.

OFF COLOR.

It is only fair to say for the Philadelphia men that their opponents have the best of them in one very important thing and that is the matter of condition. The players representing Midwick have been playing together for the last two months and are therefore in fine condition and practice. The Philadelphia players have had virtually no practice, and the weather of the past week has prohibited their chance of even knocking around on their ponies to get some exercise.

Tomorrow's match on the exposition polo field will be between the southern division of the army and the San Mateo team for the Golden Gate cups.

GOLF CLUBHOUSE IN GRIFFITH PARK.

PARK COMMISSIONERS HASTEN PLANS FOR LOCKER ROOMS AND RESTAURANT.

Recommendations to the City Council have been filed by the Park Commissioners advising that their consideration be given the proposed and long desired pavilion at the Griffith Park municipal golf links.

Plans for a building in which will be locker and shower and dressing rooms for men and for women, and with a restaurant in connection will be begun, according to C. C. Keller of the Park Commissioners, as soon as assurance is gained from the city fathers that the project will receive their attention and the cost of drawing up the plans will not go for naught.

A canvass of individual members of the council has shown that the majority of them are heartily in favor of allowing the Park Commission the appropriation for the building, and as soon as official action can be taken on the matter the hundreds of golfers who make use of Griffith Park links may hope to see their clubhouse materialize.

race he ran today. He covered the 120 low sticks in 15 1-5s., a fifth of a second slower than his world's record. Murray, Stanford's hurdler, pressed Kelly and not until the final sprint was the outcome certain.

Horine, in an exhibition match against Beeson, world's record holder in the high jump, defeated his old intercollegiate rival with a leap of 6ft. 3¾in.

DISTANCES.

The middle eastern men proved their distance superiority beyond question. An indication of their ability at the long grind was given when Gantz took the pole in the mile race and serenely kept it for the whole race. Burgess, a Blue and Gold sophomore, earned his second in a terrific sprint for the tape that Wright could not find strength to combat. Considering track conditions the time is good.

GREAT MASON.

But it is to Mason, lean, stringy Illinois two miler, that the Blue and Gold is doffing its hat. He trotted to the tape at least an eighth of a mile in the lead of the rest of the pack. He runs as smoothly and as easily as a well-oiled machine, with even less friction. A couple of minutes after the race he was wandering around the track, apparently ready for another two miles at 9:50. If Mason had been pressed a new record might have resulted.

Tapping ran a heavy race in the 880. Miller of California attempted to lead out the Illinois man, while Cuendette laid low and conserved his strength. Tapping refused to sprint before the time. But when he did start his legs speeding in the last fifty yards he left Cuendette without trouble.

STANTON HERO.

Eddie Stanton was California's brightest star. He did not get his usual start in the 100-yard dash, but managed to arrive at the tape with the second man, Hammitt, three feet behind Arndt. The Bear second sprint man failed to place in this event, being entirely outclassed by the eastern runners.

When the 220 was announced the meet still hung in doubt. California led, but not enough to make the victory sure.

If Stanton could win first place in the dash the meet would be settled. The bleachers soon discovered the fact and yell leaders brought their batteries of forty-two-centimeter voices into action. After the starter's gun the cheers for the Los Angeles runner rattled back to the hills and when he broke the tape the din did great credit to the carefully-trained vocal athletes.

California was disappointed in the hurdle results. Preble, after his performance against U.S.C., was expected to land in first money. As it was he had a hard fight to take second from Ames, the Illinois hurdler. Knapp made a pretty race in the low hurdles, but Ames landed first by several feet.

California in the relay held the early lead gained by Bradway and at no time were these five points endangered.

Five thousand spectators saw the meet and dedication exercises. Illinois alumni were out in force with an organized rooting section.

President Wheeler and various regents made speeches and the $80,000 athletic field was formally dedicated as "California oval."

POMONA DEFEATS SAN BERNARDINO.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN BERNARDINO, April 3.—Pomona High School won from San Bernardino in the opening game of the Citrus Belt League in this city this afternoon in fifteen innings, by a score of 9 to 5. The local infield weakened in the final period and Pomona put across four runs on hits and errors.

Perdew pitched the entire game for San Bernardino, opposed by Parker of Pomona. Hurley and Creswell of Pomona were the backstops. The game was the most exciting ever staged by High School teams in this city.

DOWNEY FAILS TO SCORE ON NORWALK

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

DOWNEY, April 3.—Norwalk blanked Downey in the fourth game of the championship series, valley section of the High School League, at Downey today. The air-tight pitching of Moffitt, Norwalk's twirler, featured the game, as did the fielding of Copeland of Downey, and Ardis's catching for the same nine. Moffitt struck out twenty-three of Downey's hopes.

The score:

Norwalk, 4; hits, 12; errors, 1.

Downey, 0; hits, 2; errors, 3.

Norwalk batteries—Moffitt and Newton; struck out by Moffitt, twenty-three.

Downey batteries—Morrow and Ardis; struck out by Morrow, eight.

the hog in the second inning, but he kept sticking around until the fifth, when Metzger put on the finishing touches with a hit that scored two. Stanley Covaleskie, the deep-sea coal miner, then came to the rescue. He himself was later rescued by Ray Callahan of Chehalis, Wash. Three runs were made off Covaleskie in the seventh. The Angels severely threatened Callahan in the eighth, but after thinking it over, stopped at third base.

MYSTERY SOLVED.

The advent of Covaleskie into the public gaze is believed to have solved the mystery of Harry Ables's' lost red undershirt. This undershirt mysteriously disappeared from the Ables backyard down in Texas one bright wash-day two years ago. Covaleskie was yesterday wearing red. Those thoroughly acquainted with the Ables undershirt, declare that it is the same one. Nobody accuses Covaleskie of having taken it. His friends advance the theory that he bought it from a second-hand dealer, and without the slightest knowledge as to whom it previously belonged.

Portland out-hit us, 13 to 11, but failed to time their blows properly.

ZEB AGAIN.

Maggert stole his daily base, and Zeb played a lot of good baseball. Zeb, however, didn't get any hits, due in a large measure to the fact that he was walked three out of four times.

Boles, the crack little ketcher, was our main hitter with a triple and a double.

Now for a few random remarks concerning the technical side of the sport.

After Maggert had been retired in the second, Higg loosed up like a regular liberal guy, and walked both McMullen and Terry. He broke one to Boles about ankle high. Walt was not to be denied, and swung like a golfer, meaning from the ear down. He caught the pill squarely on the label and it traveled into deep left on a line for three bases, McMullen and Terry scoring. It was a great blow, and but for the fact that Walt now and then has trouble with his legs, he might have stretched it into a home run. Higg took a firm grip on himself and fanned Poll. Wolter ended the attack with a fly to Lober.

COMFORT.

Poll enjoyed a fair degree of comfort in the first and second, but was forced to pitch himself out of a deep depression in the third. An error and hits by Speas and Derrick gummed up the bases with two down. Great Gus proved harmless for once, flicking off a foul that Zeb nabbed back of third.

Thus far only one clean hit had been made off Poll, but the Beavers became more festive in the fourth, Doane and Stumpf starting the round with singles that were open and above board. It was at this point that Poll retired to the garage for repairs. Although there were runners on first and third and nobody out, Scoggy seemed calm and collected when he appeared. Lober, the first man to face him, dropped a bunt in front of the plate. Scoggy came in and fielded the ball in a flash, nailing Lober at first. Doane, who had reached third, came right along to the plate, and was nailed, Abstein to Boles, for the completion of a sensational double. Not often that you see a double play and a sacrifice hit in one package. Lober gets credit for a sacrifice as he advanced his man a base, and cannot be made to suffer for Doane's vaulting ambition, as shown in his desire to take an extra base.

Coltrin fouled to Metzger, and everybody stood up and called Scoggy a regular pitcher. They are willing to forget the Goof part of his past, and help him to get a new start in life.

HARD LUCK.

Scoggy became completely surrounded by hard luck in the fifth, when Portland tied the count. Two men had been retired when the Beavers begun to scratch out singles. Speas beat out a high bounder to Metzger. Derrick poked out a grounder, which didn't get beyond the infield, but left Metzger and Zeb in a snarl. Great Gus, who is seldom allowed to bat against left-handers, was taken away and Carisch sent in to hit for him. Carisch connected, not with great force, but effectively. The pill took a large hop just as Metzger was about to shake hands with it. The best that George could do was to block it, an operation that left no time to get the runner at first. These untoward events filled the bases to the brim.

THE CLOWN.

Doane, not caring much for southpaws, George Kircher, the Billie Burke of the Coast League, was instructed to hit for him and did so, singling Speas and Derrick across with a clean clout over second. Stumpf ended the rally with a fly to Wolter. Forever afterward, Scoggy held the visitors to three hits, all harmless and easily domesticated.

The Angels attended to Higg's case and resumed the lead in the fifth. Scoggy beat out a hit to Coltrin. Wolter chased him to third with a hit to right, going to second on the outfield toss. That sterling patriot, George Metzger, here stood up and settled the issue with a clean hit to center.

This sent Scoggy and Wolter home—likewise Higg. Nobody out, and one on base. Coal Miner Covaleskie was sent into this hole, McCredie figured that his early training especially qualified him for the undertaking. Ellis forced Metzger at second, and Abstein batted the pill into a double play Davis to Stumpf to Derrick.

DAZZLED.

Covaleskie became dazzled by the reflection of the bright sunlight on his red undershirt in the seventh, and walked Scoggy and Wolter. Ellis, Abstein, Maggert and McMullen then happened along with a flock of singles which made a noise like three runs.

Zeb drew a walk of Callahan in the eighth, and Boles doubled, but ways and means of getting Zeb from third to home could not be devised.

This gives us the edge on the series too date, with three out of five, and we figure to take at least one today.

YALE WINS ROW IN BLINDING STORM.

PHILADELPHIA, April 3.—Under weather conditions probably never before braved in a rowing race by oarsmen of American colleges, Yale won today both the varsity and junior eight-oared shell events from the University of Pennsylvania over the one-mile, 550-yards course on the Schuylkill River. Each of the New Haven crews finished two lengths in the lead.

The races were rowed under blizzard conditions. More than a foot of snow lay on the river banks, the flakes were coming down so thick that one could scarcely see a quarter-mile ahead, the temperature was at the freezing point, and the forty-mile northeast gale that was driving the snow into the faces of the oarsmen had made the usually placid Schuylkill so rough that many thought it would be impossible for the frail shells to keep right side up.

It was nearly 6 o'clock when the big race—that for the varsity crews—was started after the Yale junior eight had defeated Pennsylvania second crew. Yale held the east shore. The start was a good one and the first quarter-mile the crews rowed bow and bow. Then the Yale began to forge ahead and at the half-mile mark they had a slight lead. Yale began exhibiting much greater power than Pennsylvania and at the mile post the crew had a lead of about two-thirds of a length. The blue crew rowed for the best part of the mile at thirty-three and thirty-four strokes a minute, while Pennsylvania was pulling thirty-six.

A quarter of a mile from the finish the New Haven eight made their last sprint and opened up nearly a boat-length of water between themselves and Pennsylvania. The Quakers responded, but Yale maintained her lead and then added a little to it and crossed the finish mark two lengths in front. The time of the race was estimated by the officials at 7:56.

Despite the severe weather conditions and the hard sprint all the way both crews finished in good condition.

The race of the junior crews was much like the varsity race. Yale went into the lead and at the half-mile point the New England crew had a quarter-length advantage. They kept slowly increasing their lead and finished strong, two lengths in front of the Pennsylvanians. Yale's time was 7:58.

Despite the severe weather and the fact that the shells finished the race with much water in them, the oarsmen suffered no ill effects.

In each of the races most of the men removed their sweaters before starting the race and rowed in their usual scant attire.

In spite of the deep snow, several hundred enthusiasts witnessed the contests from the finishing point, while scores of Yale and Pennsylvania graduates followed the races in automobiles along the East River drive. It was a test of rowing skill taught by the famous English experts, Vivian Nickalls, coach of the University of Pennsylvania, and Guy Nickalls, instructor at Yale. The crews used the English style of oars.

CHRISTIAN TRIES VARIOUS TACTICS; OUTPOINTED.

Four Home Runs Put Ables and Malarkey Out of Running—Christian Takes Command and Fitzgerald Promptly Knocks Homer Off Leader—Benham Pitches Well.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, April 3.—Manager Christian of Oakland played chess with his players here today in an effort to win from San Francisco, but none of his moves proved effective, and the Seals evened up the series by winning, 10 to 6.

The Seals took kindly to the slants of the trans-bay pitching staff and after four home runs had been negotiated off Ables and Malarkey, Christian himself led his soldiers from the mound.

Fitzgerald promptly lined out his second home run of the game. Benham, for San Francisco, although wild at times, pulled himself out of several holes. Score:

Hupmobile
CAR OF THE AMERICAN FAMILY

Ask the Garage Man

The garage is a motor car clinic.

All kinds of cars with all kinds of symptoms and diseases come there to be cured.

Ask the surgeon in overalls about the Hupmobile.

He will tell you that many of them come for gas and oil.

"But mighty few," he will add, "for repairs."

"I have no reason to 'boost' Hupmobiles," he will say with a grin. "They don't particularly help my business."

After that admission, listen to what he has to say. He knows cars.

He will tell you that the Hupmobile is a wonder.

He will confirm what you already have come to believe—that the Hupmobile stands up under conditions that would kill a car less sturdy.

He will tell you that the Hupmobile motor is a wonder—a glutton for hard work.

The garage man is the friend of the Hupmobile in spite of the fact that it does not swell his income.

He is its friend because he loves a good car—and he can't help saying so. He is always a Hupmobile booster.

Let us add to his testimony with a Hupmobile demonstration.

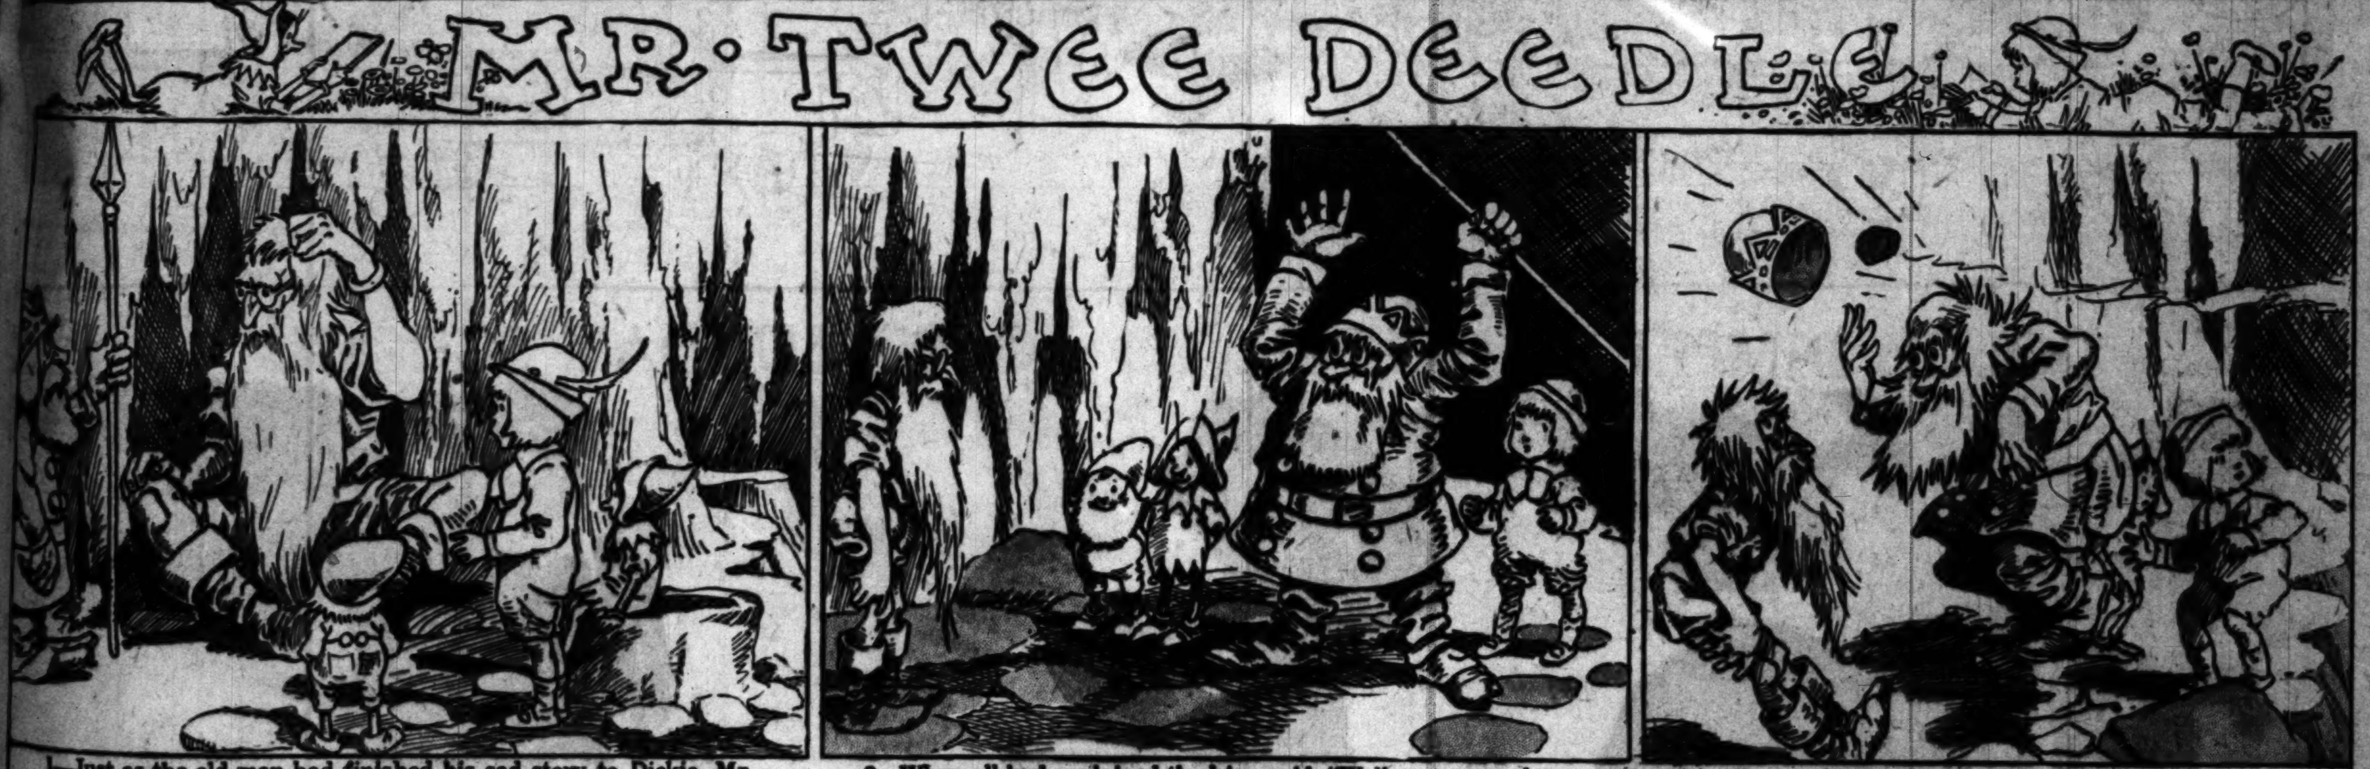
MR. TWEE DEEDLE



1—Just as the old man had finished his sad story to Dickie, Mr. Twee Deedle and Thumpkins they heard footsteps coming down the ledge. Finally a queer, dumpy man came around the corner. "I'm King Doodles of this cave!" he said; "what are you doing here?"

2—When all had explained the king said, "Well, you are welcome to stay here if you wish, but I will have to make the tall man smaller, so that he will not bump his head on the lime icicles!" So saying he lifted his spear and made the old man smaller.

3—"Now," he continued, "I will show you boys around the cave!" But just as he finished there was a derisive laugh from the other side of the cavern and a stone sailed across and knocked the king's hat right off his head.

4—"After him, my brave men!" the king cried, forgetting that he was not accompanied by his bodyguard, and leaping across the chasm he gave chase to a fleeing figure. "It's the naughty Wuggle!" cried the king.

5—Our friends, with the king in the lead, were gaining upon the Wuggle when, just as they turned a corner, the Wuggle rolled a large automobile tire around the corner and into the king with a bump. The tire, after rolling over the king, knocked down Dickie and the old man.

6—Mr. Twee Deedle, however, flew up in the air and soon caught the naughty Wuggle. "I have him!" he cried as he saw the king and the others appear around the corner. The Wuggle began crying so loud he sounded like a steam calliope, and the echoes were so many it nearly deafened our friends. "We'll take him to my castle," said the king, "and decide whether we will give him ten days in jail with soda water and ice cream or quail on toast and apple pie!"

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

THE TRIFLES THAT MAKE UP LIFE.

"IT seems hard that the little things one wants are the things that one can't have," said a friend to me. "Now if I yearned for a trip to Europe or a steam yacht or a seven passenger limousine I could console myself with the thought that it was foolish to have such extravagant ambitions. But it's the little things I would like that it stirs me up not to be able to get.

"For instance, I'd like to be free to lie abed ten or fifteen minutes later in the morning when I'm sleepy without feeling that everything in the house is at a standstill until I get up. I'd like to have some one play the piano in the afternoon when I go to take a nap—not a magnificent performer, but some one who knew pretty, soft pieces of music and would just keep on at them until I drowsed off. I'd like to have some one read aloud to me when I couldn't sleep, and rub my head when it ached, and stroke my wrist when I'm nervous. I'd dearly like to have some one see that the ruffle and frills at the necks of my dresses were always fresh and the buttons on my shoes and my gloves mended.

"You see, none of the things is big or important, but they might as well be colossal, for all the chance there is of my having them. Yet it doesn't seem really unreasonable to want any of them, does it?"

I agreed with her that her desires were certainly modest enough to be readily fulfilled, and after she had gone I mused along the line she had started. So many of the important comforts of life are dependent upon little things and so much malease is caused by the omission of trifles, especially in various departments of housekeeping!

I have known times when my appetite has been affected seriously by a spot by my place at the table. In fact, spots on the tablecloth in a restaurant or a hotel usually banish my desire for food effectually. Yet it would be easy to lay a clean napkin over the stains and hide them from view if the cloth itself could not be changed.

Other details exist in which care or inattention makes all the difference in the world. Like my friend, I feel that I could stand neglect of these things better if they involved hard work or large expenses, but in the majority of cases they are of apparently diminutive importance.

Look about you in your own house and take account of the trifles. As one small example, do you lay a napkin or cloth under the hot potatoes in the dish, a napkin or doily under and around the hot biscuit or muffins sent to table? Do you know that the contact of the heated food with the cold plate causes deposit of moisture from the steam and renders the potatoes or bread soggy? Are the plates on which warm food is to be served heated before they are brought in, and are the platter and the vegetable dishes made hot before using?

As another example, do you show pains to use the napkins that match a tablecloth at the same time as that special cloth or are they taken from the linen drawer haphazard? Are you on the lookout for the first breaks in your napery, to set the stitch in time, or do you neglect the tiny holes until they are so large that the repairing will be painfully obvious? Do you watch for the giving away of the hemstitching in your napkins and doilies and catch this up before it has a chance to spread?

These may seem almost too insignificant items to be noted, but, believe me, that when you attend to these your housekeeping is even threaded and efficient; when you overlook them a certain slovenliness marks the establishment.

If you keep a maid, go into your kitchen at night after she has left it and observe the details which would make the kitchen attractive if they were heeded, that mark it with the stamp of untidiness if omitted.

Is the garbage pail lined with a paper which protects the metal from the food and renders cleanliness and a sanitary condition more easily won? Are the doors of the ice box and of the meat safe closely shut or are they a crack ajar, and do the drawers of the table gape open? Is the stove clean and well blacked, free from drippings of the cooking? Are the burnt matches used in lighting the stove conspicuous by their absence, or are they dropped on the floor or thrown on the window sill?

Have the leaves and the grounds been turned from the tea and coffee pots and have these been scalded and rinsed properly? Is there any food left about the room? Is the kitchen tablecloth folded and laid away or left huddled on the shelf or hung on the back of a chair? Are the kitchen towels washed and put to dry? Has the sink been emptied and washed and are all the utensils used in cooking the dinner cleaned and returned to their places?

I might go on like this indefinitely with the little things which should have been done.

Before this and perhaps more than once I have told the story of the farmer's wife who neglected her farm after the death of her husband and was roused from the absorption of her grief after a while to find that everything was running down and the place going to wreck and ruin. Alarmed at the falling off of her income from the farm and the bills of expenses which met her on every side she went to consult the wise woman of the neighborhood and begged for a charm to restore the establishment to its former thrift.

"Get up early every morning," said the wise woman, "and go from one part of the farm to the other. Visit every quarter—the dairy, the stillroom, the granary, the barn, the farm yard. Go into each corner and stand with your back to the wall and count five and twenty, looking about you as you count."

When the farmer's widow followed this advice she saw many things. She noticed that the servants were neglecting their work, that nothing was clean or well cared for; that the milk and cream and butter did not receive due attention; that the cattle were not fed, the meat not cured, the crops not stored, that mice were in the granary, rats in the corncrib, and weasels in the poultry yard. By the time she had righted these abuses prosperity had returned to the domain.

Something like this it is well for every housekeeper to do, and while she need not take her stand in the corner of each room and count five and twenty she is wise if she inspects every branch of her home, no matter how small it may be, and strives to discover what breaks or leaks there may be which change her housekeeping from a thing of beauty and joy to a makeshift, careless affair.

Look into your linen closet, for instance. I have already spoken of the breaks in the dining room napery. Seek for the same in your bed linen and among your towels. If you do your own ironing I hope you are on the alert for every sign of giving way and lay aside the injured article to be repaired at your leisure. Unless you do this you should bestow especial attention upon the clean clothes when they are sent up from the wash, to see if the sheets or pillowslips have been torn on the line, the hemstitched edge of the towels ripped loose, the counterpanes rust stained or ragged.

Even when these articles are past repairing they have many possibilities in the way of turning and making smaller if they are sheets, of cutting over into washcloths if they are towels, of making into cloths to lay under fish, potatoes, and hot bread if they are linen napkins or tablecloths. All these may seem like trifles, but it is astonishing to what a goodly sum total they amount when taken in bulk.

Go from your linen closet to your parlor or living room, or whatever you [illegible] and survey that. Until you [illegible] a critical eye you will have [illegible] how many trifling defects there [illegible] corrected. The gimp is torn from [illegible] of that lounging chair. You [illegible] marked it unconsciously some [illegible] and meant to have the tack [illegible] would hold the trimming in place [illegible] slipped your mind. The fringe is [illegible] from the end of the rug. The piece hanging loose is only a couple of [illegible] length, but it gives an untidy appearance to that part of the room.

A bit of the moulding is [illegible] the back of the sofa. It came loose [illegible] ago and for fear it might be lost [illegible] it away with the piece broken [illegible] lip of the big vase and the [illegible] armchair. They are all there [illegible] drawer together and you [illegible] a dozen times you would have [illegible] replaced and then the matter [illegible] from your attention. Take [illegible] now and see what a difference the [illegible]ations will make in the general cheer of the room.

I would not be speaking at [illegible] on this topic if I dealt entirely [illegible] terial things. All these are of [illegible] but there is something more [illegible] er apparent trifles exist which [illegible] mar the comfort of the family [illegible] though these were things which [illegible] with the substantial plenishing [illegible] care. In fact, I believe they [illegible] result in reference to the happiness [illegible] household than any of the [illegible] mentioned.

Little enough such details [illegible] the kindly word of greeting, the [illegible] of the harsh word, the smile [illegible] the frown—but all carry weight [illegible] it comes to the wee consideration [illegible] is no end to them and to their [illegible]

It may not seem much to lay [illegible] ing or the evening paper where [illegible] of the house will always find [illegible] he comes into the room; to refrain from tearing the wrapper off the [illegible] the one who prefers to open it [illegible] to recollect the taste of this or [illegible] ber of the family in the line of [illegible] give him some little dainty [illegible] when his appetite seems languid [illegible] the subjects likely to provoke [illegible] controversy when the [illegible] sentative of the household is [illegible] member the preferences of [illegible] way of dress and wear, the [illegible] proves when he comes home [illegible] a hard day at the office; but all [illegible] numberless other little offices of tenderness mark the home [illegible] a home and not merely an [illegible]

The mother sets the pace [illegible] sort of thing. Occasionally [illegible] a father supplied with this [illegible] eration, but as a rule the [illegible] to the mother for the example [illegible] guide them in rendering the [illegible] and beloved spot. The [illegible] terial trifles is much, but [illegible] say that the immaterial [illegible] important?

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

"I HAVE read the Helping Hand for a number of years and consider it the cream of the paper for the sunshine it brings into the homes of those who need it most. Once before I contributed directions for an article wanted, and perhaps the following for marguerites will be of interest to K. J. B.: Make an icing by boiling one and a half cups of sugar and half a cup of water until it spins a thread four or five inches long. Be sure of the last, as I find that the icing is too soft if not tested in this way. Have ready the white of one egg, well beaten. Remove the sirup from the fire and add the beaten white, whip till cold, a result which you can accomplish more quickly by setting the saucepan in cold water while the work is being done. Spread the mixture generously on any unsweetened crackers and sprinkle liberally with finely ground walnut meats. Place the crackers in the pan and set it in the oven for a few moments, taking care not to scorch them. By adding a few drops of coloring to the last half of the icing a part of them can be made pink, which will be especially pleasing to the children. Long may the Helping Hand continue the work of happiness which it has created.

"THAT 'ANAHEIMER' AGAIN."

The kindly and appreciative words are gratefully received and will bring encouragement to the many whose efforts succeed in making our Corner of genuine value to so large a number. The recipe for marguerites will also be thankfully read and used. The suggestion as to the pink coloring reminds me of some crackers I saw the other day which resembled the tinted marguerites. Grape juice had been boiled with the sugar instead of water and the directions given for making the icing for the marguerites followed, including the ground nut meats. The icing was a delicate pink and was spread on small whole wheat crackers or wafers. They were good.

Pieces for Fancy Work.

"I would like silk pieces for fancy work, or short pieces of embroidery or lace which I could utilize for trimming on children's dresses as well as in fancy work. I will gladly give umbrella tree seeds to those who wish them, with the formula for making the seeds ready to string as beads. MRS. R. C. L."

Can some one answer this request? I am sure there will be no hesitancy in asking for the umbrella tree seeds and the directions for making them into beads. I hold the address of Mrs. R. C. L.

Wants Scrapple Recipe.

"Please be so kind as to send me a recipe for making scrapple. It is a mixture of pork sausage and cornmeal. What is put into it to keep it from falling apart while frying? E. L. M."

A recipe for making scrapple was supplied last week as a possible answer to a request for directions for making "hard scrabble" from another correspondent. I have never found any trouble with scrapple falling apart while frying. The mixture of the fat of the pork and of the cornmeal is generally of sufficient consistency to prevent its crumbling or breaking.

Everything Was Useful.

"I wish to express my thanks through the dear Corner to all who rendered us assistance by sending us rugs, clothing, etc., since we lost our home by fire while my husband was in the hospital, having undergone an operation. We have five children, the eldest 15 years old, and everything sent to us was useful, as we had lost everything. MRS. J. H."

Our constituency will recollect the case of the blacksmith's family for whom appeal was made by one of their friends a while ago. The above is from the wife of the blacksmith, and another to much the same effect has come from the friend who wrote to me on their behalf. I give it here:

"I wish to express my thanks to one and all who so kindly sent things for the poor blacksmith's family. I have written to each one individually so far as I could and extended my thanks. I never dreamed that so many would answer my appeal, and everything was useful. What could not be worn as it was was made over, but a great many of the things were the right size without alteration. I forgot to say at the first that one woman sent a bundle of things and the tag with her address on it has been mislaid. As yet I have not been able to find it. So will you kindly have this mention of her kindness printed so that she will see it and know the reason why I have not acknowledged her gift directly? The blacksmith is up and around now and will be able to start work soon. The family is well provided with clothing now, but if you should know of any pieces of furniture not in use in some one's attic, will you kindly let the owners have my address? One friend sent a rug, another some pieces of carpet, which will help to keep the house warm. Let me thank you once more for the help you have all given. "MRS. G. C."

It does my heart good to know the family has been helped in their necessity. The generosity of the Cornerites only serves to confirm all the things I have said before, many times, of their ready response to the call for help. When one thinks that a household consisting of a mother and five children, with the wage earner of the establishment helpless in the hospital after an operation, are burned out of their home and left destitute, and that the humanity and generous gifts of total strangers has restored that family to something like comfort, the heart warms at the appreciation of the goodness which exists in this much maligned world. I only hope that some one may have the few pieces of furniture asked for and may feel moved to send them and to pay the transportation upon them.

Wants Silk Pieces.

"Will you please send me the address of Mrs. H., who has the silk pieces to give in exchange for poems? MRS. A. H."

I am sorry to have to report that all the silk pieces offered by Mrs. H. had been given away before this application reached me. Has not some other Cornerite silk scraps she could give to Mrs. A. H.? I have put her name on file.

On a Far Away Ranch.

"I am on a ranch, where the stage passes only three times a week, and I am learning a lesson I never understood before I came here, that often I might have done something to help another, even without the aid of money. Believe me, I'll never let another opportunity slip by; instead I'll go and look them up. No doubt the little woman of whom you wrote to me would have been glad of clothes for her children or of a blanket or a quilt, and if one could only get in touch with people who lay aside garments when these are hardly worn, how it would help. I sent each of the correspondents whose names you gave a pattern and a list to select from, and sent each the other's address with the request that as they receive patterns to copy they would exchange them. That saves me having to copy the same a second time and helps them to help each other. You see I am busy. I have already worked three pieces for Christmas, 1915. Perhaps you cannot believe that a woman, alone, twenty-six miles from town and from church, could be really happy on Christmas day, but all my friends and some I hardly fancied would give me a thought helped to make my day bright and cheerful, and not one of them will dream that I am sewing love and gratitude into linen even now to express my appreciation for my happy day. Only today I received a package of papers and now I can enjoy my Corner. I do wish a cow was something I could inclose in a letter or package to some one who needs it. Thank you again for helping me to be of help to another. "M. E. H."

A cheery, heartsome letter like this does me good and should encourage those who feel they have little chance to aid others. Many persons would fancy that being alone on a ranch, twenty-six miles from a town and from church, would be excuse enough for chronic blues, but not so the writer of this letter. She finds her life rich and full and is on the alert for opportunities to be of service to those she esteems less fortunate than herself. I echo her whimsical wish that she could put a cow into a letter or a package and ship it that way. There are many places where it would be a godsend. I am glad we have such a helper on our roll of Cornerites and I send her my personal thanks.

Will Write a Cheering Letter.

"Please send me the address of Frances. I do not wish anything from her. I simply desire to write her a nice, personal, loving letter, as she is a shut-in. I hope she lives near me, so that I could go and see her. I enjoy the Corner so much. "A. T."

The address asked for was sent, and I hope the shut-in and the correspondent live near enough together to make a meeting possible.

She Wants Magazines.

"I saw the offer of Mrs. H. H. and of E. M. to give away magazines, and I trust I am not too late to get some of them, on which I would gladly pay postage. I am trying to make a living and keep my baby by baking, sewing, even washing, but sometimes it seems a hard struggle. I have about 500 transfer patterns, saved for years from newspapers, and I should be glad to give them to those who would care to pay postage on them. It seems small to make this stipulation, but even 2 cents means a good deal to me. A long time ago, through the Corner, I offered to make a silk patchwork quilt for material enough to make one for myself. I received enough pieces and made four quilts. Now there is a little old lady who lives with me and can do nothing except care for baby while I work. She loves to sew, and if another piece bag might be emptied for her, I am sure it would be a blessing and would help her to pass many lonely hours. I have a large box of receipts clipped from the papers and magazines which would make the foundation for a splendid scrapbook for a young housekeeper, and over 150 post cards which I have received from all over the country that some shut-in might be glad to have. I have discovered that by making a tuck about the elbow in my kitchen dresses and placing part of a snap fastener under it, then making extra sleeves to match, I can have a neat looking work dress and no unsightly slip-on sleeves. Also instead of using all rubber for my dustcaps, I [illegible] inch strip into a piece of tape [illegible] enough to fit the head comfortably [illegible] one end I sew a small safety pin [illegible] the cap is laundered it is easy to [illegible] the tape and the safety pin [illegible] bodkin to put it in again. [illegible] two of such tapes will serve [illegible] caps. I saw a pretty pattern of [illegible] edging used for a hand embroidered dress. The machine embroidery [illegible] as padding for the hand work [illegible] sult was really beautiful. I [illegible] glad to give to any Cornerite [illegible] for making the paper portieres. [illegible] a pair a while ago and after a [illegible] of experimenting I have [illegible] making them and will be glad [illegible] the knowledge. My best [illegible] Corner, all its members, [illegible]

This is a long letter, but I was unwilling to omit any part of it. [illegible] who, while fighting her own [illegible] struggling to take care of [illegible] whose father died before [illegible] herself is yet unable to offer [illegible] ers, certainly deserves any [illegible] cheer which can be given her [illegible] us. FOR THE INDUSTRIOUS NEEDLEWOMAN

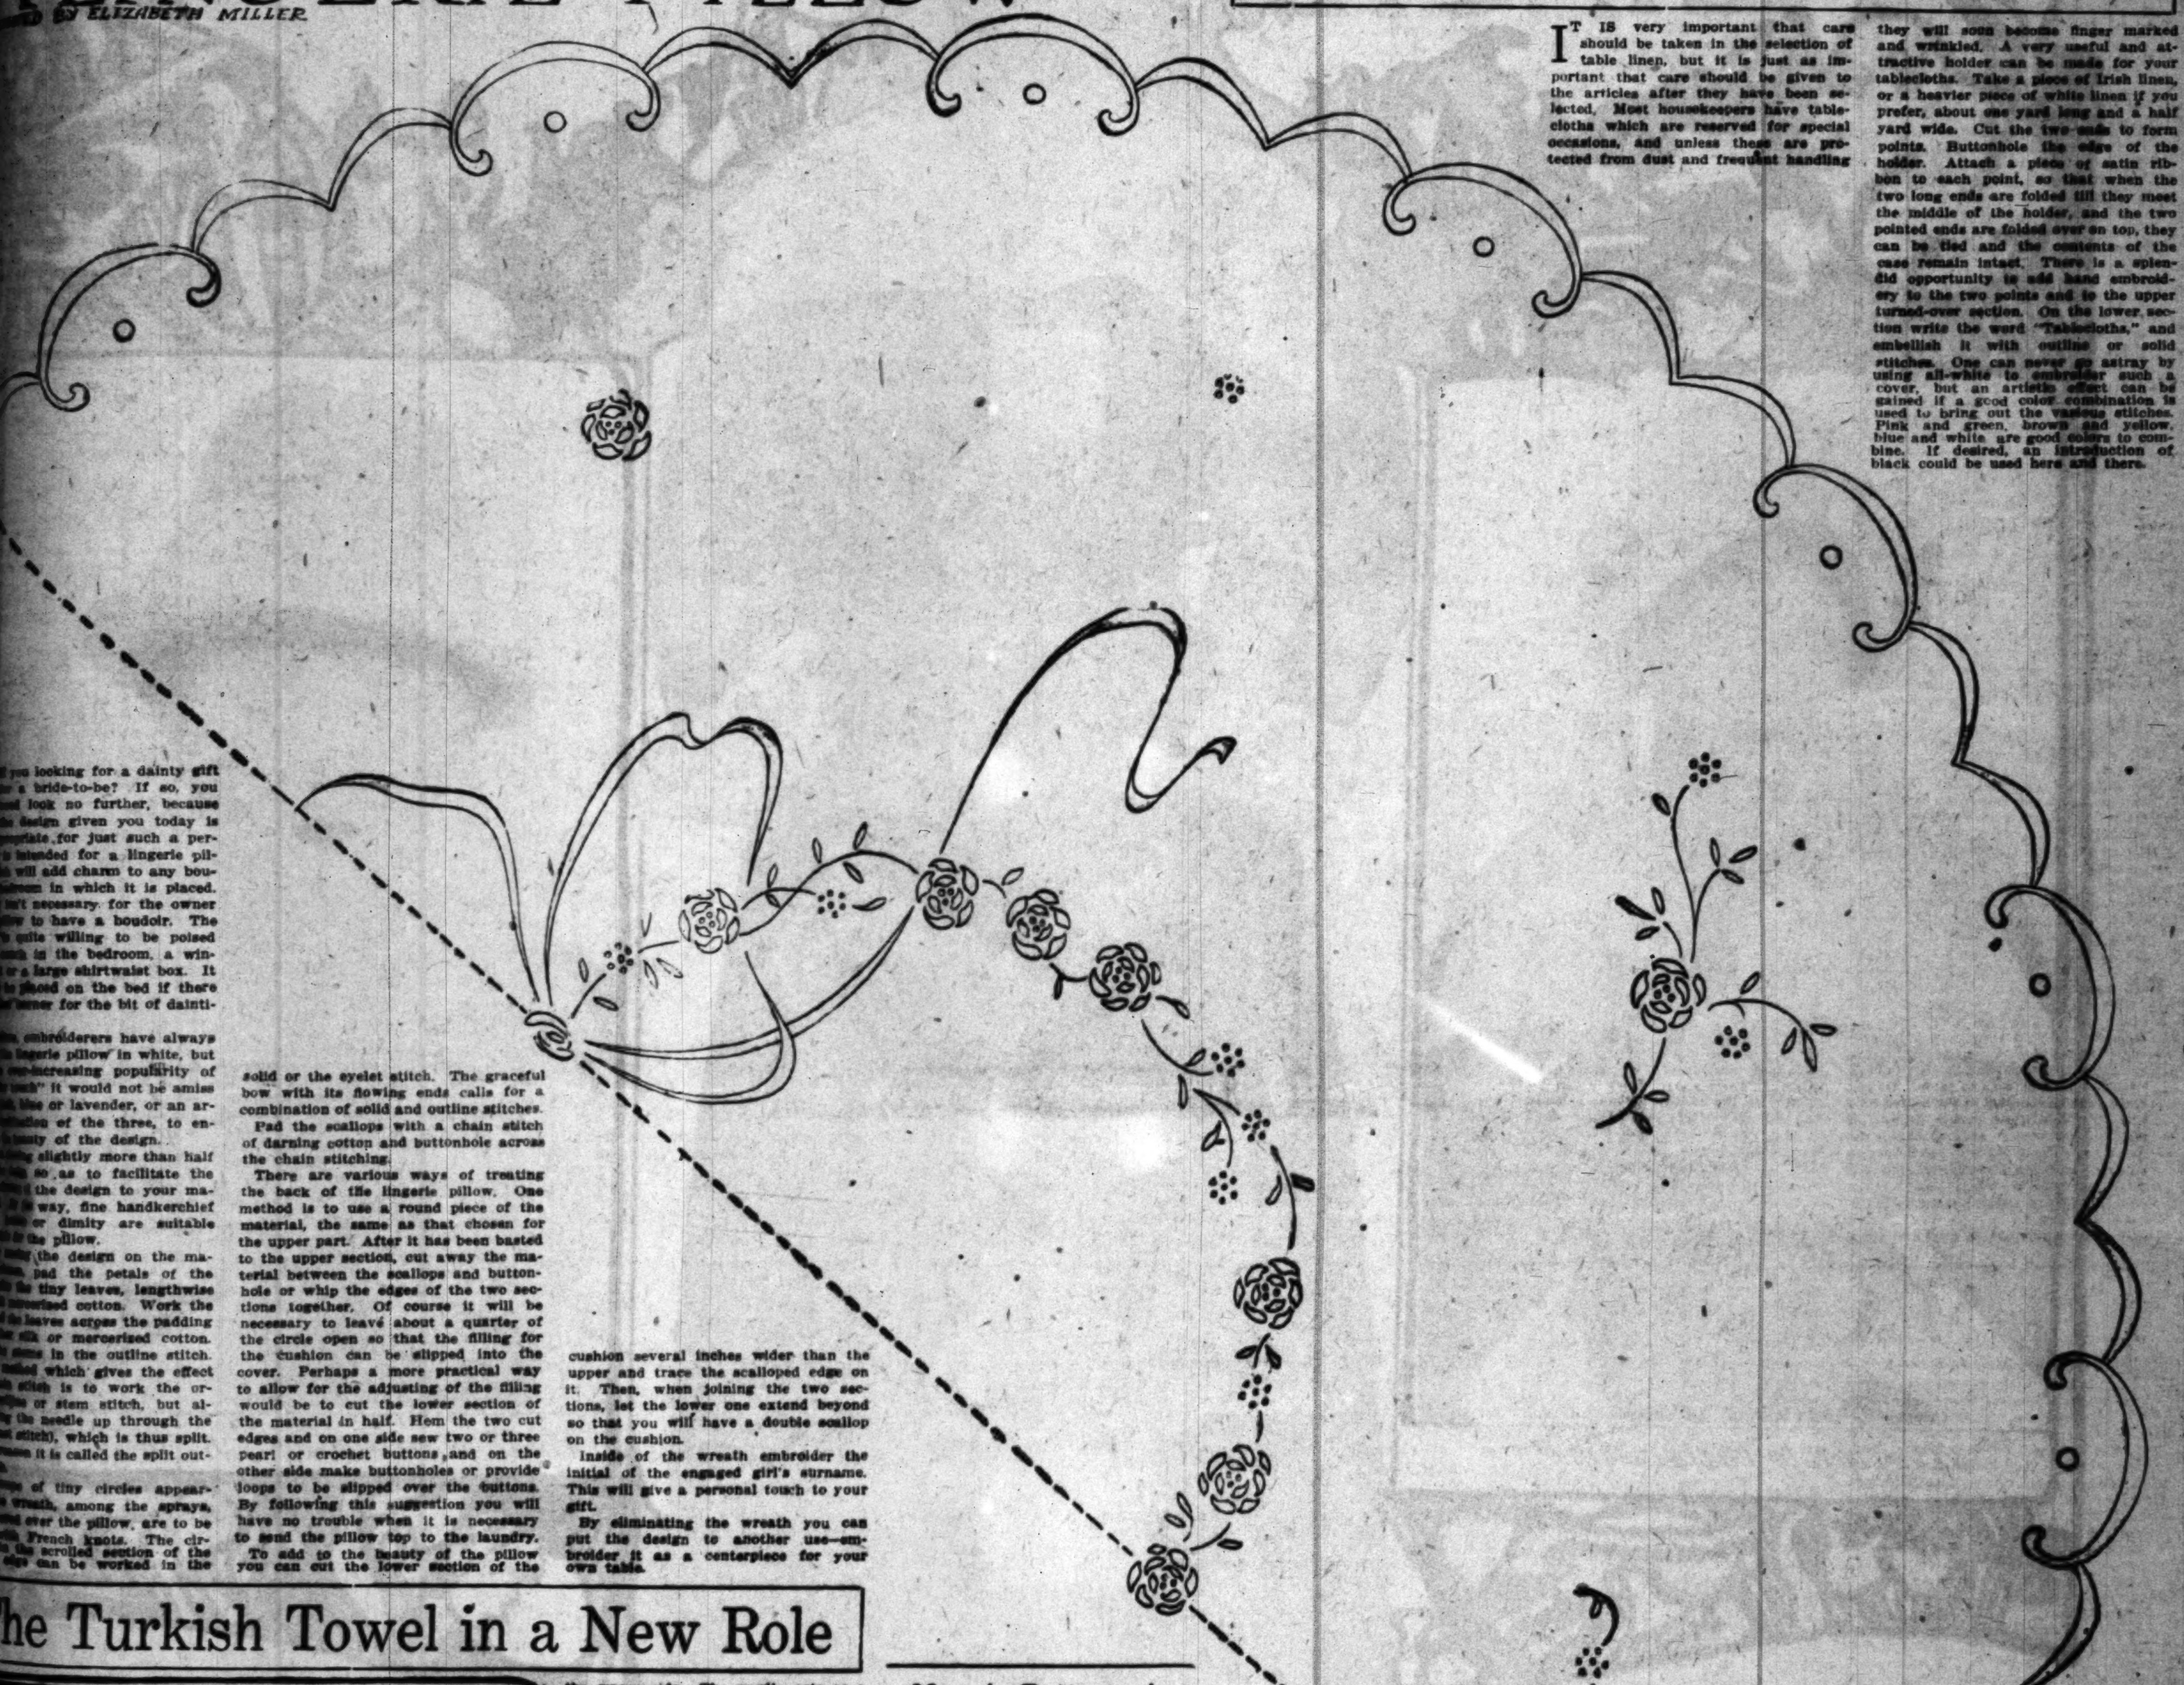
BY ADELAIDE BYRD

A LINGERIE PILLOW

[Design]ED BY ELIZABETH MILLER



One Half of Design

[A]re you looking for a dainty gift for a bride-to-be? If so, you need look no further, because the design given you today is [ap]propriate for just such a per[son]. It is intended for a lingerie pil[low which] will add charm to any bou[doir or] bedroom in which it is placed. [It really] isn't necessary for the owner [of the] pillow to have a boudoir. The [pillow]'s quite willing to be poised [on a] couch in the bedroom, a win[dow seat] or a large shirtwaist box. It [might be] placed on the bed if there [is no other] corner for the bit of dainti[ness].

[illegible] embroiderers have always [made the] lingerie pillow in white, but [with the] ever-increasing popularity of ["the color touch"] it would not be amiss [to use pink], blue or lavender, or an ar[tistic com]bination of the three, to en[hance the] beauty of the design.

[illegible] slightly more than half [illegible] so as to facilitate the [transferring of] the design to your ma[terial. In this] way, fine handkerchief [linen, lawn] or dimity are suitable [materials for] the pillow.

[After tracing] the design on the ma[terial], pad the petals of the [flowers and] the tiny leaves, lengthwise [with] mercerized cotton. Work the [petals and] the leaves across the padding [with floss] silk or mercerized cotton. [Work] the stems in the outline stitch. [Another] method which gives the effect [of a] chain stitch is to work the or[dinary outline] or stem stitch, but al[ways bring] the needle up through the [last stitch]), which is thus split. [For this] reason it is called the split out[line].

[The] groups of tiny circles appear[ing in] the wreath, among the sprays, [and scattered] over the pillow, are to be [worked] with French knots. The cir[cles] within the scrolled section of the [scalloped] edge can be worked in the solid or the eyelet stitch. The graceful bow with its flowing ends calls for a combination of solid and outline stitches.

Pad the scallops with a chain stitch of darning cotton and buttonhole across the chain stitching.

There are various ways of treating the back of the lingerie pillow. One method is to use a round piece of the material, the same as that chosen for the upper part. After it has been basted to the upper section, cut away the material between the scallops and buttonhole or whip the edges of the two sections together. Of course it will be necessary to leave about a quarter of the circle open so that the filling for the cushion can be slipped into the cover. Perhaps a more practical way to allow for the adjusting of the filling would be to cut the lower section of the material in half. Hem the two cut edges and on one side sew two or three pearl or crochet buttons, and on the other side make buttonholes or provide loops to be slipped over the buttons. By following this suggestion you will have no trouble when it is necessary to send the pillow top to the laundry.

To add to the beauty of the pillow you can cut the lower section of the cushion several inches wider than the upper and trace the scalloped edge on it. Then, when joining the two sections, let the lower one extend beyond so that you will have a double scallop on the cushion.

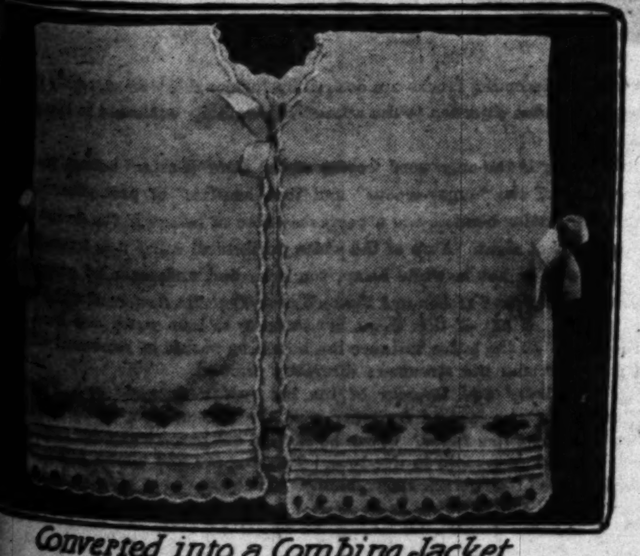
Inside of the wreath embroider the initial of the engaged girl's surname. This will give a personal touch to your gift.

By eliminating the wreath you can put the design to another use—embroider it as a centerpiece for your own table.

Tablecloth Holder for Special Occasions

IT IS very important that care should be taken in the selection of table linen, but it is just as important that care should be given to the articles after they have been selected. Most housekeepers have tablecloths which are reserved for special occasions, and unless these are protected from dust and frequent handling they will soon become finger marked and wrinkled. A very useful and attractive holder can be made for your tablecloths. Take a piece of Irish linen, or a heavier piece of white linen if you prefer, about one yard long and a half yard wide. Cut the two ends to form points. Buttonhole the edge of the holder. Attach a piece of satin ribbon to each point, so that when the two long ends are folded till they meet the middle of the holder, and the two pointed ends are folded over on top, they can be tied and the contents of the case remain intact. There is a splendid opportunity to add hand embroidery to the two points and to the upper turned-over section. On the lower section write the word "Tablecloths," and embellish it with outline or solid stitches. One can never go astray by using all-white to embroider such a cover, but an artistic effect can be gained if a good color combination is used to bring out the various stitches. Pink and green, brown and yellow, blue and white are good colors to combine. If desired, an introduction of black could be used here and there.

The Turkish Towel in a New Role



Converted into a Combing Jacket

A LARGE bordered Turkish towel, a snip of the scissors, a few stitches, a ribbon or two and, presto! you have fashioned a most useful garment for the boudoir with [practicall]y no effort and but little material. The combing jacket has been [popu]lar for some time, but not until [ver]y recently has it occurred to [thou]ghtful womanhood what an advantage the rough weave of the Turkish [tow]eling gives to the jacket made of that material. Falling hair will cling [tenaciousl]y to the rough toweling, and [as] this is the ultimate purpose of the [comb]ing jacket, to catch milady's falling tresses and protect the gown which [she] cannot take time to remove, the [ver]y accommodating Turkish towel will [not] be long unappreciated.

There are many ways of beautifying [thes]e handy garments, as the array of [beautifu]l bordered Turkish towels in[crease]s daily, and whether the boudoir [is] pink in tone, blue, yellow, gray, [lave]nder or green, there is a towel to [be] had that can be turned into a thing of beauty echoing the boudoir color note. Feather-stitching is a very dainty way of accenting the border, and a crochet edge or the simple buttonhole are pretty finishings for the edge. Here is a suggestion for buttonholing the neck and front of the towel, where the raw edges are apt to stretch: Draw on a piece of heavy lawn or muslin, the pattern for a simple scalloping, and baste this on the right side of the towel along the front and neck, shaping the scallops when drawing them so that the design will follow the curve of the neck and the muslin lie perfectly flat. Then proceed to buttonhole as usual on top of the muslin, and when finished the superfluous cloth may be cut away and you will have a straight, firm edge. The same idea may be used when embroidering an initial or design upon the rough material of the towel. Often when trying to draw the needle through the toweling the loose threads will catch at the eye of the needle and unravel most untidily, or pull through to the wrong side. The muslin acts as a shield against such a catastrophe, and will give a smooth unyielding surface for an initial of French knots.

French knots and lazy-daisy stitches make attractive nosegays to place along the border of the Turkish towel jacket. Make the center of the flowers a deep pink, then a border of lighter French knots, and a third border of blue knots. The leaves are in two shades of green lazy-daisy stitches. If the towel selected has a blue border, use pink ribbons to tie at the neck, and to hold the jacket in place under the arm.

One lady, who is as clever as she is thrifty, utilized the small round piece of toweling that was cut to give room for the neck to make a dainty pair of bath slippers to accompany the combing jacket gift. The slippers were sewed on to flat soles, like mules, and buttonholed and adorned with the same floral design as the jacket.

When Bibs Are Not Provided

VERY frequently mothers are confronted with the problem of placing a napkin over a child's dress when the child is partaking of a meal away from home. All children resent having a napkin tied about their little necks in careless fashion. There is one way of holding the bib in position. This is by means of two little clasps which are attached to the ends of a strip of braid or ribbon. It is quite likely, however, that mother would forget to carry this device with her. In such a case she must resort to the material on hand, which, after all, is a very fine test for every one. The woman who can do well with the things on hand without having to apply outside assistance is truly clever. Such a distinction is to be given to the mother who thought of the following idea when pins and clasps were not available. She tied two knots in one corner of the napkin and tucked the knotted end into the child's dress, at the neck. The knots weighted the end of the napkin so that it was bound to stay in place. You mothers or guardians of children, try this stunt the next time you are at a loss to know what to do to keep the napkin before your little one's dress.

Navajo Patterns in Crochet

THERE is a roughness and masculinity about the Navajo blanket that suggests hunting lodges and cabins in western wilds, and it must be the suggestive power of these blankets that makes them so popular with the masculine element of the household, for the Indian blanket surely finds no corresponding note in the typical American home. For the man who wishes to surround himself with the barbaric designs and colorings of the Indian, there is a crocheted afghan that at a short distance might easily be mistaken for the real Navajo blanket which it aims to imitate. These slumber robes can be worked in red and white, or if nimble fingers are more than usually patient, the patterns may be crocheted in a variety of crude colors that, garish as they may appear to feminine eyes, are a source of delight to the color-loving male. Go to the Navajo blanket for your designs when you are planning a new afghan or pillow for the "den."

For the Guest Room

WHILE the careful hostess will not overload her guest room with a horde of useless trifles, left-over Christmas gifts often, that will not fit into any other place in the house, she will appreciate this latest novelty in a dainty guest-room accessory, and may hang it, with a free conscience, on the dressing table for her next feminine visitor. It is a light-tinted chiffon bag, a shapeless affair gathered on to a ribbon-covered embroidery hoop. In it are piled, perhaps, a dozen individual powder puffs of softest cotton. Each bit of fluffiness is tied with a piece of narrow ribbon of the color chosen for the bag, and a jaunty bow offers a comfortable way of holding the diminutive puff when in operation. The real practical value of such a dainty bag lies, of course, in the fact that a guest returning from various pleasure jaunts, more or less soiled as to face and fatigued as to body, will relish a clean bit of cotton for applying the refreshing bit of alcohol, powder or rouge.

Summer Bureau Scarfs

EVEN bureau scarfs should be of a more simple character during the hot months. All fussy things, including scarfs, should be carefully packed away with the blankets and (if you have such antiques) feather beds. Strips or lengths of voile make excellent scarfs. These may be plainly hemmed or hemstitched about the edges. It is a pretty idea to introduce into the bureau scarf the dominant color of the bedroom. Supposing this color to be a cool blue, then the color in the scarf may be blue, and perhaps mixed with a little green foliage. Make a colored border about the scarf, either by stenciling or stitching in blue thread. Various designs and stitches can be used for this purpose. If there is not time to embroider the scarf in color it is possible to obtain the voile already stamped with colored flowers that need no retouching, so that the effect is very like stenciling. The curtains might be made to match.

To Please the Kiddie

THE next time you embroider a dress for a child let part of the design appear on a separate little pocket of the dress material. The pocket can be heart-shaped, diamond-shaped or perfectly square. Place two loops or tabs of the material at the top of the pocket, and through these run a red, blue or pink cord, selecting a color to match the color used for embroidering the dress. Tie the cord around the waist so that the simulated pocketbook can not possibly be lost. Can't you imagine how delighted the youngster will be to have a place for her tiny "hankie" and the few pennies fond Grandma or Grandpa has given her?

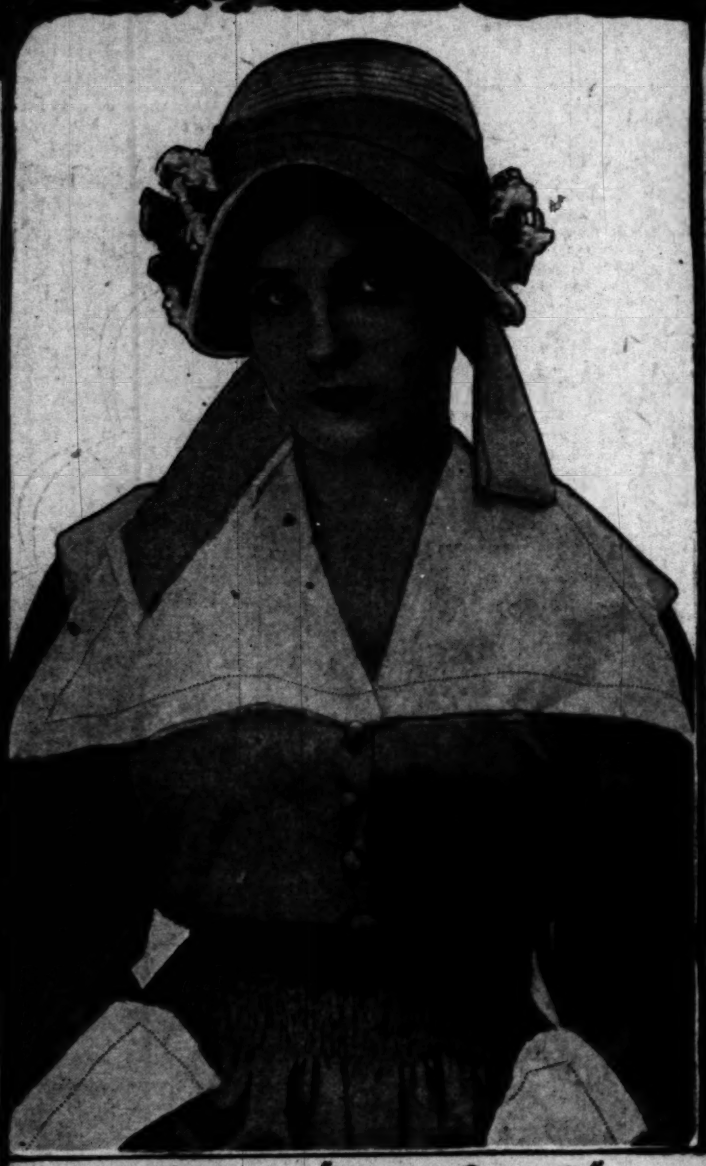
Bag of Unusual Shape

THE bag having a firm foundation at the bottom has long been present, but the bag having firmness at either end is a new one. The purpose of the new bag is to hold large pieces of knitting, and if the bag ever happened to contain a large article near completion, it might be mistaken for one of the long rolled cushions. To make the bag, get two circular pieces of fairly thick cardboard measuring about six inches in diameter. Cover these with the material you intend using for the bag. Cretonne or flowered silk is a desirable material. For the bag proper use a piece of material one yard long and a half yard wide. Hem the long ends. Gather the short ends of the rectangular piece to the circumference of the two covered circles of cardboard, allowing three inches to remain unattached so that it overlaps. To this sew at regular intervals the pointed sections of snap-fasteners, so that they can be slipped into the socket sections of the fasteners sewed at corresponding positions on the bag. Thus the bag can be closed securely and the contents prevented from slipping out. It may prove practical to attach a piece of material to the inner side of each circular end. Run an elastic along the top of the piece so that a pocket will be formed. Into the pockets the various articles used for knitting can be slipped. To the outside of the disks, near the flap of the bag, sew pieces of satin ribbon. Let a many-looped bow join the two pieces of ribbon, so that the bag can be thrown over the knob of a door, the back of a chair or any other convenient place. When it is time to take up the knitting, the ribbon can be untied, the bag unfastened and the work continued without taking the article in the process of making out of the bag.

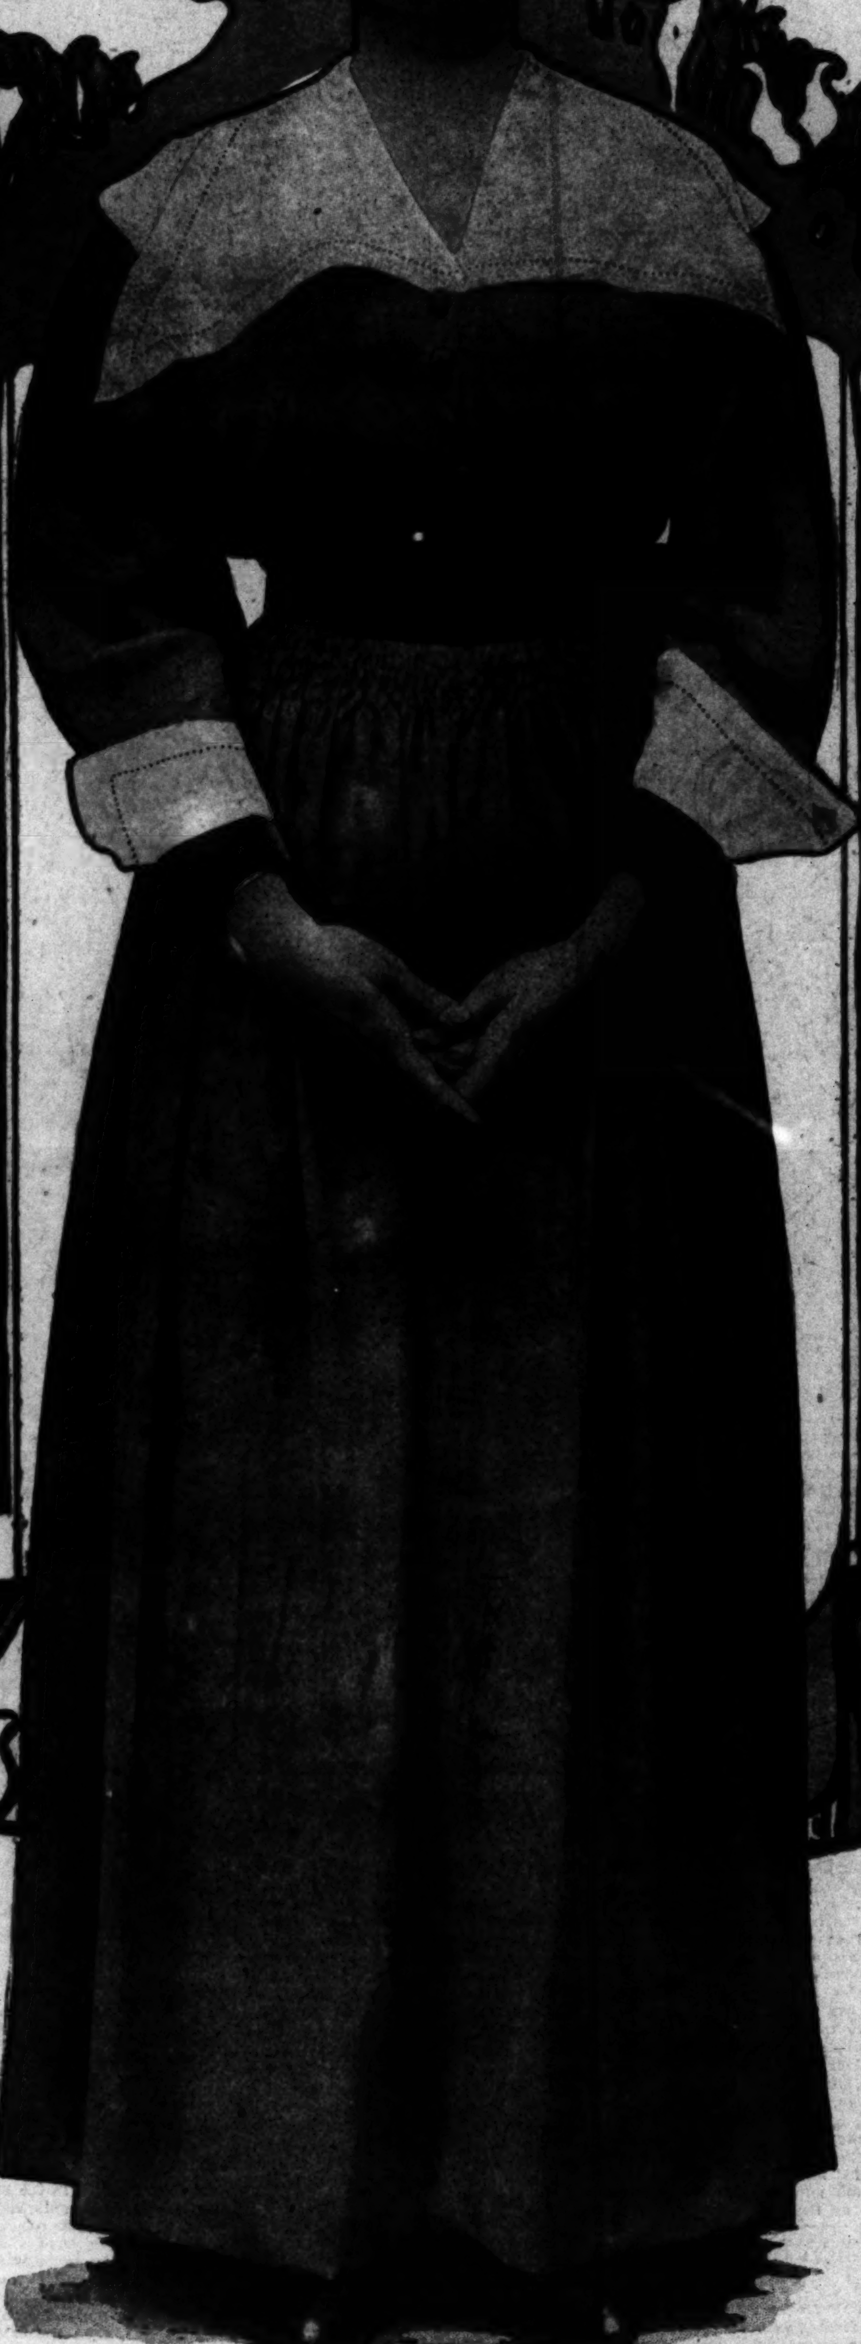
How to Transfer

PLACE a sheet of impression carbon paper between your fabric and the newspaper design, the latter on top. With a sharp pencil or a glass-pointed pen go over the outline. The design will be transferred to the material and will last until worked.

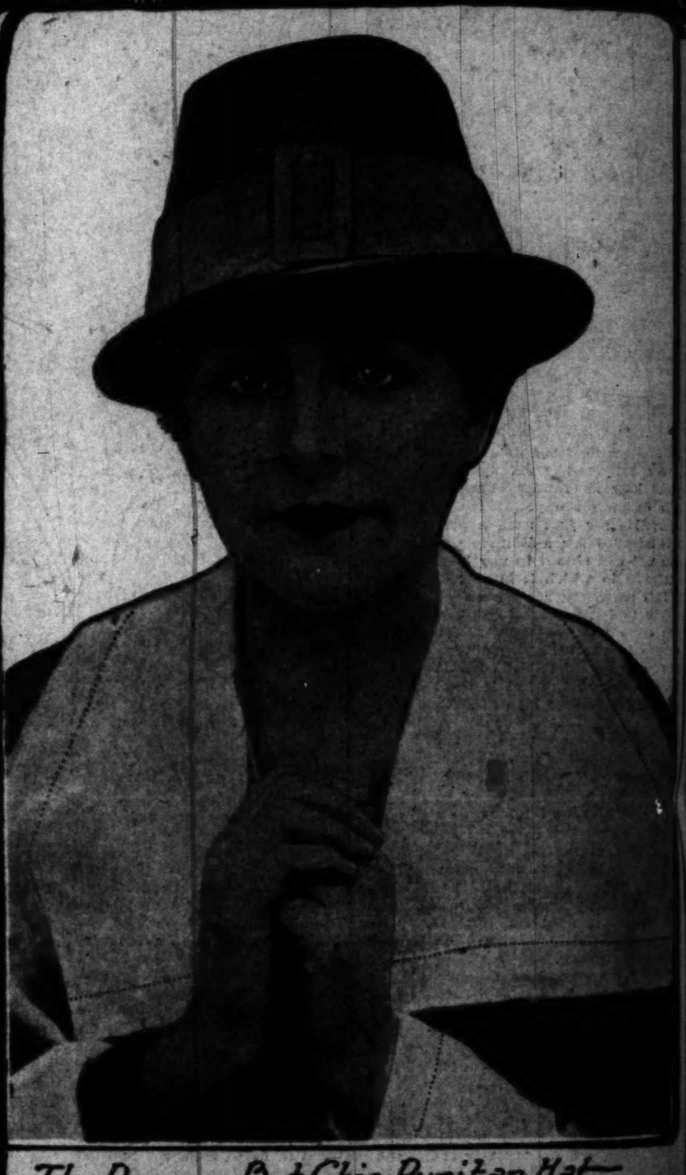
IS SIMPLICITY to BE FASHION'S KEYNOTE?



A Veritable "Easter Bonnet"



Beauty and Grace in This Plain Frock



The Demure But Chic Puritan Hat

IS THE modern whirl of fashion to be stilled? Are we again to have church bans on frivolous articles of dress? Will the President issue sumptuary laws, and will tailors, milliners and modistes again be cast into prison for the forbidden cut of a collar or a condemned bit of trimming—who knows? For simplicity is threatening (some would call it promising) to compel the submission of that riotous dame—Fashion. It's high time, too, that we're learning dress economy. Not all of the bewailed "high cost of living" is due to the price of food. When peasants ape princes fat purses shrink. "Ah," some sensibles have sighed, "if we could all dress like Quakers, Dunkards or Mennonites, what racked brains would be at peace and how plump our money bags would be!" Days were when clothing was considered good until it wore out and grandmothers' best silk was handed down for three or four generations, treasured and carefully made over and over—good old days!

Why, from the standpoint of good taste, should not simplicity be considered the correct and beautiful thing in garments as it is in architecture? Those who know turn up very superior noses at an ultra-ornate building or tawdry interior decoration, yet that same nose will tolerate ungraceful lines and over-elaboration in dress with never a sniff—simply to be "in fashion."

Real beauty of line is found in the simple soft silk frock of battleship gray, its only ornamentation the skirt-yoke of shirring and the lovely puritanical collars and cuffs of white organdie. Darker gray velvet straps the waist and the lower cuffs. Even the buttons carry out the gray tone of the frock, thus making a Puritan and Quaker combination that is altogether charming. If becoming frocks are desired by fashionable women, surely there can be no feminine objection to the attractive simplicity evidenced in this gray garment.

Bewitching is the only word worthy of the little "Easter" bonnet, plainly a descendant of the "sugar-scoops" and "coal-scuttles" of past generations. Ye who like Easter bonnets are a perverse order of beings if you do not fall in love with it at sight. Atop of the white puritanical collar it is irresistible. The crown of the hat is white hemp, the brim and underbrim of gray silk, and the trimming gray ribbon and Easterlike nondescript flowers of white with green foliage. A hat of this shape is becoming to both youth and faces no longer young. In the latter instance the trimming should be somewhat differently arranged and the streamers discreetly omitted.

The simplicity and severity of the hat which suggests both Pilgrim and Puritan is unsurpassed for wear with the tailored suit, which is again meeting with feminine favor. It can be carried out in various color combinations or allowed to remain in one tone. This demure and almost universally becoming hat is of soft black straw, banded with gray ribbon and finished with an oblong pearl buckle.

How welcome fashionable simplicity would be after the maelstrom of fashions in which we are caught these modern days! There is really a strong indication at the present time that simplicity will be the keynote of fashion when the pendulum swings in the near future. A few creations, including the three shown, already pleasingly evidence the trend.

Hands Off!

By E. W. Howe

IN our attitude toward public affairs, we are all hypocrites—amiable hypocrites, since our public demands are usually for better and greater things than we expect. But the consequences of amiable hypocrisy may be serious. The great war in Europe resulted from an exaggerated notion of national honor; from the failure of the Germans and Allies to exercise the moderation that the American people are called upon to exercise now in considering the question of intervention.

Patriotism is a fine thing about which most men become excited, so the difficult thing about war is not to prove that it is the greatest fallacy, but to keep out of it. When the Germans and Frenchmen were singing war songs, and cheering bulletins displayed in front of newspaper offices, prior to the war, the sober second thought would have done as much for them as it may do for us now.

However brave and capable a fighter a man may be, he hopes his bluff will win without the necessity of making it good. Probably future history will agree in laying the blame for the present trouble in Europe to the excited and exaggerated patriotism of Austria-Hungary when dealing with a weaker antagonist. And perhaps all history cannot show a case where calling a bluff resulted in equally terrible consequences: no nation knows just how much of a hornet's nest it is stirring up when a bluff is called.

The security this country enjoys without a great army and navy is the most profound argument for peace one nation ever offered another, and it is an argument that should not be refuted lightly. For if a citizen may live his life without killing a man, a nation may exist without these disastrous experiments in Statesmanship. It has been doubted that the people ever actually ruled anywhere, at any time, so great a violation of popular rights are armed camps and devastated homes and towns. Is it possible that the people, including the women and children, ever actually favored war? Was there ever a war approved by the majority?

IF the heads of this Government should fail to realize their responsibility, and seek to embroil us with our unfortunate and battered brethren across the sea, the people of the country should protest in a way that will not only prove effective at home, but encourage popular rule everywhere. When people rule in fact as well as in the Constitution, war will be a thing of the past as surely as the horrible animals whose bodies are found in the drift of prehistoric ages.

Some people believe every great advance in human liberty is heralded by a reign of terror; but no reign of terror can be as effective for human betterment as a reign of common sense. Fairness and politeness are more powerful than the brutal argument of blood.

The Germans and Allies know the importance of peace did not know it six months ago. And the world may rest they will reach a settlement of their difficulties as soon as is possible. The fighting abroad now is for peace, and both fighting as hard as possible in the hope that the suggestion the other side in a form that can be accepted.

What Europe needs from the United States is not preach vention, but food; and in the present emergency our young more useful as farmers than as soldiers. If the people think repugnantly about going to war that war is avoided, they more to benefit the world than kings and kaisers have ever If such a thing was never done before, let us for once realize engaging in it, and that the sum of a thousand other follies is as the single folly of war.

THE people as well as statesmen and editors have a right to revel in big boasts, and if the people clamor for interve dent Wilson should know that they are not entirely in earnest; expect him to hold them. They may say in public that Wood timid, but they will commend him in private for being safe and tive, and recall that one objection to Theodore has always been not only won't hold us want to fight, but wants in the fight himself.

The war debt of fore the present war $800 per family; each family paid $70 a year In a single year the government paid 60 per its ordinary revenues for poses. And think of the now being added, and greatly reduced number men who must pay it

Disgraceful as such France, consider that we pay do the French—or 67 per haven't had as much war but everything costs more than abroad. We may be shed our blood in the zation, but can we afford politicians another ruinously lavish in the expenses?

IN 1911 the French almost practical way the insanity great masses of armed men. of that year, when there was clash between France and to who should own and great remonstrance meeting in both countries, and men carried huge banners streets on which was

"All Morocco is not worth of one German or Frenchman"

And there was no war.

That was a practical Democracy by which we If the war vulture should pear in our skies, let us that the greatest gallantry and children is to refuse uniform of soldiers in a cause; and meanwhile, the Maine, to remember of keeping Hands Off.

KELLEY OF BRIMSTONE BASIN
LOVE AND WAR ON THE GREAT DIVIDE
BY HAMLIN GARLAND

Illustrations by Remington Schuyler

ALONG about '96, Sulphur Springs had become several kinds of a bad town. From being a small liquoring-up place for cattlemen, it had taken on successively the character of a land office, a lumber camp and a coal mine.

As a cow town it had been hardly more than a hamlet. As a mining center it rose to the dignity of possessing (as Judge Pul- [illegible] accustomed to boast) nearly two thousand souls, not counting Mexicans Navajos. It lay in the hot hollows between penon spotted hills, but within around the grassy slopes of the secondary mountains over whose tops the [illegible] peaks of the Continental Divide loomed in stern majesty. The herders still carried Winchesters on their saddles and revolvers strung to their hips, and each of them strove to keep up cowboy traditions by unloading his gun on the slightest provocation. The gamblers also sustained the conventions of their profession by killing one another now and again, and the average citizen regarded these activities with a certain approval, for they all denoted a "live town." "The boys need diversion," said the mayor, "and so long as they confine their celebrations to such hours as will not disturb the children and women — at least the domestic kind of women — I won't complain."

Naturally, it is gratifying to record that very few desirable citizens were shot. Sulphur continued to thrive, to glow in the annals of mountain chivalry, until by [illegible] old Tom Hornaby of Wire Grass was elected Senator. That victory [illegible] the beginning of the decline of Sulphur.

HORNABY was Pulfoot's candidate, and the Judge took a paternal pride in him. He even went up to the capital to see him sworn in, and was there, unfortunately, when the humorous member from Lode alluded to Hornaby as "my old colleague from 'Brimstone Center' where even the Judges tote guns and children chew dynamite"— and what was still more disturbing he was again at the capital when the news came of the shooting and robbing of a couple of coal miners, the details of which filled the city papers with sarcastic allusions to "Tom Hornaby's live town on The Stinking Water."

Hornaby, being a heavy owner of land in and about Sulphur, was properly furious, and Judge Pulfoot — deeply grieved — was, in the instant, converted. A great light fell about him. He saw his home town as it was — or at least, he got a glimpse of it as it appeared to the timid souls of civilized men. He cowered before Hornaby. "Tom, you're right," he sadly agreed. "The old town needs cleaning up. It sure is disgraceful."

Hornaby buttered no parsnips. "You go right back," said he, "and kick out that bonehead marshal of yours and put a full-sized man into his place that will cut that gunplay out and distribute a few of [illegible] over the landscape. What chance have I got in this [illegible] as the 'Senator from Brimstone Center?' I'll never get rid of that fool tag whilst I'm up here."

"You certainly have a right to be sore," the Judge admitted. "But it's a man's job, cleaning up our little burg. It's going to be [illegible]. I don't know who to put into it."

"I do."

"Who?"

"My foreman, Ed Kelley."

"I don't know him."

"Well, I do. He's only been with me a few months, but I've tried him and he's all right. He's been all over the West, knows the greasers [illegible] and can take care of himself anywhere. The man don't live that can scare him. You notice his eyes! He's got a glare like the muzzle of a silver-plated double-barrel shotgun. He don't know what fear is. I've seen him in action, and I know."

The Judge was impressed. "Will the Board accept him?"

"They've got to accept him or go plumb to the devil down there. Your articles and speeches have put us in wrong with the whole State. This Wild West business has got to be cut out. It scares away capital. Now you get busy!"

The Judge went back resolved upon a change of administration. The constituent who held the office of marshal was brave enough, but he had grown elderly and inert. He was, in truth, a joke. The gamblers laughed at him and the cowboys "played horse" with him. The spirit of deviltry was stronger than it had ever been in the history of the county. "Something religious has got to be done," the Judge argued to the city fathers and having presented Hornaby's message, demanded the installation of Kelley.

The Board listened attentively but were unconvinced. "Who is this Kelley? He's nothing but a tramp, a mounted hobo. Who knows him?"

"Hornaby knows him and wants him, and his order goes. Let's have him in and talk with him, anyhow."

Kelley was called in. He showed up a tall, composed young fellow of thirty, with weather-worn face and steady grey eyes in which the pupils were unusually small and very dark blue. His expression was calm and his voice pleasant. He listened in amused silence while the Judge told him what the program was. Then he said, "That's a whale of a job you've laid out for me; but Hornaby's boss. All is, if I start in on this, you fellows have got to see me through. It's a right stiff program, and I need some insurance. 'Pears to me like there should be a little pot for tall Ed at the end of this game — say, three dollars a day and a couple of hundred bones when everything is quiet."

To this the Judge agreed. "You go in and clean up. Run these gunmen down the valley. Cut out this amatoor Wild West business — it's hurting us. Property is depreciating right along. We certainly can't stand any more of this brimstone business. Go to it! We'll see that you're properly reimbursed."

"All right, Judge. But you understand if I go into this peacemaking war I draw no political lines. I am chief for the time being, and treat everybody alike — greasers, 'paches, your friends, my friends, everybody."

"That's all right. It's your deal," said the Judge and the aldermen.

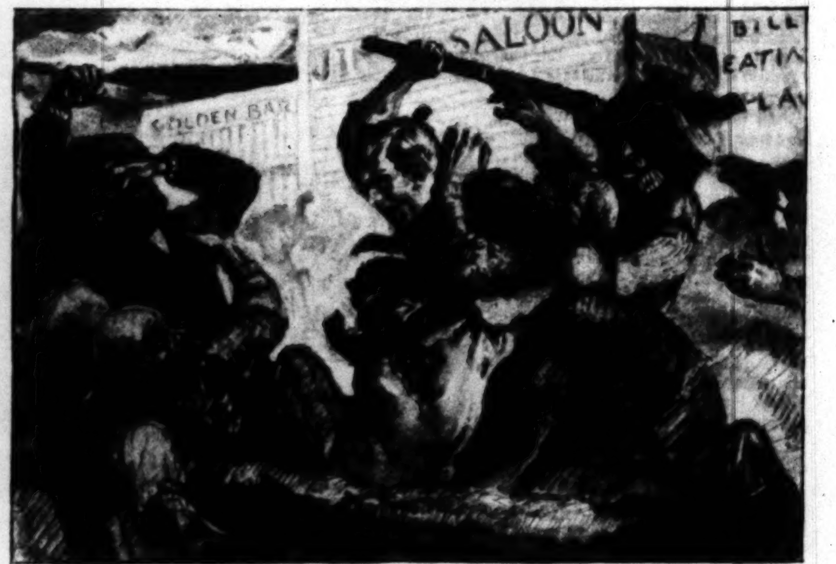
CHAPTER II

TALL Ed had drifted into Sulphur from the Southwest some six months before, and although fairly well known among the ranchers on the Wire Grass, was not a familiar figure in town. The news of his appointment was received with laughter by the loafers and with wonder by the quiet citizens, who coldly said, "He appears like a full-sized man — but size don't count. There's Clayt Mink, for instance — the worst little moth-eaten scrap in the State, and yet he'll kill at the drop of a hat. Sooner or later he's going to try out this new marshal same as he did the others."

This seemed likely, for Mink owned and operated the biggest gambling house in Sulphur, and was considered to be (as he was) a dangerous man. He already hated Kelley, who had once protected a drunken cattleman from being almost openly robbed in his saloon. Furthermore, he was a relentless political foe to Hornaby.

He was indeed a mere scrap of a man with nothing about him full-sized except his mustache. And yet despite his unheroic physique he was quick and remorseless in action. In Italy he would have carried a dagger. In England he would have been a light-weight rough-and-tumble fighter. In the violent West he was a gunman, menacing every citizen who crossed his inclination, and he took Kelley's appointment as a direct affront on the part of Hornaby and Pulfoot. "He'd better keep out of my way," he remarked to his friends with a malignant sneer.

Kelley was not deceived in his adversary. "He's a coward at heart, like all these hair-hung triggers," he said to Pulfoot. "I'm not hunting any trouble with him, but ——" It was not necessary to finish his sentence, his voice and smile indicated his meaning.



One man seized the marshal from behind. Another hung upon his neck

The town was comparatively quiet for the first month or two after Kelley took office. It seemed that the rough element was reflectively taking his measure, and Hornaby's herders as they rode in and out of town told stories of tall Ed's rough and ready experiences, which helped to establish official confidence in him. "I reckon we've done the right thing this time," wrote Pulfoot to Hornaby. "The boys all seem to realize we've got a man in office."

This calm, this unnatural calm, was broken one night by Mink himself, who shot and all but killed the livery-stable keeper in a dispute over roulette. Knowing that his deed would bring the new marshal down upon him at once, the gambler immediately declared determined war. "The man who comes after me will need a wooden overcoat," he promulgated. "I won't stand being hounded. That hostler was pulling his gun on me. I got him first, that's all. It was a fair fight, and everybody knows it."

The liveryman was in fact armed at the time, and the disposition of many citizens was to "let him learn his lesson." But Judge Pulfoot, fearing Hornaby's temper, ordered Kelley to get his man. "Tom wants that weasel disciplined," he said. "He's a damage to the community."

KELLEY received his orders with calmness. "Well, Judge," he said after a little pause, "I'll get him, but I'd like to do it in my own way. To go after him just now gives him the inside position. He'll hear of me the minute I start and will be backed up into the corner somewhere with his gun all poised."

"Are you afraid?"

"You can call it that," the young marshal languidly replied. "I don't believe in taking fool chances. Mink is a dead shot, and probably wire-edged with whiskey, and expecting me. My plan is to wait until he's a little off his guard — then go in quick and pull him down."

To this the Judge gave reluctant consent. But when a few hours later he heard that Mink had disappeared he was indignant. "You get that devil or we'll let you out," he said, and showed a telegram from Hornaby protesting against this new outbreak of violence. "The old man's red-headed over it."

"I know it," said Kelley. "I heard from him to that effect. If the hostler dies we won't see Mink no more. If he's in town I'll get him. Good night."

CHAPTER III

A FEW days later, as he was walking up the street, half a dozen men successively spoke to him, saying, "Mink's at home loaded — and looking for you!" And each of them grinned as he said it, joyously anticipating trouble.

Without a word, other than a careless, "That so?" Kelley passed on, and a thrill of excitement ran through the hearts of the loafers.

It was about sunset of a dusty autumn afternoon and the cowboys and miners (gathered in knots along the street), having eaten their suppers, were ready to be entertained. Upon seeing Kelley approach with easy stride they passed the joyous word along. Each spectator was afraid he might miss some part of the play.

Kelley was fully aware that his official career and perhaps his life hung in the balance. To fail of arresting the desperado was to brand himself a bungler and to expose himself to the contempt of other sure-shot ruffians. However, having faced death many times in the desert and on the range, he advanced steadily, apparently undisturbed by the warnings he had received.

Just before reaching Mink's saloon he stepped into Lemont's drug store, a cheap little shop where candy and cigars and other miscellaneous goods were sold. The only person in the place was Rosa Lemont, a slim, little maid of about fifteen years of age. "Hello, Rosie," he said quietly. "I want to slip out your back door." He smiled meaningly. "The street is a trifle crowded just now."

With instant comprehension of his meaning she led the way. "Don't let them kill you," she whispered, with seared lips.

"I'll try not to," he answered lightly.

Once in the alley he swung his revolver to a handy spot on his thigh and entered the saloon abruptly from the rear.

The back room, a rude dance hall, was empty, but the door into the barroom was open, and he slipped through it like a shadow. Mink was not in sight, but the barkeeper stood rigidly on duty. "Hello, Jack," called Kelley, as he casually approached the bar. "Where's the boss?"

Before he had finished his question he detected his man reflected in the mirror behind the bar. The gambler imagined himself to be hidden behind the screen which separated the women's drinking place from the main room, and did not know that Kelley had seen him in the glass. His revolver was in his hand and malignant purpose blazed in his eyes — and yet he hesitated. Lawless as he was, it appeared that he could not instantly bring himself to the point of shooting an officer in the back.

Kelley, realizing his disadvantage, and knowing that any attempt to forestall the action of his enemy would be fatal, cheerily called out to an acquaintance who stood in a stupor of fear, farther up the bar, "Howdy, Sam! Come and have a drink." His jovial tone and apparent ignorance of danger prolonged Mink's moment of indecision. The third man thought Kelley unaware of his danger, but did not have the courage to utter a sound.

The marshal, perceiving certain death in the assassin's eyes, was about to whirl in a desperate effort to get at least one shot at him — when something happened! Someone caromed against the screen. It toppled and fell upon the gambler, disconcerting his aim. His bullet went wide, and Kelley was upon him like a tiger before he could recover control of his weapon, and they both went to the sawdust together.

NOW came a singular revelation of the essential cowardice of the desperado. Deprived of his revolver, and helpless in Kelley's great hands, he broke down. White, trembling, drooling with terror, he pleaded for his life. "Don't shoot — don't kill me!" he repeated over and over.

"I ought to kill you," argued Kelley, with a reflective hesitation which wrought his captive to a still greater frenzy of appeal.

"I beg — I beg," he whined. "Don't shoot!"

Amazed and disgusted with the man's weakness, Kelley kicked him in the ribs. "Get up," he said shortly.

Mink arose, but no sooner was he on his feet than his courage returned. "I'll have your heart for this," he said venomously. Then his mind took a sudden turn. "Who pushed that screen onto me?" he asked. "I'll kill the man who did that."

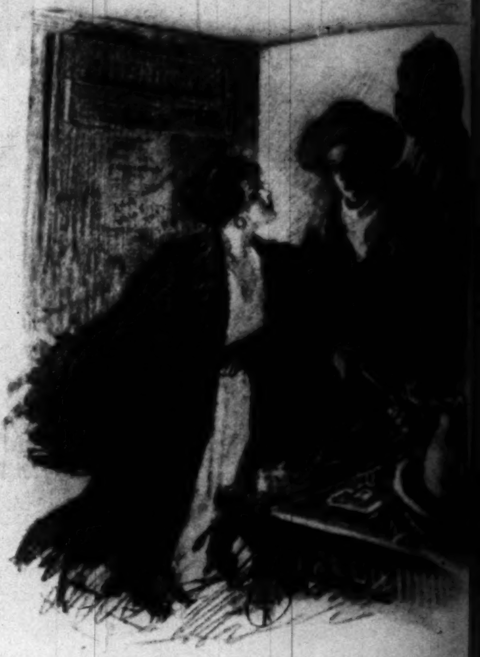
"You'll have time to figure out that problem in the quiet of 'the jug,'" said Kelley. "Come along."

At the door of the calaboose the gambler braced himself. "I won't go in there!" he declared. "I won't be jugged — I'll die right here ——"

Kelley's answer was a jerk, a twist and a sudden thrust, which landed the redoubtable boaster into the middle of his cell. "You can die inside if you want to," he said, and turned the key on him. "My responsibility ends right here."

CHAPTER IV

THE street was crowded with excited men and women as Kelley came back up the walk. One or two congratulated him on his escape from sudden death, but the majority resented him as "th bouncer" of the land boomers in the town.



"Girl, you've saved my soul from hell—you surely hav

"Who pushed that screen?" was the questio everybody asked of Kelley.

"I didn't see," he responded. "I was bu about that time."

Corrigan clubbed his gun and swung it as the yelling priests closed in LOOKING BACKWARD—Arthur Cathew, extravagant son of a millionaire father, has his allowance reduced from two thousand to two hundred a month, until he shall have honestly earned $10,000. While strolling home from his club he is shanghaied and carried aboard a tramp steamer bound from New York to San Francisco via Suez. He is put to work as a stoker and finds a staunch friend in a fellow stoker named Corrigan. Cathew, in turn, saves Corrigan's life, and they plan to desert the ship as partners in quest of a fortune in precious stones, the location of which is known to Corrigan. They reach the spot where the treasure is hidden on the island of Java.

CATHEW beheld through the glasses the ruined facade of a temple. Before this there was a clearing, and this clearing was covered with genuflecting bodies.

"Some rotten old fête, and it may hold us up for hours. We [illegible] of the back. Same way we got in before. We weren't quick enough. Never laid hands on the idol. God! I can hear his cries yet, and they were all for me to run. I found one of the horses alive, and I rode him till he dropped dead. I walked sixty-two miles. What blasted fools men are! Well, we're born that way. Always wanting to get something for nothing. We don't want to wait; we want it all at once, all in a heap. And sometimes we get it. We might as well roost here and watch the proceedings."

From time to time the slight east wind carried to them a wailing of tom-toms and a vague spicy incense. Occasionally a flicker of light appeared beyond the temple doors. Higher rose the moon; and deeper and deeper became Cathew's conviction that this was not real, only a figment of some dream, and that presently he would wake as of old, in his bedroom at home.

IT WAS fully eleven o'clock when the devotees rose and departed for the village. Still Corrigan gave no sign that he was ready to descend. All the while he was straining his ears for any unusual noises. The time passed, and Cathew began to grow restless.

"It's twelve, Corrigan," he whispered, holding his watch under a bar of moonshine.

"It's a fine thing to be young and born with fighting blood. Well, then . . . . follow me. I've shown you how to walk without crackling twigs. Remember that and keep your eye on my back. And if I go quickly, run like all hell was after you."

The silence all about was profound, that Oriental silence which seems to press against the drums of the ears and to create a wild longing to shout, to sing. Once a civet-cat dashed across their path, spitting; but he made no other sound; though for a moment Cathew could feel the jar of his padded heart. Rarely he swerved his glance from the broad back of his friend. Everything was so ghostly white that once or twice when he did turn his eyes away, things seemed instantly to dissolve; and it was only by a sudden reaching out of the hand that the illusion was destroyed.

Yet through it all he felt no fear, only a tremendous excitement. He was quite positive that Corrigan exaggerated what lay forward. That he was not afraid was not due to courage; simply fear had never been put into his heart. But it was going to be his, the kind of fear that makes a man start up in the still of the night, dripping with sweat, makes him yearn for lights and human companionship.

The détour took perhaps three-quarters of an hour. The rear of the temple was shrub- and vine-grown; it was evident that none of the natives ever went in or came out that way. Suddenly Corrigan raised his hand. For a moment Cathew understood it as a sign to fly; but immediately after he saw Corrigan stoop and vanish. He followed, taking great care that his rifle struck no stone. Corrigan drew him close and whispered in his ear.

"We'll squat here for ten minutes. If we hear no sound, take hold of my coat and lift your feet at each step."

Those ten minutes were very long to Cathew.

"Now!" whispered Corrigan.

Cathew took hold of the other's coat and walked like a cat in wet grass. Presently Corrigan touched the key of his electric-torch, and a white patch of light dartled here and there over a beautiful marble cavern. From this cavern they entered a smaller hall, full of grotesque gods; or, to be exact, one god in many grotesque poses. Corrigan stopped. The patch of light wavered and finally settled upon a central figure, draped with fresh flowers. Resting upon one of its hands was a little golden statue perhaps ten inches high, and toward this Corrigan moved without sound.

It was the work of a moment to lift it off the gilded palm upon which it stood. It is a strange but invariable fact that he who stumbles upon treasure throws caution to the winds. It had been Corrigan's plan to take the little idol and hasten back to the banyan-tree, to fly westward as if all the devils were at his heels. Instead, he set the key of the torch and squatted down upon the temple floor, pried out the inlay in the base and shook the golden idol. Into his hand tinkled eight stones, all polished, seven exquisite pigeon-blood rubies and an emerald the like of which Cathew had never seen.

"WHAT did I tell you?" whispered Corrigan hoarsely. "Off with your heel while I hold the torch. Hustle!"

Cathew worked feverishly. The heel came off, the two rubies and the emerald were packed in cotton, placed in the hollow and the heel-tap hammered on again. Then in his turn he held the torch, still possessed with the idea that all this was a dream. As Corrigan thrust his foot back into his shoe, his leg paused in midair, one hand against the sole and the other curled about the strap.

"What is it?" asked Cathew.

"Listen! What do you hear?"

Cathew put his hand to his ear. "Sounds like tom-toms. . . ".

"Then, God help us, it's the priests coming back!"

They cared not what noise they made thereafter. They ran, stumbled, fell, rose and ran again toward the hole through which they had come. Beyond, in the moonlight, they saw a dozen priests, motionless but expectant. It did not matter where they had come from or how they had selected this spot. An ordinary man would have turned and desperately made for the front of the temple. But Corrigan had been a fighting sailor. All in that bitter moment he weighed his chances. There would naturally be less men here than on the other side.

"Follow me!" he cried, leaping out. "Fight on your own. If you have a chance, take it; don't worry about me."

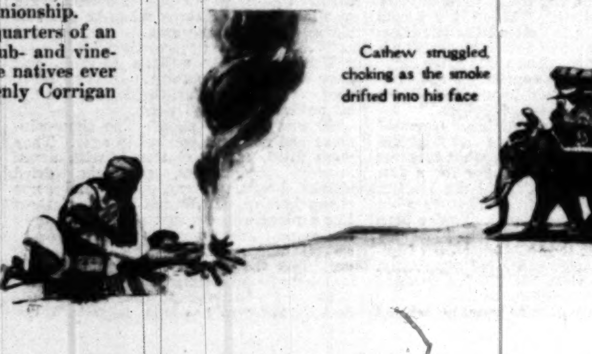
He clubbed his gun and swung it as the yelling priests closed in. Instantly the dozen became ten dozen. They came from nowhere, like kites at the smell of meat, carrion. Corrigan went down five times and five times he rose. The priests billowed over him like waves and he bore up through them like a hardy swimmer. He never had a chance to use his revolver. Once he found himself free, and he started to run; but a dozen yards marked the extent of his victory. When he went down the sixth time he staid down. Strewn about his path were eight priests as quiet and still as he was.

"Corrigan, Corrigan?" sobbed Cathew, clubbing, kicking, dodging. "Corrigan?"

He fought with a savageness that topped Corrigan's, but he possessed neither the strength nor the endurance of the brave Irishman; and by the time the tom-toms arrived, he was a prisoner. He was pushed and buffeted to the clearing on the other side of the temple, flung to the turf, bound securely and left there. He fainted; and in that fate was kind to him, for he did not witness Corrigan's end. He never knew how they had been discovered. Only the shades of other luckless adventurers, hovering over their nameless tombs, could have told him.

When he recovered his senses, pale dawn was moving across the face of the world. Brighter and brighter it grew. Suddenly the free-tops burst into flame, and slowly this flame crept downward. A flock of noisy parakeets sailed about the old pavilion. It was morning.

THE priests were moving about. They were bringing fagots for a fire. Cathew stirred a little, but only a little, as the thongs were of elephant-hide. There was not a bone in his body that did not ache. Somewhere during the melee he had been struck upon the mouth. His lips were cracked and puffed; and he could barely see out of one eye.



Cathew struggled choking as the smoke drifted into his face

Where was Corrigan? He craned his neck but could see no sign of him. . . . Torture! Now he remembered all of Corrigan's warnings, that it was far better to die than to fall into the hands of these religious fanatics. They were building the fire for him! Then it was that fear entered his heart and never left it for many a day. Still, he wriggled his toes to make sure that his shoes were still on his feet!

Later they came to him and rolled him toward the fire. Two sat upon his body while a third bound his arms at the elbows and freed his wrists. How he struggled, twisted and writhed, choking sometimes as the pungent smoke drifted into his face!

Slowly and deliberately the priest pushed the straining hands into the heart of the glowing fagots. Cathew screamed in agony. The tom-toms began to beat furiously. Here and there they chanted dolorously. In the midst of all this pow-wow came the sharp crack of a rifle. The priest holding Cathew's hands toppled over into the fire, scattering it.

"Corrigan?" murmured the victim, and sank down, down into a soundless world of utter darkness.

CHAPTER IV

DR. NORDFELDT, at the head of a botanical exploring party from Johore, with a hunting expedition as a side-issue, was very well pleased with himself. He had gathered some unusual flora which sustained his claim that Borneo and Malacca had many things in common. And he had no less than seven tiger and black panther skins. Rather fair work for three months. He traveled with five elephants, nine mules, twenty-three servants and beaters and six assistants, his personal friends. Later, the various northern botanical gardens would receive many benefits. But he had had an adventure, a most amazing adventure. He had seen what white men rarely see and still more rarely live to tell: ceremonial torture. Half a dozen shots had broken up the affair. His elephants had evidently convinced the priests that there was an army behind. One white man he had buried; the other lay at one side of the hunting-howdah, his hands in enormous white bandages. He looked like a dead man, but he was only under the influence of opiates. Sometimes a low groan issued from his swollen purple lips.

"We came just in time, Nash," said the Doctor. "In another moment his hands would have been useless forever. As it is a finger or two may be drawn. God! did you get a whiff of the air about that fire? The devils! I have heard that up here they still follow some of their abominable ancient rites. Take a Hindu and mix a little Chinese and Malay in his blood, and you'll have something that'll make a Tibetan blush for his tenderness."

Cathew opened his eyes.

"Don't stir, young man," said the Doctor. "The longer you lie quiet as the elephant-jog will let you, the quicker your hands will come about."

Cathew tried to speak.

"What? Give him a little cocoanut-milk. Now, what is it you're trying to say?"

"Corrigan," in a tone which was without inflection.

"Your friend? We buried him. He wasn't a pleasant sight to look at. But I think he was already dead when they mutilated him."

Tears welled up into Cathew's eyes and rolled down his cheeks. For now he knew that he had loved the derelict.

"Did . . . you bury him . . . with his shoes on?"

"God save us, Nash, did you hear that? With his shoes on? Just as we found him; but I don't remember whether he had any shoes on or not. Now, what in the name of Tophet were you two white men doing up here all alone? Hadn't you any foresight? Where'd you come from?"

"Perak."

"Did you have any servants?"

"No."

"Didn't they tell you at Perak that the country was pretty dangerous east?"

"We knew. My God, don't ask me any more questions! I'm in hell!"

"Here, take a little of this. I shan't talk any more to you. We'll make camp in two hours, and then you can sleep."

AND sleep twenty-four hours he did. It was the best thing in the world for him, too. The Doctor was very kind, and his treatment of the poor hands undoubtedly saved them. At the end of two months — for the Doctor refused to let his chance patient interfere with his researches — the expedition returned to Johore, where the Sultan restabled his state elephants and celebrated the occasion as befitted a Malay monarch.

During these two months Cathew kept his tongue behind his teeth. His saviors respected his silence. When his hands healed sufficiently to cast off the bandages he was given a pair of cotton gloves which he wore habitually. And night after night he slept with his shoes under his rude pillow. Often they would hear him call out in his sleep —"Corrigan, Corrigan?"

"They were after something. Gems of some sort, probably. It's a frightful thing, when you think of it, what tortures and privations men will suffer for a few dollars' worth of gems," said the Doctor.

His assistant smiled. "What they do for stones you do for plants. You've been poisoned a dozen times this trip."

"But my work is in the interests of humanity," the Doctor protested vigorously.

"A man who risks his life for a dollar does so in the interests of humanity."

"Bah!" said the Doctor, rapping out the hot bottle of his pipe and drawing out a Burma cheroot.

Cathew bade them farewell at Johore.

"Have you any money?"

"A little, perhaps three hundred rupees. You're a good man, Doctor."

"You won't tell us what it was about?"

"I'd rather not."

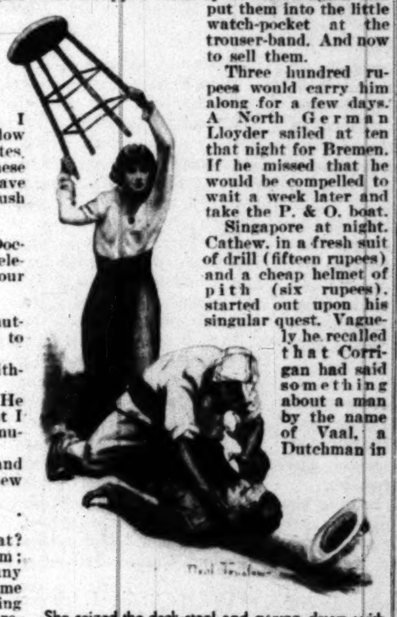
The Doctor smiled. "Be very careful of your shoes, and don't fall into the habit of talking in your sleep. Good-by."

And he left the astonished Cathew standing in the little square before the railway station. He gazed at his tattered shoes with a feeling akin to terror. It seemed impossible that the gems were still in his heel if in his sleep he had discovered the hiding-place. He knew something of humanity now: the kindest, frankest man in the world might readily change into a fiend at the thought of possessing three such gems as he carried in the hollow of his heel. And away up north, at the foot of a towering mountain, lay poor old Corrigan, a fortune packed away in his rotting shoe!

He bought a first-class ticket to Singapore — fourteen miles away — in order that he might have a compartment alone. Travel was light, and he had a first-class car all to himself. It was only on Sundays that traffic was heavy. One could go over from Singapore and find a miniature Monte Carlo in Johore. When the train was fairly out of the city, Cathew took off his shoe and wrenched loose the heel. Two rubies and an emerald; they had not been touched. Sweat trickled down the end of his nose and spattered on the gems. He wrapped them up in cotton again and put them into the little watch-pocket at the trouser-band. And now to sell them.

Three hundred rupees would carry him along for a few days. A North German Lloyder sailed at ten that night for Bremen. If he missed that he would be compelled to wait a week later and take the P. & O. boat.

Singapore at night. Cathew, in a fresh suit of drill (fifteen rupees) and a cheap helmet of pith (six rupees), started out upon his singular quest. Vaguely he recalled that Corrigan had said something about a man by the name of Vaal, a Dutchman in the pawnbroking business, who knocked you down a lot, but generally gave you something worth while. He was to be found somewhere near the Street of the Big Numbers — the haunt of unfortunates. He had to go through the Chinese quarters, and the wonder of it did not touch his interest or curiosity tonight. He was wild to start for home, home, home! He wanted to see his mother, his father, the girl he loved. He did not want anyone of them; he wanted all of them together. He had been away from home eight months, and only once had he written.



She seized the deck-stool and swung down with full strength

Through the streets, ruddy in the glare from the oil-torches, filled with swarming half-naked Chinamen selling fried fish and strange-smelling pastries, Cathew hurried. When he saw the paper-lanterns with their glaring black numbers, he hastened all the faster. From time to time a woman's voice called from the doors to him. To his ears it was like the croak of a crow. He was leaving this district when he ran full tilt into a Sikh policeman.

"Vaal," he said; "pawnshop."

The Sikh spoke a little English, and gave the direction affably. Next to being the best native soldier, the Sikh is the finest policeman in the Orient.

It was a dingy shop. The show-windows had not been washed in ages. They were filled, rather cluttered, with arms, musical instruments, golfsticks, dried sharks' heads, pottery, skins, and some cheap jewelry. It did not look to Cathew like a place where a man might dispose of fine gems. There were no lights in front; an oil hanging-lamp over the counting-deck was the sole illumination. Finally he mustered up courage enough to enter.

He saw a huge bearded man behind the deck, talking to a pretty woman. Suddenly he caught her by the arm and flung her against the rear partition. It was evident to Cathew that he had entered upon a scene of domestic infelicity. A family row, however, was nothing to him. He wanted to sell the stones and make the Prince Ludwig. It was nine o'clock.

"Is this Vaal?" he inquired.

"Ah! Coom in, coom in, sir," said the proprietor. The new drill-suit and the showy helmet suggested a purchase.

The young woman remained with her back to the partition, sullenly rubbing her bruised arm. In the swift glance, Cathew noted that she had been weeping recently, but that there was something unpleasant in the set expression of her great dark eyes. Her skin was tawny and her hair was black; but she was patently a white woman.

"Do you buy stones?" demanded Cathew. He was impatient to have done and be gone.

"Soomtimes," with sudden aloofness.

"I don't mean on the pawn-ticket basis," went on Cathew. "A lump sum outright."

"It depends."

"Come over here under the light."

The huge Dutchman and his visitor stepped under the lamp, and Cathew dug into his watch-pocket.

"What will you give me for these?"

"Ethel, hant me der glass."

The woman obeyed, but she looked with new interest at this young man who had doubtless saved her a beating.

"Where dit you get dese?"

"None of your business," answered Cathew sharply.

Vaal turned them over and over.

"I vill giff you fife-hunert rupees for dem . . . or I vill call in der police."

"Give them back. We can't do business. Those stones are mine. I've gone through hell for them."

"Yes, yes, dey all say that. Fife-hunert und no questions asked."

WILD with fury Cathew struck the man on the mouth. The gems went tinkling to the floor. Excruciating pain ran up and down Cathew's arm. The Dutchman roared and closed in. The fight was short and decisive. Cathew was borne to the floor and there he might have died but for the unexpected aid from the young woman. She seized the desk-stool, ran out from behind the counter and swung down with full strength. An ordinary man's skull would have cracked like an eggshell. Vaal rolled over and lay still, while Cathew crawled about on his hands and knees in search of his possessions. He found one ruby and the emerald. During this time the young woman had foraged about and found some ropes.

"Help me tie him."

"He may be dead."

"If there is any God he is dead. But he has a head like a gorilla. Come!"

They bound the pawnbroker and pushed him into a dark corner. Then she opened the cash-drawer, took out a roll of rupee-notes and a little chamois bag and stuffed them into her bosom. She disappeared for a moment, and Cathew renewed his search for the missing ruby, occasionally throwing a glance toward the door. When the woman returned, a straw hat was perched on her head and her mouth was full of hatpins. She could think of hatpins! Cathew stared at her in amazement.

"You are English?"

"American."

"So am I. And I'm going on the Ludwig this very night."

"The Ludwig?" he echoed dully.

She blew out the light, locked the door, and flung the key into the gutter. She seized Cathew by the hand and he followed her dumbly. There are some catastrophes so swift and undreamt of that they hypnotize us; and Cathew was hypnotized. After all those terrible weeks in the jungle, to plunge headlong into crime; robbery and perhaps murder! After awhile he found his tongue.

"What was that brute to you?"

"My husband. I have a right to the things I took. For more than a year he has beaten and kicked me. He has called me all the vile names he could lay his tongue to. If you had not come in just as you did, he would have beaten me again; and then I would have stabbed him."

"For God's sake, not so loud!"

"Was I talking loud? You saw him fling me against the wall. . . . Here are two rickshaws. Get in."

He obeyed. He would have done anything she asked, absurd or tragic. The rickshaws ran side by side. He never looked at her but straight ahead.

"Have you got any money?" she called across to him.

He shook his head, meaning that he hadn't enough to take him to Europe. A moment later she passed a roll of notes towards him. He accepted them, and they were held tightly in his poor scarred hands till they reached the Lloyd dock.

You'd Never Think It the Same Old Room—Thanks to UPSON PROCESSED BOARD

You, too, can remodel your old rooms—make them harmonious and artistic—in keeping with modern standards of beauty—by the use of Upson Processed Board.

Instead of replastering and repapering your old cracked walls and ceilings—with dirt sifting and tracking through the house—just have some carpenter or handy man nail Upson Board over the cracked and unsightly surfaces. You will be delighted with your Upsonized walls and ceilings as were 40,000 users last year.

When Upson Board is painted in soft, delicate tints or rich velvety shades, you have walls that harmonize with the most luxurious or the simplest surroundings. You can wipe off your walls just as you do your wood-work and keep them spotlessly clean and fresh.

Do not confuse standardized Upson Board, which has every good quality of other boards and five vitally important and exclusive features of its own, with spongy, absorbent imitations. Upson Board is harder, stiffer and stronger. It cuts with a smooth edge like a piece of white wood. Soft boards cut with a ragged edge, and those put together with tar or pitch, gum the saw, adding to the labor and cost of application.

Upson Board is KILN CURED which minimizes shrinkage and expansion. It is also thoroughly WATERPROOFED and SURFACE FILLED. This latter feature, alone, saves you at least $5 per room on the cost of painting because it makes unnecessary a priming coat. You should save at least another $5 per room because two coats of paint will finish Upson Board—often one—whereas ordinary boards always require two, three and often four coats in addition to priming coat.

Send the coupon today for a painted sample of Upson Board and booklet. If there is no dealer near we will make it easy for you to buy direct from us.

Vertical Farming PROVED BY Effects of Orchard Blasting with DU PONT RED CROSS FARM POWDER

These cuts are made from photos showing comparative growth of pear trees from Spring of 1913 to Aug. 1, 1914, Bellemont Orchards, Inc., Norfolk, Va.

IN DUG HOLE

IN BLASTED GROUND

ALL progressive farmers and orchardists know that trees planted in blasted ground grow much faster than those planted in the old way and bear fruit earlier.

This proves the truth of the principles of Vertical Farming, which aims to cultivate downward as well as to till the top soil.

Three years ago tree planting in blasted holes was experimental—now millions of trees are set out by the Vertical Farming method every spring and fall.

In like manner, blasting the subsoil to increase general crop yields, now regarded as experimental, will in a few years, be common.

To learn how and why Vertical Farming may double the yields of your farm, get the Free Reading Course in Vertical Farming, by Dr. G. E. Bailey, one of the best works on soils and soil culture ever published. Sent free with every request for our Farmer's Handbook No. F 488. Write now.

Blasting in the Orchard

EXPLOSIVES are commonly considered destructive rather than constructive, yet it is a fact that the greatest modern use of explosives is for constructive, productive work. In 1914 farmers, nurserymen and orchardists of the United States used approximately twenty-five thousand pounds of explosives to prepare land for cultivation and increase crop and fruit production.

One of the most striking and thoroughly established uses of explosives in agriculture is for preparing ground for tree planting, and in the treatment of old or sick fruit, shade, and ornamental trees to give them a new lease of life.

The theory of the use of explosives in connection with trees is the same, both for preparing the ground and for regenerative treatment, and that is to provide subsoil storage under and around the tree for water and to create a proper home for the root system.

A healthy tree is just as extensive below as it is above ground. Witness mountain ash and other ornamental trees planted upside down, the limbs and branches serving for roots and the roots bearing leaves and fruit. Practically all trees are reversible in this fashion. This is an important fact, and should never be lost sight of in arboriculture.

Water is the life blood of all forms of vegetation. The pant or tree does not thrive on the water, but by means of the water. Your blood is not your food, but it transports the life-giving and strength-building food elements throughout your system where each particular cell takes what it needs for its development. In the human system we must have a good circulation of blood and we must keep that blood supplied with necessary food elements obtained from the digestive system; just so a plant or tree must be provided with good circulation of water or sap, and it must obtain the necessary food elements from the soil for transportation by this water or sap to all parts of the plant or tree.

Anything which affects the health of the roots of a tree also affects the leaves, flowers and fruit. A tree has just so much growing energy and productive power. If the roots lay in soil so hard and dry that they have to fight for growth and seek in vain for food, the part of the tree above ground is going to be weakened and starved, and will produce little or no flowers or fruit.

The modern horticulturist and landscape gardener uses explosives for breaking up ground where trees are to be planted. The explosion cracks and mellows the hard impervious subsoil to a depth of five or six fe an area from ten to tw diameter. It also make tion of the actual hole for easy. Ground so shatter ized absorbs moisture

The melting snows and of running off on the orch ing the trees to die of weather are absorbed by th and held in reserve for the needs of the tree.

Further, the subsoil, blasting is usually roots, contains tons per acre plant foods—all except the blasting permits air and work into the subsoil and four-fifths nitrogen. Millio which live only in aerated the nitrogen of the air and into a form available for Hence, blasting results in ing improved conditions:

1. Ample moisture supply a level where it does not the growth of the tree in and yet takes care of it in dry
2. Greatly increased food
3. Free passage for the of foraging rootlets.

The results of this imp tion are immediate and The ordinary first year planted in the ordinary down from an average of an average of 3 per cent.

Trees planted in blasted vigorously right through the driest periods of summer.

looked up to him, and he perceived that she was born to sorrow in larger measure than she deserved. Sallow, thin, boyish, she gave promise of a kind of beauty which would sometime make her desired of both white men and brown. "Poor little mongrel!" he said to himself. "She's in for misery enough without worrying over me."

"Well, I'm up against it now," Kelley remarked to Dad Miller, Hornaby's foreman, the next time he met him. "Mink's friends have thrown a scare into the Judge and he has turned that coyote loose against me. Looks like I had one of two things to do — kill the cuss or jump the town."

"Shoot him on sight," advised Miller.

"If I do that I'm 'in bad' with the court," Kelley argued. "You see, when I took him before, I had the law on my side. Now it's just man to man — until he commits another crime. Killing me wouldn't be a crime."

"That's so," mused his friend. "You're cinched any way you look at it."

Kelley went on: "Moreover, some of my greaser friends have started a line of fool talk about making me sheriff, and that has just naturally set the whole political ring against me. They'd just as soon I got killed as not — a little sooner. I've a right to resign, haven't I? Nobody has a license to call me a coward after what I've done, have they?"

"No license; but I reckon they will, all the same," responded his friend.

Kelley's face hardened. "Well, I'll disappoint 'em. I'm going to stay with it." However, he went to the mayor and voiced his resentment of the court's action.

His honor pretended to be greatly concerned. "Now, don't quit on us, Ed. Hornaby expects you to stay put. You're the only man who can clean up the town. You've done great work already, and we appreciate it. In fact, we're raise your pay."

"Pay to a corpse don't torted Kelley. "It's a ques ing. You fellows have got hind me."

"We'll do it, Ed. Only thinks you'd better put a paper saying that you have of going into politics."

Watson E. Coleman, Patent Lawyer, Washington, D. C.

outfit I can amble clear across to Oregon," he assured himself wistfully.

As he stood with uplifted face dreaming of the mountains, Rosa Lemont came down the street, and as she passed him said in a low voice, "Mink's upon the plaza — crazy drunk — watch out!"

Kelley straightened and cast an unhurried glance around him. No one was in sight but a group of cow-punchers tying their horses in front of a saloon and a few miners seated on the edge of the walk. Nevertheless he knew the girl had good reason for her warning, and so, after walking a block or two in the opposite direction, he turned and came slowly back up the main street till he reached Lemont's doorway, where he paused apparently interested in something across the street.

Rosa came from within and with equally well simulated carelessness leaned against the door frame. "Mink's bug-house," she explained, "and got a Winchester. He's just around the corner waiting for you. He says he's going to shoot you on sight." She stammered a little with excitement, but her voice was low.

"Much obliged, Rosie," he replied feelingly. "Don't worry. — I may see him first. — And listen, while I have a chance I want to thank you for pushing that screen onto him. It was a good job."

"That's all right," she answered hastily. "But please be careful."

"Don't worry," he gravely replied. "I've beat him once and I can do it again." And after a pause he added, "I reckon you're the only one that cares what happens to me — but don't mix in this game, little one. Don't do it."

A crowd had gathered in the street with attention concentrated as if for a dog fight, and Kelley pushing his way through the circle suddenly confronted Mink who, as the object of interest, was busied in rolling a cigarette, while his Winchester leaned against a post. To this fact Kelley probably owed his life, for in the instant between the gambler's recognition and the snatching up of his rifle Kelley was able to catch and depress the muzzle of the gun before it was discharged. The bullet passed low, entering the wooden sidewalk close to his foot. "I'll take that gun," he said, and would have immediately overpowered his adversary had not several of the bystanders furiously closed in upon him. Single-handed he was forced to defend himself against these, his fellow citizens, as well as against Mink, who struggled like a wild-cat for the possession of his gun. One man seized the marshal from behind, pinioning his arms. Another hung upon his neck. A third dogged at his knees, a fourth disarmed him.

Battered, bruised, covered with blood and dirt, the marshal fought like a panther weighed down with hounds. Twice he went to earth smothered, blinded, gasping, but rose again almost miraculously still unconquered, until at last, through the sudden weakening of the men on his right arm he gained possession of the rifle, and with one furious sweep brought it down on the gambler's head. — Another circling stroke and his assailants — fell away. With blazing eyes he called out, "get back there now! Every man of you!"

Breathing hard, Kelley looked them over one by one. "You're a pretty bunch of citizens," he said with cutting contempt. "You ought to be shot — every man jack of you!" Then glancing down at the wounded gambler at his feet he added, "Some of you better take this whelp to a doctor. He needs help."

Lemont and another of Mink's friends took up the unconscious man and carried him into the drug store, and Kelley followed, with a feeling that all the town was against him, and that he must re-arm himself for a night of warfare. His revolver was gone and to replace it and to gain a breathing space he retreated to his room, his endurance all but exhausted.

He had no regret for what he had done. On the contrary, he took a savage satisfaction in having at last ended Mink, but as he hurriedly buckled on his cartridge belt, he foresaw the danger ahead of him in Mink's friends who, he knew, would get him if they could.

The patter of feet in the hall and a knock at the door startled him. "Who's there?" he demanded catching up his rifle. "It's Rosa," called a girlish voice. "Let me in."

"Are you alone?"

"Yes. Open! Quick!"

He opened the door, gun in hand. "What is it, Rosie?" he gently asked.

"They're coming!" she answered breathlessly.

"Who're coming?"

"That saloon crowd. They're almost here!"

Other footsteps sounded on the stairs. "Run away, girl," said Kelley softly. "There's going to be trouble——"

Rosie pushed him back into the room.

"No, no! Let me stay. Let me help you fight!" she pleaded.

While still he hesitated, Mrs. Mink, a short, squat woman with eyes aflame with hate, pushed through the doorway and thrust a rifle against Kelley's breast. Quick as a boxer the girl pushed the weapon from the woman's hands, and with desperate energy shoved her backward through the door, and closed it.

"Run — run!" she called.

But Kelley did not move, and something in his face turned the girl's face white. He was standing like a man hypnotized, every muscle rigid. With fallen jaw and staring eyes he looked at the weapon in his hand. At last he spoke huskily. "Girl, you've saved my soul from hell.— You surely have!" He shivered as if with cold, rubbing his hands stiffly. "Yes," he muttered "a second more and I'd a killed her — killed a woman!"

The sound of a fierce altercation came up the hall. Cautious foosteps were heard approaching, and at last a voice called out, "Hello, Kelley, you there?"

"I am — what's wanted of me?"

"It's the mayor. Let me speak with you a minute."

Kelley considered for a breath or two; his brain was sluggish. "Open the door, Rosie," he finally said and backed against the wall.

The girl obeyed, and the mayor entered, but his hands were open and raised. "Don't shoot, Ed. We're friends." He was followed by the judge and a couple of aldermen.

"It's all right, Ed," said the judge. "Mink's coming to life. Put up your gun. We don't blame you. He had no call to attack an officer like that ——"

At the word "officer" Kelley let his rifle slip with a slam to the floor and began to fumble at the badge on his coat. "That reminds me, your honor," he said at last. "Here's a little piece of tin that belongs to you — or the city."

He tossed the loosened badge to the mayor, who caught it deftly, protesting: "Oh, don't quit, Ed. You've just about won the fight. Stay with it."

A wry smile wrinkled one side of the trailer's set face. "I'm no fool, your honor. I know when I've got enough. I don't mind being shot in the back and mobbed and wallered in the dirt — that's all in the day's work — but when it comes to having women pop in on me with Winchesters I must be excused — I'm leaving for the range. I'll enjoy being neighbor to the conies for a while. This civilized life is a little too busy for me."

Rosa who had been listening understood his mood much better than the men, and with her small hands upon his arm she pleaded, "Take me with you! I hate these people — I want to go with you."

He turned a tender, pitying, almost paternal glance upon her. "No, girl, no. I can't do that. You're too young. It wouldn't be right to snarl a grown woman's life up with mine — much less a child like you." Then as if to soften the effect of his irrevocable decision he added, "Perhaps some time we'll meet again. But it's good-bye now." He put his arm about her and drew her to his side and patted her shoulder as if she were a lad — Then he turned: "Lend me a dollar, judge! I'm anxious to ride."

The judge looked troubled. "We're sorry, Ed — but if you feel that way, why — —"

"That's the way I feel," answered the trailer and his tone was conclusive.

• • • • •

Dusk was falling when, mounted on his horse, with his "stake" in his pocket, Kelley rode out of the stable into the street swarming with excited men. The opposition had regained its courage. Yells of vengeance rose — "Lynch him! Lynch the dog!" was the cry.

Reining his broncho into the middle of the road, with rifle across the pommel of his saddle, Kelley advanced upon the crowd, in the shadowy fringes of which he could see ropes swinging in the hands of Mink's drunken partisans.

"Come on, you devils!" — he called. "Throw a rope if you dare."

Awed by the sheer bravery of the challenge, the crowd slowly gave way before him.

The block seemed a mile long to Kelley, but he rode it at a walk, his horse finding his own way, until at last he reached the bridge which led to the high-line Red Mountain road. Here he paused, faced about, and sheathed his Winchester, then with a wave of his hand toward where he felt that Rosie Lemont was standing watching him, called out:

"Good-bye, girl — you're the only man in the whole town. Adios!"

And so, defeated for the first time in his life, tall Ed turned his cayuse's head to the San McGill range, with only the memory of a worshipful child-woman's face, to soften the effect of his hard experience as the Marshal of Brimstone Basin.

Once in a Blue Moon

Five minutes after they went on board, the Prince Ludwig slipped her cables.

"You go to the purser right away and buy your ticket to Naples. I'll buy mine later for Colombo. I have an uncle there. Why do you wear gloves when it is so hot?" she asked suddenly.

"I'm dizzy," was all he said.

"He hurt you?"

He nodded, and sank into the nearest steamer chair, caring not who owned it.

"I am sorry," she said, timidly touching his arm. "Perhaps I have got you into trouble when all I meant was to help you. If I hadn't hit him he would have killed you."

"What's done is done. But if he's dead, we'll never get any further than Colombo."

"I was a bit wild last night. But I'd do it all over again. Are the stones safe?"

"Good lord!" He clapped his hand to the little watch-pocket. The stones were there. And for hours he had forgotten!

"Where did you get them?"

He told her the story, rather incoherently, concluding: "Do you know anyone in Colombo who would be likely to buy the stones?"

"My uncle . . . No, no; I can't lie any more. The man is the only friend I have in the world. He is honest and kind; and he told me if ever I got into trouble, to come to him. If he can't buy them, he'll know some one who will. I might as well tell you the whole truth. I am that devil's wife; but he took me from . . . You know the street. For a little while I thought I was going to be happy. But God never forgets." She laid her head on the rail.

He patted her shoulder embarrassedly. "We'll stick it out together. I was mad enough to have killed him myself. If you need a brother, count on me."

She caught at his hand blindly and pressed it.

"That hurts yet," he said, wincing. "I feel so like an old man!"

"You are young." And there was a whole chapter of philosophy in her voice and look.

The voyage was uneventful; but when the Prince Ludwig dropped her anchor in the harbor at Colombo and the quarantine boat came out jauntily, the two outcasts drew together, oppressed with forebodings which had in perspective a stuffy Oriental courtroom and all the drab paraphernalia of a trial for murder. But God, while He never forgets, often relents; and they went ashore without let or hindrance.

Eight hours later he stepped aboard the tender. In his pocket there was an order on a New York bank for fourteen thousand dollars. Besides this he had in rupee-notes a thousand more. It was a fortune, and he had earned every dollar of it by struggle, privation, in the face of overwhelming odds.

"Good-by," he said to the woman, taking her hand.

"Good-by, and God bless you!"

The tender cast off and went chugging out to the big liner, standing like a mirage twixt the blue sky and the smooth sea. The last he saw of her was a fluttering white handkerchief. Poor thing! What a devil of a world it was.

All this was life. Persons entered into his affairs or paralleled his path for a moment, and then vanished. He thought of brave old Corrigan, wrapt in the eternal drowse, a fortune in the heel of his boot; of Mullins, of Nordfeldt, of the woman who would be good if man would let her be; down the horizon they had all gone. For real life is without continuity save in the matter of breaths and heartbeats; it is made up of episodes.

AND so the involuntary Odysseus went back to his Ithaca, home to his mother, his father, and the girl, a clear-eyed, brown-skinned vigorous young prodigal; and his Odyssey had a touch of the Homeric.

Life is also full of anti-climaxes; if you doubt it, wait a little.

Two months after Cathew's return, his father received from San Francisco (at his personal request) a fine photograph of the most recent addition to his new fleet of Oriental freighters. Of the twelve ships, eleven had Oriental names. This one, the twelfth, retained the name by which she had been launched. It was distinctly Irish. After studying the photograph for awhile, Cathew senior chuckled and drew out of a certain pigeonhole in his desk two cancelled checks. The first, for five thousand, was made out to Captain Bannerman of the Limerick; the second, for a smaller sum, was made payable to James Fall, ostensibly a water-front saloon-keeper but in reality a crimp of the first water.

And there you are!

Is Sound Sleep Every Night Worth $2.50 To You?

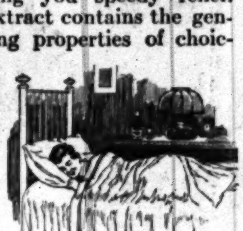
Those who sleep soundly little realize how kind Nature is to them. You who cannot obtain sleep can appreciate what a good night of rest means. Why continue to suffer the discomforts of insomnia and endanger your health permanently by neglecting your condition? It is no trifling matter.

Insufficient Sleep Weakens the System

Lack of sleep rapidly weakens the entire organism by reducing your nervous resistance and this, in turn, leaves you an easy prey to maladies of both mind and body.

If you are a victim of insomnia you would gladly part with almost any amount to have the trouble corrected—yet, you need not part with much. Two dollars and a half, the price of a dozen bottles of Pabst Extract, The "Best" Tonic, has brought relief to thousands of sufferers. It should bring you speedy relief.

Pabst Extract contains the gentle, soothing properties of choicest hops, wholesomely blended with the pure extract of rich barley malt. The lupulin of the hops has a soothing effect on the nerves. It quiets and strengthens them. In this way it "relieves the cause" of sleeplessness.



The Nerves are Soothed and Strengthened

Pabst Extract, being easily assimilated, also aids digestion—overcomes dyspeptic conditions—and this, still farther, tends to relieve the nervous affection. The entire body, and each function, is toned.
